

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

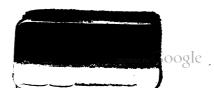

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

ensus Gootle

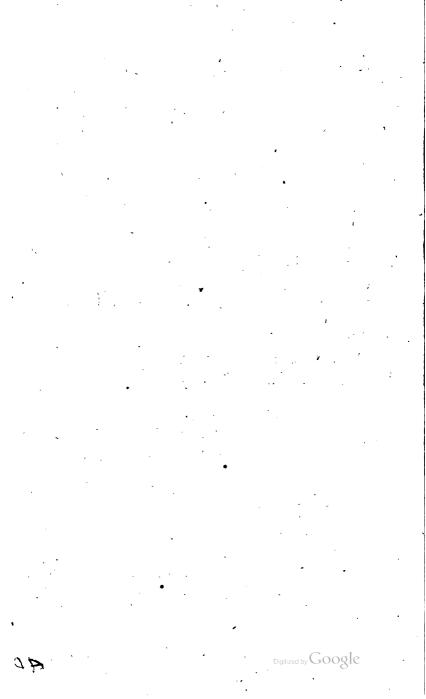

Dr. WELWOOD's

MEMOIRS.

Google

MEMOIRS

Of the Moft

Material Transactions

IN ENGLAND,

FOR

The Laft Hundred YEARS,

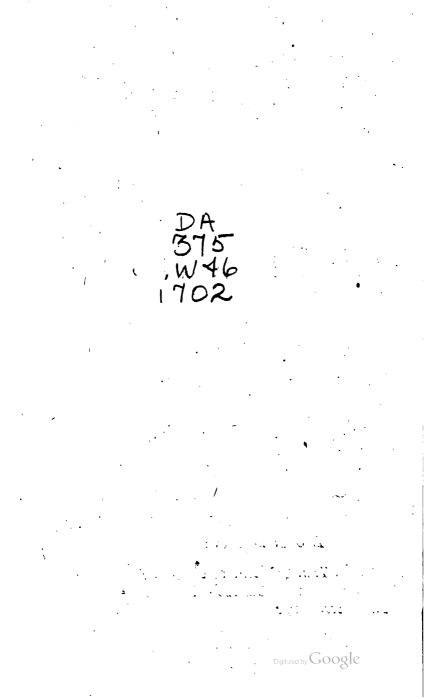

Preceding the Revolution in 1688.

By JAMES WELWOOD, M. D. Fellow of the College of Phylicians, London.

The Fourth Edition.

L O N D O N:

Printed for Tim. Goodwin, at the Queen's-Head against St. Dunstan's Church in Fleetstreet. 1702.

21-41

TO THE KING.

$ 1 R,

HE Great Patrons of Liberty have not thought it below them to become the Patrons of History: And any thing of that kind which concerns England, does naturally elaim A 2 claim the Protection of a Prince, who by his Valour and Conduct has not only Reftor'd to the English Nation that Figure they had loft in the World for near an Hundred Years past, but has rais'd them to a Greater than ever they, had before : A Prince, who in all He has done for the Common Safety of Europe, could have no Brighter Examples to follow, than those of his own Family : For when Others have Fought for Dominion and Power, vain empty Notions, and deftructive to Mankind ; It has ever been a Glory peculiar to the House of Nassau, to have Fought for LIBER TY, the Nobleft Caufe, and the Greateft Stake that Mortals can contend for.

Let some Princes pretend to Fading Lawrels, by depopulating Countries, oppressing their Neighbours, bours, and enflaving Free People; The furest and best way to transmit a Glorious Name to Posterity, is to relieve the Oppress'd, break off their Fetters, and fet the World free.

These require no varnish to set off their true Lustre; whilst those are oblig'd to make use of falle Colours to palliate the highest Injustice. Let them value themselves upon a greatness that's borrow'd from Schemes that could hardly fail, as being transmitted to them from the long Experience of the Ableft Ministers, and most Refin'd Statesmen of the Age : That Prince, who without these Helps at his first Appearance on the Stage, has by the mere Strength of his own Genius furmonnted Difficulties that would have pall'd any Courage but his own, and at length has broke all thole Measures that had of a long time time been concerting towards the enflaving of Christendom, cannot fail to make one of the Noblest and Brightest Figures in History.

A 4

If it be the Prerogative of an Almighty Power and Goodnels to fet Bounds to the Raging Sea, it must be the highest and most justifiable Imitation of it, to put a Stop to the Ambition of Men, and to schelter Nations from their Fury.

It is in this fense chiefly, that Kings may be called Gods: And it is pity that the Lives of fuch were not as Immortal as their Deeds.

The Memory of that Prince must be lasting, who, in all the Wars he has been engag'd in, and in all the Treaties that have been made to restore Peace to his Countrey, has never made any Terms for Himself; except once, when the Interest of

of Three Kingdoms, and his Own, were become one and the lame.

When succeeding Ages shall be sarce any other Coin in England but of one Stamp, they must look back with Amazement upon the Reign of a Prince whole Image it bears; and wonder how it was possible, That during the Heat of the most Expensive War that ever was, so vast a Treasure could be new minted, and at so prodigious a Loss: While at the same time they will commend and blefs a People, that with fo much cheerfulnels affifted Him with Supplies suitable to such Mighty Undertakings. They will be no less surpriz'd to find, That amidst a great many Hardships and Disappointments which could not be avoided, His Armies follow'd him with an Inviolable Fidelity, and Inimitable Courage : And will hardly

hardly believe, That it was within the Compals of Human Prudence to Cement fo many Jarring Interefts, and unite fo many Princes of different Religions into one Alliance, and to influence their firm Adherence to that Alliance, till the Glorious Conclusion of a General Peace.

ŚΙŔ,

All these Great Things were referv'd for Your MAJESTY, which will be Admir'd and Extoll'd by Posterity, no less than they are by the Present Age : And it's but reasonable that the Memory of such Actions should live for ever. The following Sheets, containing a Short View of the various Disposition of Affairs in England for a whole Century before Your MAJESTY's Happy Accession to the Crown, I humbly humbly beg Leave to Lay at Your MAJESTY's Feet, with the most profound Submission and Duty, that becomes,

4

May it please Your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most Humble,

most Faithful, and most Obedient Subject and Servant,

James Welwood.

To

Digitized by Google

To the Reader.

HESE Sheets were writ fome Years ago, by the Encouragement of One whole Memory will be ever Sacred to Posterity. It's needless to mention the occafion : And they had not been publish'd now, if a Surreptitious Copy of a Part of the Manuscript, had not crept abroad. I can hardly expect they should please in an Age like this, that is fond only of what is writ for, or against a Party : For I have trac'd Truth as near as I could, without espoufing any one Interest or Faction. I hope I may venture to Jay, That I have tread as foftly as was possible over the Graves of the Dead, and have not aggravated the Errors of the Living. As to the latter, latter, it's enough that we are deliver'd from their Power, without in/ulting over their Misfortunes; and it is unworthy of a Generous Mind, to trample upon those that are already down.

To the Reader.

Most of the Accounts I have seen of the Transactions of those Times, are partial to some one Side; which being one of the greatest Blemishes of History, I have endeavour'd to avoid: But whether I have fallen into the same Error my self, it is the Reader must be now judge. I leave Satyr and Panegyrick to others. I envy no Man the Art of making Court to the Great by Flattery, and have not Ill Nature enough for Detraction.

The Defign of these Memoirs being only to give a short Idea of the Thread of Affairs in England, for the Space of a Hundred Years, it is not to be expetted that I should have observed the Rules of a Regular History, much less any Niceness of Method, or Exactness ness in the Narration. As to the Stile, I have taken very little pains about it; and all I have aim'd at, is to be understood.

To the Reader.

In the Account I have given of the Last Reign, I would not be thought to Reflect upon the Roman-Catholicks in general, for what a Party among them is chargeable. They were chiefly the Bigots of some Religious Orders, and the New-Converts, that advis'd and carried on those violences which in the end overturn'd their Master's Throne: And it is hop'd the Roman-Catholicks have reason to be satisfied with their Condition under the present Reign, since they enjoy an unenvied Liberty of their Religion, without incurring the Hatred of their Fellow-Subjects for being in a Defign to overturn the Establish'd Church; which was their Cafe under the late King James. And as I am far from wishing them less Liberty than they have, yet cannot but regret the Hard

To the Reader.

Hard Usage which the Protestants meet with in other Countries, and with they were but as well treated there, as the Roman-Catholicks are here.

Before I have done, I beg leave to take notice of a Pamphlet that came ont last Summer, call'd Curfory Re-marks upon the Proceedings of the Last Sellion of Parliament. The Gentleman that wrote it, had not only the Honefty to publish an Answer to bis own Book, but in that Answer to infinate that I was the Author of it. All the Use I shall make of this unasual Liberty of the Prefs, is to declare, That I have not publish'd any one Paper, Pampblet, or Book, these Six Tears : And though I have but little Leifure, and yet less Inclination to appear again in Print ; yet if ever 1 alter my Refolation, and publish any thing hereafter, I will tertainly pat my Name to it; as I have done to these Memoirs. ΤHĖ

THE

CONTENTS.

HE Excellencies of the English Constitution, and the various Changes that have happen'd in it, Pag. 1 The State of England under Queen Blizabeth. Her Character. The Character of her Ministers; particularly of Walfingham, Cecil, Gr. and of the Members of the Honse of Commons in ber time. Her Conduct towards Mary Queen of Scors, I٢ King James the First's Accession to the Crown, and the Condition of England under his Reign. 19 HisCharafter. 20 The

The Charaster and Death of Prince Henry, 2 7 The Character of the Queen of Bohemia; and King James's Conduct in the Business of the Palatinate. The Fate of Sir Walter Raleigh, 28 King James's Conduct in the Interdict of Venice. 34 The Affair of Overall's Convecation; and how refented by King James, 36 His Letter to Dr. Abbot, on that Occa-28 fion, King Charles the First's Accession to the Crown; and the Condition of England at that time. 42 The Breach betwixt Archbifbop Abbot, and Billion Laud, ibid. The Rile of King Charles's Troubles; and the first and second War with the Scots, ۵6 The meeting of the Parliament, November 1640, ζ0 The Fall and Charatter of Wentworth, Earl of Strafford, 52 The tall and Character of Archbishop Laud, 59 The Famous Petition and Remonstrance of the state of the Nation; and the King's An (wer, 66 His coming to the House of Commons in Perlon, Person, to demand the Five Members; and the Consequences of it, 67 His leaving the Parliament, and the beginning of the Civil Wars; and whobegan it. The Treaty of Uxbridge, how unfuccesful; and the Marquis of Montrols's fatal Letter the Caule, The Character and Fall of King Charles the First, His Opinion of Defensive Arms in the bufine s of Rochel, 81 The Character of the Favourite Buckingham, 89 The true Caufe of the Scots coming into England, being a forg'd Letter, - ġ6 King Charles's defign before his Death to Relign the Crown : And the Army's to fet up the Duke of Gloucester, ΙģŚ His confulting the Sortes Virgiliana, 105 The Usurpation and Character of Oliver Cromwell, 107 The Reftoration of King Charles the Second, and the Manner of it; with Monk's part in it, and the Risk Monk ran in Scotland. 119 One of the true Causes of the Fall of Chancellor Clarendon, 127

bz

Digitized by Google

The

The discovery of the Popish Plot; and its Confequences, 128 The Bill of Exclusion ; the defign of it, and bow manag'd. 1.20 The Difgrace of the Dake of Monmouth; and the Consequences of it, 136 The Protestant Plot, and the effects of it, エマク The Death of King Charles the Second, and the Suspicions about the Manner of it difcufs'd, 119 His Character. 148 The Reign of King James the Second, 153 The Advantages and Examples he might have made use of 155 His Brother's and Pope Innocent XIth's Advice to him. 157 His first Speech to bis Privy Conneil, 158 His first Speech to bis Parliament, 161 His Second Memorable Speech to his Parlia-162 mint. Two Letters from a Foreign Minister to their Ambassador in England, spon the occasion of this Speech, 164 Monmouth's Invasion, and the Grounds of 165 it, Some Paffages out of Monmouth's Posket-Book. 171 Monmouth's Character. 172 His

His Letter in his Resirement, 174 King James's Speech to the Parliament wpon Monmouth's Defeat, 176 The Parliaments Address therenpon 178 The Senfe of a Foreign Minister of this last Speech, 180 The Advantes made to the Subversion of the English Constitution, 182 King James's Embaffy to Rome, and how 183 . received. The Panegyricks of King James upon that occafion. 187 The Manner how King James had been treated by another Pope, in his Marriage with the Princess of Modena, 192 King Janco grants a Toleration of Reli-196 gion, He affames a dispensing Power, 199 He fets up an Ecclefiastical Commission, 202 The Suspension of the Bifbop of London, 203 The Proceedings against Magdalen Col-206 lege, His Second Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, 211 The Affair of the Seven Bilbops, 213

The

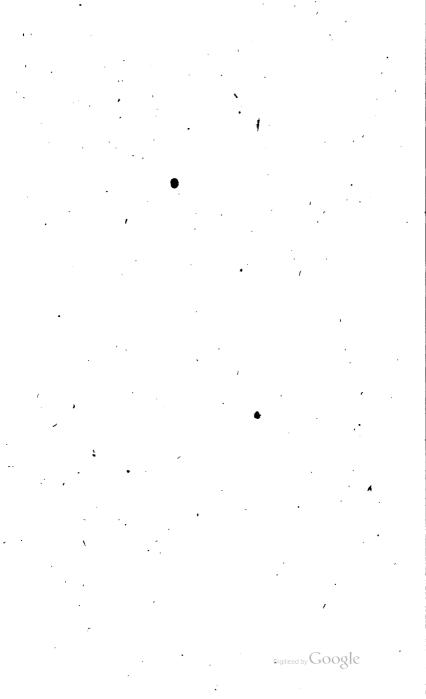

The Birth of a pretended Prince of Wales, 217 A new Parliament design'd; and to what 218 end. The Prince and Prince s of Orange's Opinion about the Penal Laws and Test ; and bow obtain'd. 22Ò The Army Modell'd. 225 The Methods as'd in Ireland; and Tyrconnel's Advancement, 227 The Regulating of the Corporations; 484 the Severities against the Protestants, 233 The Att of Assainder there. 237 The Interest that Foreign States had in England. 239 The Emperor's Letter to King James, 24 I The Interest of the Prince of Orange, 242 The bad Circumstances of the House of Orange at the Birth of the Present Prince of Orange, now King of England. 243 How he came to be Restored in Holland, 245 The Defolation of Holland in 1672, 246

Thë

The Reafons of that Defolation, 247 The Difficulty the Prince of Orange had to grapple with, 252 The Duke of Luxemburgh's Cruelties at Swammerdam, 254

M E-

Digitized by GOOGLE

MEMOIRS

Of the most Material

Transactions in England, &c.

HERE is not a Nation in Europe, that from the Constitution of its Government might have promis'd it felf a mo e firm and lasting Repose than England: And yet fcarce any Kingdom we know upon Earth hath fuffered to many and various Convultions. As if fome malevolent Planet had over-rul'd one of the beft of Human Conftitutions, and by an unaccountable Fatality had render d ineffectual all the Endeavours of our Anceftors to make themfelves and their Pofterity B happy happy under a Limited Monarchy A Monarchy, in which the Prerogative of the Prince, and the Liberty of the People are fo equally temper'd, that there feems nothing wanting, that may tend to the Happines of either.

The Excellency of the Engl:fb Confticution.

The King of England has the Glory to Rule over a Free People; and the People of England that of being fubject to a Monarch, who by the Laws of the Countrey is invefted with as much Power and Greatness as a Wife and Beneficent Prince can reasonably with for. To compleat all, the Crown of England has been for many Ages hereditary, and fix'd in one Family : The Breaches that have been fomerimes made in the immediate Line, not at all derogating from the nature of a Succeffive Monarchy, fo long as a due Respect is had to the Blood, and for the most part the next immediate Heir, except only upoh great and urgent Difficulties Emergencies. and The Crown being thus Hereditary, it might have reafonably been expected, That we fhould not only be ftrangers to the Inconveniences that arife naturally from Competitions in'Elective Kingdoms, but that it should be always the Interest of the Prince that's in possession of the Throne, ſo to to govern his People, as not to put them upon the necessity at any time to break through the Succession, and pass by the next Immediate Heir.

Digitized by Google

5

But fuch is the brittle state of human things, that notwithstanding all the Advantages and Excellencies of the English Conftitution, scarce an Age has pais'd without some remarkable Struggle, either between King and People for Prerogative and Liberty, or between Competitors for the Crown it felf.

The Glory of England was arriv'd to a high pirch in the Reign of Queen Eli- Reign of zabeth. Her People liv'd at their Ease, & Elizaand were happy under her Aufpicious Conduct ; and her oppress'd Neighbours felt the benign Influences of her great and bountiful Mind. She it was that made Head against the then Paramouni Power of Chriftendom, and that in both the Old and New Worlds: And it was in agreat measure owing to her Conduct and Fortune, that the Spaniard fell shore of the Universal Monarchy.

To draw a Picture worthy of Queen Her Cha-Blizabeth, were a Task fit only for the rafter. Greasest-Masters; fince all that ever was Great or Wife in Womankind, did contribute to make up her Character. As to her her Perfon, fhe had but little of a Regular Beauty in her Face; but that was well proportion'd, and in the main very agreeable. Her Mien and Gait were Noble; and in every thing fhe faid or did, there was fomething of Majefty that ftruck more Awe than Love : Tho when fhe had a mind, fhe could put on Charms chat few were able to refift. In her Features, Perfon, and Mien, fhe had more of Henry the Eighth, than of the Unfortunate Anna Bullen, her Mother : But they were his good, and none of his ill Qualities, which fhe deriv'd from her Father.

B 2

3

Her Youth was a continued Scene of Afflictions; but fhe was happy in that the fuffered one of the greateft, before fhe was capable of feeling the weight of it; for the was fearce Three Years old, when her Mother was facrified to the Rage and Jealoufy of her Husband. And the that had been the Year the was born, declar'd not only Heir Apparent of the Crown, but (which was out of the ordinary Road) Princefs of Wales, and that by Act of Parliament, was now by another Act declar'd Illegitimate, and excluded from the Succeffion.

Not-

Notwithstanding this strange Reverse of Fortune, particular Care was taken of her Education, efpecially by her Brother Edward the Sixth, who lov'd her above all things, and was fcarce ever pleas'd but in her Company. Before she was Seventeen Years of Age fhe underftood perfectly well the Latin, French, and Italian Tongues; and was fo far Mistress of the Greek, that she translated into Latin Two of Ifocrates's Orations; one of which I have feen of her own Handwriting, corrected by her Tutor but in Three places, whereof one is an Error only in the Orthography. She was indefatigable in the Study of Learning, especially Philosophy, History, Divinity, and Rhetorick; not forgetting both Vocal and Instrumental Musick, as far as it might become one of her Quality.

Being thus Learned, it was no wonder fhe form'd her Tongue and Pen to a pure and elegant way.of speaking and writing, and her Mind to the Noblest Notions of Philosophy, and the highest Practice of Virtue.

Her Brother dying, Queen Mary's Hereditary Aversion to her upon the account of their Mothers, broke out with all the marks of Ill-Nature and Revenge. And B 3 I kilip

Philip the Second, who provid afterwards her greatest Enemy, was the Person that preferv'd her Life; but it was upon a mere political Defign; which, however, miscarried. During all that Reign the Princefs Elizabeth was toft from one Confinement to another; being oblig d many times to fuffer Indignities far unworthy of her Birth; till at last, by the Death of Queen Mary, she was call'd from a Prison to a Throne, at the Age of Twenty five Years. Upon receit of the News of her Sister's Death, and that she her felf was proclaim'd Queen, it's faid the fell down upon her Knees, and after a thort filence broke out with these words of the Plalmist, A Domino factum est istud, & cst mirabile in oculis nostris: Which Words fhe took afterwards for her Motto in fome of her Gold Coin.

During all the time of her Reign fhe would never allow her Title to be debated or reafon'd upon, nor fo much as explain'd or vindicated. She thought it fufficient that fhe wore the Crown, and was refolv'd, and knew well how to maintain it upon her Head, without the help of Paper-Arguments. She receiv'd with Indignation a Proposition that was made to her, to have her Title afferted in Parliament:

6

MEMOLRS, ZAC.

liament : And fcorn'd to Repeal even the All which declar'd her Illegitimate, and incapable to fucceed.

Her Reign was long and glorious, being lov'd of her People, fear'd and admir'd by her Enemies, and attended with constant success in all her Enterprizes, Never Prince was better ferv'd, nor more happy in the choice of her Servants; and no. Age can inftance fuch a Set of able Ministers as she had, Her Court at home was the quiet and happy Seat of the Mules, while her Fleets and Armies abroad gather'd Lawrels every where for their Mistress and themselves.

She had to perfection the art of pleasing her Parliament; and the and they never parted in discontent, but with the highest proofs of mutual Confidence, What fort of men they were that compofed the House of Commons during her Reign, and of how different a stamp from those in that of her Successor, is belt express'd in the Words of Sir Robert Appendix, Naunton, Secretary to King James, who was a Member of Parliament in both The Cha-Reigns; which may not be improper to insert in the Appendix.

If Queen Elizabeth can be properly Parliafaid to have had Favourites, they were chiefly B4 chiefly the Earls of Leicester and Essex; but she never fail'd to humble them upon every occasion, where they prcfum'd too much upon her Favour. The One fhe recall'd with Ignominy from his Government of the United Provinces, for behaving himfelf haughtily in his Office : And at another time, upon his threatning Bower, the Usber of the Black Rod, to have him turn'd out of his Place for stopping one of his Retinue at the Queen's Bedchamber Door, she told him with a fevere Frown, accompanied with an Oath, My Lord, I had a mind to do you good, but you must not expett a Monopoly of my Favours : I have other Subjects to (how my Bounty to; and I will give and take back azain, when, and as often as I pleafe. you pretend to command here, I'll find ways to humble you. I know of no Master, but I will make you know there is a Mistress. And take cate upon your peril, that no burt be done Bower, for I'll make you answer for him. The Misfortune of the Earl of Effex every body knows. Though otherways a brave Gentleman, and endow d with excellent Qualities, yet he valued himfelf too much upon the Queen's Favour ; which together with the Contrivances of his Enemies hurried him on 1 3. to

Numb 1. p.g-261. racter of the Memhers of ment inQ. Elizateris Reign.

1 5

Digitized by Google

Neunton's Fragmenta Reguise

MEMOIRS, C.

to Courses that in the end lost him his Head.

A Monarch fupported with a Burleigh. a Walfingham, a Salisbury for the Cabinet, a Nottingham, a Drake, a Raleigh for War; with a great many others equally fit for both, could scarce fail of being great and fortunate, nor can any thing reflect more Lustre upon her Wisdom, than her choice of fuch men.

Walfingham was a Patern for all Statesmen to copy after. By his Vigilance racter of and Address he preferv'd his Mistres's Walling-Crown and Life from daily Attempts ham and Conspiracies against her; and by a refin'd piece of 'Policy defeated for a whole' Year together, the Measures Spain had taken for fitting out their Armado to Invade England.

The vaft Preparations that were making for a confiderable time in Spain, kept all Europe in fuspence, and it was not certain against whom they were defign'd; though it was the general Opinion, they were to fubdue the Netherlands all at once; which Spain was fensible could not be done without a greater Force by Sea as well as Land, than had been hitherto employ'd for that Service. Queen Elizabeth thought fit to be upon her Guard,

The Cha-Sir France

Digitized by Google

Guard, and had fome Jealoufies that the might be aim'd at; but how to find it out, was the difficulty, which at length Walfingham overcame.

He had Intelligence from Madrid, That Philip had told his Council, that he had difpatch'd an Express to Rome with a Letter writ with his own Hand to the Pope, acquainting him with the true Defign of his Preparations, and asking his Bleffing upon it; which for fome Reasons he would not yet disclose to them, till the return of the Courier. The Secret being thus lodg'd with the Pope, Walfingham by the means of a Venetian Priest retain'd at Rome as his Spy, got a Copy of the Original Letter, which was stolen out of the Pope's Cabinet by a Gentleman of the Bed-Chamber, who took the Keys out of the Pope's Pocket while he flept. How upon this Intelligence Walfingham found a way to retard the Spanish Invasion for a whole Year, by getting the Spanish Bills protested at Genoa, which thould have supplied them, with Money to carry on their Preparations, being properly a Mercantile Affair, is needless here to mention.

I fhall only give one Inftance more of Walfingham's dexterity in employing and in-

10

instructing his Spies how to get him Intelligence of the most fecret Affairs of Princes. The Court of Queen Elizabeth had reason to have an Eye upon the King of Scors, as being the next Heir to the Crown, and who they knew was courted with all possible Infinuations into the French Interest. In order to fathom King James's Intentions, there was one Wigmore fent to Scotland, who pretending to be difoblig'd in England, fled thither for Protection. Sir Francis Walfingham gives him above Ten Sheets of Paper of In-Aructions, all writ with his own Hand, which I have read in the Cotton Library, to diffinct and to digested, as a Man of far inferior parts to Wigmore could hardly fail to be a Master in his Trade. In these Papers he instructs him how to find out King James's Natural Temper; his Morals; his Religion; his Opinion of Marriage; his Inclinations to Queen Elizabeth. to France, to Spain, to the Hollanders, and in fort, to all his Neighbours. He likewife directs him how to behave himfelf towards the King, At Table; when a Hunting; upon his receiving good or bad News ; at his going to Bed ; and indeed in all the Publick and Private Scenes of his Life. Walfingbam was not mistaken in his his Man; for though there paft a conftant Correspondence betwixt them, Wigmore liv'd in the greatest Favour and Familiarity with King James for Nine or Ten years together, without the least Suspicion of his being a Spy.

Walfingham also laid the Foundation of the Civil Wars in France, and in the Low Countries, which put a final stop to the vast Designs of the House of Austria. Upon which occasion he told the Queen at his Return from his Embasly to France, That she had no reason to fear the Spaniard; for though he had a strong Appetite, and a good Digestion, he bad given him such a Bone to pick, as would take him up Twenty Years at least, and break his Teeth at last : So her Majesty had no more to do, but to throw into the Fire he had kindled, some English Fuel from time to time to keep it burning. This Great Man after all the Services he had perform'd for his Queen and Countrey, gave a remark-able Proof at his Death how far he had preferr'd the Publick Interest to his own : for he died fo poor, that his Friends were oblig'd to bury him privately in the Night, for fear his Body should be arrested for Debt. A Fault which few Statesmen fince his time have been guilty of. Such Such Ministers also for Capacity and Application, were Cecil Lord Burleigh, and his Son the Earl of Salisbury, the Inheritor of his Father's great Qualities and Places. How refin'd a Politician he was, and how throughly acquainted with the most fecret Designs of Foreign Courts, cannot be better express'd, than in the words of the fame Naunton ; to which Appendix, Numb. 2. the Reader is referr'd.

But to return to Queen Elizabeth : it appears by her whole Conduct fhe had no Inclination to Marriage, being loth to share her power with any other. It's true, she seem'd sometimes to give Ear to Propositions that were made her by feveral Princes ; but this was done either to gain time, or manage their Friendship to her own Ends. When the Parliament addrefs'd her to Marry, fhe handfomly excus'd her felf in a Pathetick Speech, concluding with this Expression ; To me, said she, it shall be a full satisfaction both for the Memorial of my Name, and for my Glory alfo, if when I shall let. my last Breath, it be engraven upon my Marble Tomb, Here lies Elizabeth, who reign'd a Virgin, and dy'd one. The whole Speech is of to Noble a Strain, that it deferves Numb 3. a place in the Appendix.

p. 264.

Appendix. p. 267. 1

She

Digitized by Google

MEMOIRS, C. -

She was very sparing of Honours ; infornuch that Sit Francis Walfingham had been employ'd in feveral Embassies and other Matters of State for many Years, before the could be prevail'd with to make him a Knight, notwithftanding it appears that he frequently ask'd it, and particulatly in a Printed Letter of his to Cecil. The Honour of Knighthood, though often profituted fince, was in fo great Efteen in her Reign, that a Gentleman of Lincolnshire having rais'd Three hundred men for her Service at Tilbury Camp upon his own Interest, told his Wife at parting, that he hop'd thereby to deferve the Queen's Favour fo far, as that the should be a Lady at his Return.

She had a particular Friendship for Henry the Fourth of France; and to her in a great measure he ow'd his Crown. She never laid any thing more to heart than his changing his Religion : And it was a long time before the could be brought to believe it. But when the receiv'd the Account of it from himself, all her Constancy failed her; and in the Agony of her Grief, fnatching up a Pen, the writ him a fliort Exposulatory Letter, worthy of her self, and of that melancholly occasion; which is related in the Appendix.

Appendix. Numb. 4 p. 270.

14

MEMOIRS, CC.

Appendix. This her Grief (fays her Hiftorian) the fought to allay by read-cambden. ing the Sacred Scriptures, and the Writings of the Fathers, and even the Books of Philosophers; translating about that time for in Amusement, Boethins de Confolatione Philosophia, into Elegant Englif.

The only Action that feems to reflect The Affair upon her Memory, was the Death of of Merr Mary Queen of Scots. There had been stuart, Q. an Emulation betwixt them of a long franding, occasioned at first by the latter's alluming the Arms and Title of Queen of England; which it's no wonder Queen Elizabeth highly refented. A great many other Accidents did contribute to alignate their Affections. But when it fell out that every day produc'd fome new Confpiracy against the Life of Queen Elizabeth, and that in most of them the Queen of Scots was concern'd cither as a Party, or the Occasion ; Queen Elizabeth was put upon a fatal Necessiry of either taking off the Queen of Scots, or expoling her own Perion to the fre-quent Attempts of her Enemics. With what Reluctancy Queen Elizabeth was brought to confent to her Death, and how the was deceived at last in Signing the the Warrant for her Execution, by the over-diligence of her Secretary and Privy-Council, her Celebrated Hiftorian has given us a very full and impartial Account.

Digitized by Google

MEMOIRS, Cr.

Yet Queen Elizabeth is not altogether excufable in this matter; for Queen Mary came into England upon a Promife made her long before. Queen Elizabeth fent her once a Ring, and at the fame time a Message, that if at any time she wanted her Protection, she might be affured of it; and the Token betwixt them was Queen Mary's fending her back the fame Ring. That Unfortunate Princefs feeing her Affairs desperate in Scotland, difpatch'd a Letter to Queen Elizabeth with the Ring, to put her in mind of her Promise; but without waiting for an Answer, she came into England the very next day. They were both to be pitied, the one for her Sufferings, and the other for being the Caufe of them : And I have feen feveral Letters in the Cotton Library, of Queen Mary's Hand, to Queen Elizabeth, writ in the most moving Strain that could be; most of them in French, being the Language she did generally write in. There was one particularly, wherein the tells her, That her long Imprisonment

Cambden.

.22

MEMOIRS, GT.

E7

Digitized by Google

ment had brought her to a Dropfical Swelling in her Legs, and other Difeases that for the Honour of her Sex she forbears to commit to Paper. And concludes thus, Tour most Affectionate Sister and Cousin, and the most miserable Princess that ever wore a Grown. When such Letters as these had no influence upon Queen Elizabeth, it may reasonably be concluded, That nothing but Self-prefervation could oblige her to carry her Resentments so far as she did.

To fum up the Character of this Renowned Queen in a few words: She found the Kingdom at her coming to the Throne, in a most afflicted condition, embroil don the one fide with a Scotch, and on the other with a French War; the Crown overcharg'd with her Father's and Brother's Debts; its Treasure exhausted; the People distracted with different Opinions in Religigion ; her felf without Friends, with a controverted Title, and strengthn'd with no Alliquice abroad. After one of the longest Reigns that ever was, she died in Peace, leaving ber Country Potent at Sea, and Rich in People and Trade, her Father's and her Brother's Debts paid; the Crown without any Incumbrance; a great Treasure in the Exchequer; the Coin brought to atrut true Standard; Religion fettled toon a regular and lasting Basis; her self having been admir'd and fear'd by all her Neighbouring Princes, and her Friendship-courted by Monarchs that had scarce ever before any further knowledge of Eogland, but the Name. So that her Successfor had good reason to say of her, That she was one who in Wisdom and Felicity of Government surpass'd all Princes fince the days of Auguftus.

> After all, To the Reproach of those she had made great and happy, she was but ill attended in her last Sickness; and near her Death, forsaken by all but three or four Persons; every body making haste to adore the Rising Sun.

> With Queen Elizabeth dy'd in a great part the Glory and Fortune of the English Nation; and the fucceeding Reigns ferv d only to render hers the more Illustrious. As she was far from invading the Liberties of her Subjects; fo she was careful to maintain and preferve her own just Prerogatives; nor did ever any Prince that fat upon the English Throne carry the true and effential parts of Royalty further: But at the same time the whole Conduct of her Life plac d her beyond the Suspicion of ever having fought Great.

MEMOIRS, CC.

Greatness, for any other end, than to make her People share with her in it.

Ir was not fo with the Prince that fuc. The ceeded her. He was the more fond of K. Jamer, Prerogative, because he had been kept fhort of it in his Native Country. grasp'd at an Immoderate Power, but with an ill Grace; and if we believe the Historians of that time, with a design to make his People little. If fo, he had his Wish ; for from his first Accession to the Crown, the Reputation of England began fenfibly to fink; and Two Kingdoms which, difunited, had made each of them apart a confiderable Figure in the World, now when united under one King, fell short of the Reputation which the least of them had in former Ages.

The latter Years of King James fill'd our Annals with little elfe but Misfortunes at home and abroad. The Lois of the Palatinate, and the Ruin of the Prov testants in Bohemia through his Negligence; the Trick that was put upon him by the House of Anstria in the business of the Spanish Match; and the continued Struggle betwixt him and his Parliament about Redrefs of Grievances, were things that help'd on to lessen his Credit abroad, C 2 hne and imbitter the Minds of his Subjects at home.

7 Amess

Repenting of the unlucky Measures too late, King James went off the Stage not much lamented; and left in Legacy to his Son, a discontented People; an unnecellary, expensive War; an incumbred Revenue, and an exhaufted Treasury; together with the Charge of his Grandchildren by the Queen of Bohemia, that were now divested of a large Patrimony, deriv'd to them by a long Series of Illufrious Anceftors. In fine, he entail'd upon his Son all the Miseries that befel him; and left in the minds of his Subjects those Sparks of Discontent, that broke out some Years after into a Flame of Civil War, which ended in the Ruin of King Charles, and of the Monarchy with him?

His Chazacler.

This Prince, though his Father and Mother were effected the Handfomeft, Couple of the Age they livid in, was himfelf but a Homely Perfon, nor in any of his Features was to be found the leaft Refemblance of the Beautiful Mary Stuart, or Lord Darnly. No Prince had a more Liberal Education: And it could not well be otherwife, having the Celebrated Buchanan for his Tutor. He was accquainted acquainted with most parts of Learning, but valued himself upon his Knowledge in Divinity above the rest; in which he writ some things that that were much esteem'd at that time. He writ and spoke well but in a Stile that border'd too much upon Pedantry, which was indeed the common Fault of that Age.

Digitized by Google

MEMOIRS, GC.

As to his Religion, notwithftanding all his Advances to the Pope and Papifts upon the account, first of the Spanish, and afterwards the French Match, he was really Calvinist in most Points, but that of Church-Government, witness fome of his Books, and his Zeal for the Synod of Dort. But as to Episcopacy, he shew d fo much Learning and Reading in his Arguments for it at the Conference of Hampton Court, that Archbishop Whitgift faid, He was verily persuaded the King spake by the Spirit of God.

Notwithstanding his Mother was dethron'd to make room for him, and confequently he could have no Right, but the Confent of the People while she liv'd; yet upon all occasions he was fond of being thought to have a Divine Right to the Crown. His Courage was much such fuspected; and some would ascribe his want of it to the Fright his Mother was C 3 in in upon the Death of her Favourite David Rizio. The Troubles of his Youth were various, occasion'd chiefly by Factions of Great Men that strove who should have the Management of him: But when he came of Age, he fought all occasions to be reveng'd upon such of them as were living, and the Posterity of those that were dead. Goury's Conspiracy being in its fells to improbable a thing, and attended with so many inconsistent Circumstances, was disbeliev'd at the time it was faid to have been attempted : And Posterity has swallow'd down for a Truth, what their Ancestors took for a mere Fiction.

He came to the Crown of England by Lineal Descent, and the Verbal Designation of Queen Elizabeth upon her Deathbed. And the Confpiracy wherewith Cobham and Sir Walter Raleigh were charged to fet him by the English Throne, was no lefs Mystery than that of Goury's The only uncontrohad been before. verted Treason that happen'd in his The Gun- Reign, was the Gun-Powder Plot; and genderPier. yet the Letter to the Lord Monteagle, that pretended to discover it, was but a Contrivance of his own; the thing being difcover'd to him before, by Henry the Fourth of France, through the means of of Monheur de Rhony, after Duke of Sully. King Henry paid dear for his Friendship to King James; and there is reason to believe that it was upon this account, among others, that a Party of the Church of Rome employ'd Ravillack to murther that Great Man.

22

King James was equally happy and The Chu-racter of unhappy in every one of his Children. Prince Prince Henry was the Darling of Man-Henry. kind, and a Youth of vast Hopes, and wonderful Virtues; but was too foon Man, to be long-livd. The Duke of Sully being in England to congratulate King James upon his Accession to the Crown, laid the Foundation of a strict Friendship betwixt his Master and Prince Henry ; which was afterwards carried on by Letters and Meffages, till the Death of that King. Though it's a Secret to this day what was the real Defign of all those wast Preparations that were, made by Henry the Fourth for fome time before his Death, yet certain it is, those Preparations were fuch as kept all Europe in sufpense: And I have seen some Papers that make it more than probable, that Prince Henry was not only acquainted with the Secret, but was engagd in the Defign. But whatever it was, it provid C 4 abortive, abortive, by the Murther of that Excellent King just at the time when it was to have been declar'd, his Army being ready to march. Prince Henry furviv'd him but two Years, and dy'd univerfally lamented. The World is very often willing to attribute the Untimely Death of Princes to unfair Practices; and it was the general Rumour at that time, that this Prince was poilon d. Whatever was in it, there is yet in print a Sermon preach'd at St. James's upon the Diffolution of his Family, that boldly infinuated fome fuch thing : And alfo Sir Francis Bacon, Lord Chancellor of England, in his Speech at the Trial of the Earl of Somerset, had some Reflections upon the Intimacy of that Lord with Sir Thomas Overbury which feems to point that way ; infomuch that there were feveral Expresfions left out of the printed Copy, that were in the Speech. But after all, there is an account in print of what was obfervable upon the Opening of Prince Henry's Body, under the Hand of Sir Theodore Mayerne, and Five other Physicians, from which there can be no Inference drawn, that he was poyfon'd.

Anpindix. Numb 5. Fag. 272.

The

MENO'IRS, Crc.

The Second of King James's Children Of the Q. was the Princess Elizabeth, married to of Bohemia. the Elector Palatine, who was afterwards to his Ruin elected King of Bohemia. It is hard to fay whether the Virtues of this Lady, or her Misfortunes were greater: For as the was one of the best of Women, the may be likewife reckon'd in the number of the most unfortunate. King James thought to retrieve his Son-in-law's loft Fortune by the way of Treaty; but in that, and in every thing elfe, the Houfe of Austria outwitted him; so that the poor Prince Palatine gain'd nothing by his Alliance with England, but the hard Fate to be abandon'd by those whose Honour and Intereft it was to support him. Nor had the Crown of England any share in the Honour of re-establishing the Palatine Family, which happen'd Thirty Years after; for at the time of the Treaty of Munster, when that matter was setled, King Charles the First was fo far from being in a condition to mediate for his Friends, that he was himfelf a Prifoner to those very Enemies, that in a few Months after the figning of that Treaty, rook his Life. Of whom, being the Youngest of King James's Children, and of his Misfortunes, there will be too much much occasion to speak in the following Sheets.

25

But to return to King James; as he was equally happy and unhappy in his Children, he was for the most part unhappy in his Favourites; being oblig'd to abandon one upon the account of Overbury's Murther; and coming to hate another the latter part of his Life as much as he had ever lov'd him before.

The Spanifb Match.

In order to obtain of the Emperor the Restoration of his Son-in-Law, he was wheedled into that Inglorious Counfel of fending the Prince into Spain for a Match that was either never defign'd him, or too late: And it was more owing to Philip the Third's Generofity, than to King James's Politicks, that he ever faw Eng-To this Friendship with land again. Spain he facrific'd his own Honour, with the Life of that Excellent Person, Sir Walter Raleigh. This Gentleman, after Fourteen Years Imprisonment in the Tower, upon the account of a Mysterious Treafon, during which time he did oblige the World with one of the best Histories. that ever was writ, came to be fet at liberty, and was fent with an ample Commission, which was judged by Lawyers equivalent to a Pardon, to discover and take take policilion of new Countries, and Mines in America. He gave King James the Plan of his Defign, and of the Place he was to land at; which prov'd the Ruin of that Enterprize ; for before he could get ready to fail from England, the Court of Spain had a Copy of it; which Sir Walter Releigh found to his fad Experience was got to America before him, and had thereby enabled the Spaniards to baffle the Attempt. At his return, to please the Spanifs Ambaslador, who had got a mighty Afcendant over King James, this last of Queen Elizabeth's Favourites lost his Head upon the former Sentence of Treason, there being no other way to reach ir.

24

1 .

MEMOIRS, C.

All our Histories have mention'd at K. James's large the Business of the Spanish Match; Condust but few, or none, King James's Conduct fines of in that of the Palatinate; which can the Palatin hardly be express'd under a fofter name nate. than one continued Infutuation on his part. The Account of this Matter is writ with the greatest Exactness, though as favourably for King James as was possible, by the Learned Spanhemius in his History of Lonyse Juliane Electrice Palatine, Daughter of William Prince of Orange, and Mother to the King of Bobemia, who outliv'd liv'd her Son, and was one of the greatest Paterns of Virtue that any Age has produc'd. Referring the Reader to the Book it felf, I shall only mention a few Things out of it.

Мемоікs, *G*с.

To make this Book and the matter of the Palatinate better underftood, it's to be remembred, That the Elector after his Marriage with King James's Daughter, was elected King of Bohemia, as the most powerful Prince, at that time, of the Empire, to oppose the House of Austria, and protect the Liberty of that Kingdom. He was fearce Crown'd, but he lost both his New Kingdom, and his Ancient Inheritance of the Palatinate, by the Battel of Prague, where his Army was entirely defeated, and he himself forc'd to fly, leaving Bohemia and the Palatinate both, a Prey to the Emperor.

Though the Parliament of England was zealous to reftore the Palatine Family by Force of Arms, as the most effectual means to do it, and had offer'd great Supplies to that purpose; yet King James was so lull'd asleep with the Infinuations of Gundamar, the Spanish Ambassador, that he could be brought to no other Methods but those of Treaty. While he was fending one Embassy after anoanother to Vienna and Bruffels, the poor King of Bohemia feeing how little was to be expected from them, ventur'd to try his Fortune once more in the Palatinate ; and with the Affiftance of Count Mansfield and the Duke of Brunswick, beat the Imperialists in several Rencounters, and reposses'd himself of several Towns. But when he was in a fair way to be Master of the Whole, he was obliged to retire, and disband his Army, merely to please King James, who was possess'd of this wild Notion, That to lay down his Arms, was the only way to get good Terms from the Emperor. , Upon which a Treaty was fet a-foot at Bruffels, where King James confented by way of Preliminary, That his Son-in-Law fhould not only wave the Title of the King of Bohemia, but that of Elector Palatine, which had not hitherto been question'd, and which the poor Prince was forc'd to comply with.

Digitized by Google

MEMOIRS, GC.

This Treaty, after a great many other Mortifications put upon the Palatine Family, and upon K. James himfelf, was by a Contrivance of the Emperor transferr'd to Ratisbon, and came to nothing at laft, as all the other Treaties had done. But while the Imperialifts were thus amufing King

King James with Terms of Accommoda-tion, and that the King of Bohemia had disarm'd himself to please his Father-in-Law, Heidleburgh, and all the other places he had recover'd before, together with the reft of the Palatinate, were all feiz'd by the Emperor, except only Frankendale, which continued to make a vigo-It would look like a rous Reliftance. Dream, to imagine that King James fhould oblige his Son-in-Law to quit this place alfo, the only one left him of his whole Country, and that as the only effectual way to get back all the reft : Yet it's true he did to, and that at the very time that the Emperor had actually transferr'd the Electoral Dignity from the Palatine Family to the House of Bavaria.

The bulinefs of Frankendale. For Frankendale being a Town then of great Strength, and the Spaniards lying exposed to the daily Excursions of its Garison, they found a way to trick King James out of it in this manner. Gundomar represents to him, That it being the only place left in the Palatinate, it could not hold out much longer; and that there was but one way to fave it for his Son-in-Law, which was, To put it into the hands of the Governor of Flanders for fome time, till things might be brought to an Accomodation by the Treaty then on foot; and if there should happen any Interruption in it, then the Town should be render'd back to King James, for the use of his Son-in-Law, in the fame Condition, together with a free Passage for Fifteen hundred Foot, and Two hundred Horse, to take possession of it, and Six Months Provision.

MEMOIRS, OC.

King James being willing to do any Thing, rather than break with Spain, agreed to this ftrange Proposition, and Frankendale was deliver'd up to the Governor of Flanders for Fifteen Months, under these Conditions. But the Treaty being once more broke off, and the rime elaps'd, when King James demanded that Frankendale should be restord, it was told him, That he might have the Town, but by the Terms of the Agreement he was to have a Paffage for his Troops through the Spanish Low-Countries ; but that there was no Article, That he should have a Passage through any other Places that were in their possession in Germany. And thus King James was once more egregiously impos'd upon; for there was no way to come at the Town, but through Parts of Germany that were in the hands of Spain; and fo the Spaniards niards continued Masters of Frankendale.

When feveral other Princes were some time after upon entring into a League for Reflitution of the Palatinate, and the House of Austria was beginning to doubt the Success, Gundomar play'd another Engine to break their Measures, by propofing a Match with the Infanta of Spain, for the Prince of Wales, as the easiest and furest way to reflore the Palatine F2= mily: which like all the rest, was only to amuse King James, and was equally unsuccessful.

It were too long to give the Detail of King James's Conduct in this Affair, which was all of a Piece. The Author fums up the ills that attended it, in this, That thereby the Protestant Religion was entirely, rooted out of Bohemia, the Eletoral Dignity transferr'd from the Palatine Family, the Palatinate it felf lost, the Liberty of Germany overthrown; and which he mentions with a fensible Regret, the famous Library of Heidelburgh was carried to Rome, to the irreparable Prejudice of Learning.

So that Gundamar had good reason to fay, in one of his Letters to the Duke of Lerma, printed im the History of that Duke's Duke's Life, That he had half d King James so fast asleep, that he hop'd neither the Cries of his Daughter nor her Children, nor the repeated Sollicitations of his Parliament and Subjects in their behalf, should be able to awaken him.

There are two Passages more very obfervable in this Author. The Court of Spain finding King James had broke off the Spanish Match, and was brought to fee how egregiously he had been abus d in it; they ventur'd upon a bold Attempt to trouble his Affairs, by whilpering in his Ears fome things to make him jealous of his Son : And that a good while after, when King Charles and his Parliament were entring upon vigorous Measures to espouse the Palatine Cause, they found ways to fow Divisions between him and his People, that in progress of time broke out into a Civil War. The latter needs no Commentary; and the former is fufficiently explain'd, by what a late Author has writ in the Life of Bishop Williams. concerning that Prelate's being inftru- Hether's Life of 8, mental in making up fome fecret differences betwixt King James and his Son the Prince of Wales, a little before King James s Death. Spanhemius fums up what relates to this Affair, with this Remark, That

Digitized by Google

That never Prince was more oblig'd to a Sifter, than King Charles the First was to the Queen of Bohemia; fince it was only the confideration of her and her Children, who were then the next Heirs after him to the Crown of England, that prevail'd with the Court of Spain to permit him to fee England again.

In the Interdict of Venice.

As in most Foreign Transactions King James was unhappy ; fo more particularly in the difference between Pope Paul V. and the Venetians. There appear'd at that time a wonderful Disposition in that State to work a Reformation in the Church, and throw off the Papal Yoke. In order to advance it, King James difpatch'd Sir Henry Wotton his Ambaslador to Venice; and hearing that Spain had declar'd for the Pope, he declar d for the Venetians; and acquainted Justiniani, their Ambassador in England, That he would not only assist Them with all the Forces of his Kingdom, but engage all his Allies in their Defence. At Sir Henry Wotton's Arrival, the Breach between the Pope and the Republick was brought very near a Crifis; fo that a total Separation was expected not only from the Court, but the Church of Rome ; which was fet on by the Learned Padre Paulo, and

Мемоікs, *С*с.

and the Seven Divines of the State, with much Zeal, and conducted with as great Prudence. The Ambassador at his Audience offer'd all possible Affistance in his Master's Name, and accus'd the Pope and Papacy of being the chief Authors of all the Mischiefs in Christendom. This was received with great Deference and Refpect to King James: And when the Pope's Nuncio objected, That King James was not a Catholick, and fo was not to be reli'd upon; the Doge took him up briskly, and told him, That the King of England believ d in Jesus Christ, but he did not know in whom some others believ'd.

King James had fent with Wotton his Premonition to all Christian Princes and States, translated into Latin, to be prefented to the Senate; which Padre Paulo and the other Divines prefs'd might be done at his first Audience; telling him, they were confident it would have a very good effect. The Ambassador could not be prevail'd with ; alledging he had positive Orders to wait till St. James's Day, which was not far off. This Conceit of prefenting K. James's Book on St. James's Day, spoil'd all ; for before that day came, the Difference was made up, and that, D 2 haphappy Opportunity lost. So that when he had his Audience on St. James's Day, and had prefented the Book, all the Aniwer he got, was, That they thank d the King of England for his good will, but they were now reconcil d to the Pope, and that therefore they were refolv'd not to admit of any Change in their Religion, according to their Agreement with the Court of Rome. How little Reputation he acquir'd in the Matter of the Venetian Interdict, appears yet more plainly in this, That in all the numerous Collections we have of Letters that pass'd on that Subject between the Cardinals of Joyeuse and Perron, the Marquis de Fresnes and Henry IV. there is not the least notice taken of King James or his Embasly.

35

It may not be impertinent in this place, to fay fomething of that Convocation that was held in the beginning of this King's Reign; Which had never been taken notice of in Hiftory, if it were not for the use that was made of it in our late Debates about the Lawfulness of the Oaths to his present Majesty. This Convocation goes under the name of Overal's Convocation, and has been of late years often mentioned in Print upon that account.

Digitized by Google

Мемоікs, trc.

And fince a very Learned Drvine has told Dr. sher-us upon a folemn Occasion, That it was beek. the Canons of this Convocation that first Enlightned his Eyes, and perfuaded him of the Lawfulness of the Oaths to his Majefty, I shall only take notices of a few things about them.

It's very probable, that this Convocation was call'd, to clear fome Doubts that King James might have had, about the Lawfulnefs of the Hollanders their throwing off the Monarchy of Spain, and their withdrawing, for good and -all, their Allegiance to that Crown : Which was the Great Matter then in Agitation in most Courts of Christendom.

It appears plainly by fome of those Canons, that the High-flown Notions of Prerogative and Absolute Obedience, which came afterwards into fashion, were not much known at that time: At least, the Clergy were not of that Opinion. It's true, This was the first time that the Distinction of a King de jure and de facto, was ever mention d as a Point of Divinity, or a Doctrine of the Church; though it had been taken notice of before, and that but once, as a Matter of Law, in an Act . of Parliament of Henry 7. But these Canons did never receive the Royal Ap- D_2 probation, probation, and therefore are in the fame cafe as if they had never been.

King James thought these Points too nice to be much touch'd upon, and was highly displeas'd with the Members of that Convocation for medling in Matters which he thought were without their Sphere. Thereupon he writ that angry Letter to Dr. Abbot (afterwards Bishop of Sarum), the original of which it was my fortune to fall upon, and to publish upon another Occasion. It's hop'd the Reader will not be displeas'd to read it agains And it runs thus.

Good Doctor Abbot,

I Cannot abstain to give you my Judgment of your Proceedings in your Convocation, as you call it; and both as Rex in iolio, and unus Gregis in Ecclessa, I am doubly concerned. My Title to the Crown no body calls in question, but they that neither love you nor me; and you guess whom I mean. All that you and your Brethren have said of a King in Possession (for that Word I tell you, is no worse than that you make use of in your Canon) concerns not me at all; I am the next Heir, and the Crown is mine by

MEMOIRS, Or.

by all Rights you can name, but that of Conquest; and Mr: Solicitor bas sufficiently express'd my own Thoughts concerning the Nature of Kingsbip in general, and concerning the nature of it, ut in mea persona: And I believe you were all of his Opinion : At least, none of you faid ought contrary to it, at the time he spake to you from me. But you know all of you, as I think, that my Reason of calling you together, was to give your Judgments how far a Christian and a Protestant King may concur to affift his Neighbours to Thake off their Obedience to their once Sovereign, upon the account of Oppresfion, Tyranny, or what elfe you like to name it. In the late Queen's time this Kingdom was very free in affifting the Hollanders both with Arms and Advice. And none of your Coat ever told me, that any scrupled about it in her Reign. Upon my coming to England, you may know that it came from some of your selves to raise Scruples about this Matter. And albeit I have often told my Mind concerning Jus Regium in Subditos, as in May Tast in the Star Chamber, upon the occasion of Hales his Pamphlet; yet I never took any notice of these Scruples, till the Affairs of Spain and Holland forc'd me to it. All my Neighbours call on me to concur in the Treaty between Holland D 4 and and Spain; and the Honour of the Nation will not suffer the Hollanders to be abandoned, especially after so much Mo-ney and Men spent in their Quarrel: Therefore I was of the Mind to call my Clergy together, to satisfy not so much me, as the World about us, of the Justness of my owning the Hollanders at this time : This I needed not have done; and you have forced me to fay, I wild I had not. Iou have dipped too deep in what all Kings reserve among the Arcana Imperii. And whatever Aversion you may profess against God's being the Author of Sin, you have stumbled upon the Threshold of that Opinion, in faying upon the Matter, that even Tyranny is God's Authority, and should be reverenc'd as such. If the King of Spain fhould return to claim his old Pontifical Right to my Kingdom, you leave me to feek for others to fight for it : For you tell us upon the matter beforehand, his Authority is Gods Authority, if he prevail.

Thus far the Secretary's Hand as Itake it; the Reft follows in the King's cwn Hand thus: Mr. Doctor, I have no time to express my Mind farther in this thorny bufiness. I shall give you my Orders about it by by Mr. Solicitor; and until then meddle no more in it, for they are Edge-Tools, or rather like that Weapon, that's faid to cut with the one edge, and cure with the other. I commit you to God's Protection, good Doctor Abbot, and reft,

Your good Friend,

James R.

To have done with King James; it was faid, that he divided his time betwixt his Standish, his Bottle, and his Hunting. The last had his fair weather, the two former his dull and cloudy; and therefore that it was no wonder his Writings were fo variable ; and that after he had pleaded for Witchcraft, and the Pope's being Antichrift, Somerfet's Affair and the Spanish Match cur'd him of both. After having enjoy'd for the most part of his Life a firm Health he died of a Quartan Ague, in the Fifty ninth Year of his Age, and with fuch fufpicious Circumstances, as gave occasion of Enquiry into the manner of his Death, in the two first Parliaments that were call d by his Son; all which came to nothing, by reason of rheir sudden Dissolutions.

King

TheReign of King Charles I. King Charles the First came to the Crown under all the Difadvantages that have been mention d; and yet the Nation might have hop'd that their Condition would be mended under a Prince of fo much virtue, as indeed he was, if the Seeds of Difcontent, which were fown in his Father's time, had not every day taken deeper Root, and acquir'd new Growth, through the Ill Managment of his Ministers, rather than any wilful Errors of his own.

Bp. Loud.

Some of them drove fo fast, that it was no wonder the Wheels and Chariot broke: And it was in great part to the indiferent Zeal of a Mitred Head, that had got an Ascendant over his Master's Conscience and Councils, that both the Monarchy and Hierarchy ow'd asterwards their Fall.

The Divifion betwixt Archbifhop Abbot and Bifhop Lasd.

To trace this matter a little higher; there arofe in the preceeding Reign two opposite Parties in the Church, which became now more than ever exasperated against each other; the one headed by Archbischop Abbot, and the other by Bischop Laud. Abbot was a Person of wonderful Temper and Moderation; and in all his Conduct shew'd an unwillingness to stretch the Act of Uniformity beyond what what was absolutely necessary for the Peace of the Church, or the Prerogative of the Crown, any further than conduc d to the good of the State. Being not well turn'd for a Court, though otherwife of confiderable Learning, and Gentile Education, he either could not, or would not ftoop to the Humour of the Times : and now and then by an unfeafonable Stiffness, gave occasion to his Enemies to represent him as not well inclin d to the Prerogative, or too much addicted to a Popular. Interest, and therefore not fit to be employ'd in Matters of Government. Upon the other hand, Bishop Land, as he was a Man of greater Learning, and yet greater Ambition and Natural Parts, fo he understood nicely the Art of pleafing a Court; and finding no furer way to raife himfelf to the first Dignities of the Church, than by acting a quite contrary part to that of Archbi-fhop Abbor, he went into every thing that feem'd to favour the Prerogative of the Crown, or enforce an Absolute Obedience upon the Subject.

MEMOIRS, CC.

The King's urgent Neceffities, and the backwardness of the Parliament to supply them, had forc'd him upon unwarrantable Methods of raising Money; and and the readiness the Roman Catholicks express'd to affift him in his Wants, did beget in him at first a Tenderness towards them, and afterwards a Trust and Confidence in them; which was unhappily mistaken by his other Subjects, as if he inclined to their Religion.

Among other means of railing Money, that of Loan was fallen upon; which met with great difficulties, and was generally taken to be illegal. One Sibthorp, an obscure Person, in a Sermon preach'd at the Affizes at Northampton, would make his Court by afferting not only the Lawfulness of this way of imposing Money by Lean, but that it was the indifpenfible Duty of the Subject to comply with it. At the fame time Dr. Manwaring, another Divine, preach'd two Sermons before the King at Whitehall, in which he advanc'd these Doctrines, viz. That the King is not bound to observe the Laws of the Realm, concerning the Subjects Rights and Liberties; but that his Royal Word and Command in imposing Loans and Taxes without Consent of Parliament, does oblige the Subject's Conficence, upon pain of eternal Damnation. That those who refus d to pay this Loan, did offend against the Law of God, and became guilty of Impiety, Difloyalty,

ţ

MEMOIRS, CC.

Difloyalty, and Rebellion. And that the Authority of Parliaments is not necessary for raising of Aids and Subsidies.

Every Body knew Abbot was averfe to fuch Doctrines: and to feek an advantage againft him, Sibthorp's Sermon, with a Dedication to the King, was fent him by Order of his Majefty to Licenfe. Abbot refus'd, and gave his Reafons in writing; which Bifhop Laud anfwer'd, and with his own hand Licens'd both Sibthorp's and Manwaring's Sermons. Upon this Archbifhop Abbot was confin'd to his Countrey Houfe, and fufpended from his Function; the Administration of which was committed to Bifhop Laud, and fome others of his recommendation.

Archbishop Abbot died in difgrace, and was fucceeded in the See of Canterbury by Bishop Laud; while in the mean time Things went on from bad to worse, and hasten'd to a Criss. The two first Parliaments King Charles had call'd, pressing him hard for Redress of Grievances; and pushing on the Resentments, begun in the preceding Reign; he was prevail'd with not only to dissolve them, but to leave the Nation without Parliaments for Twelve Years together; and all this 45 contrary to the Advice of fome of the beft and wifeft Men about him, who forefaw the ill confequences that might follow, if ever any unlucky Juncture of Affairs should necessitate him to call one.

The Rife of King Charles's Troubles.

Such a Juncture fell out, and the worft that could be; the manner thus: The Scots had been of a long time fower'd by the Encroachments they faid were made upon their Rights and Liberties, and particularly in the matter of Church-Government. Archbishop Land's Zeal for an Uniformity between the two Nations in point of Liturgy, prov'd the fatal Torch that put the Two Kingdoms into a flame. And it was the sooner kindled, there being so much Fuel laid up for many Years, that the least Spark was enough to fet Fire to the Pile.

The Scotch • Troubles.

In the Year 1637. the Scots had not only in a Tumultuous manner refus'd the Liturgy that was fent them from England, of Archbishop Laud's composing; but had afterwards assumed to themselves the Liberty and Power of holding a General Assumed to the church, and in it to abolish Episcopacy, and do several other Things that were judg'd inconsistent with the Duty of Subjects: Upon which they were were declar'd Rebels; and King Charles thought his Honour was concern'd to reduce them to Obedience by the Sword.

MEMOIRS, OC.

Instead of venturing to call a Parliament, to enable him to profecute this Defign, he was neceffitated to levy Money another way. Great Sums were rais'd by Loan and Benevolence, to which the Roman Catholicks and the Clergy of Land's Faction contributed most. The King thus fupplied, march'd to the North with a Gallant Army; and the Scots came as far as the Borders in a Posture of Defence. To prevent matters coming to extremity, the Scors prefented his Majefty with their humble Supplication and Remonstrance, setting forth their inviolable Fidelity to the Crown; and that they defir'd nothing more, but the peaceable enjoyment of their Religion and Liberties; and that all Things might be determin d and fettled by a Free Parliament, and General Affembly. At length, through the Interceffion of the Moderate Party about the King, and fome of the highest Rank in both Kingdoms, his Majesty was pleas'd to comply with the Defires of the Scots, by a folemn Pacification, fign'd in view of both Armies near Berwick, in June 1638. This Treaty was but thort-liv'd, and

Digitized by Google

but

but ill observ'd on either side. The same Men that counsell'd the King to the sirft, push'd him on to a second War against the Scots. Parliaments had been now discontinu'd for some Years together, and there appear'd no great Inclination in the King to call any more, if this emergent occasion had not fallen out. But his pressing Necessities, and this new War oblig d him once more to try the Affections of his People in a Parliamentary way.

Accordingly a Parliament meets in April, 1640. at the opening of which the King acquainted them with the Affronts he had received from the Scots, and demanded a Supply to reduce them to their . Duty by force of Arms. Both Houfes show'd a Willingness to relieve the King's Wants, and offer'd him a confiderable Supply; but with this Condition, That their Grievances might be first redress'd; which had fwell'd up to a confiderable Bulk fince the last Diffolution. Not only fo, but the Scots had Friends enough in the Parliament to hinder any great matter to be done against them; and the greater part both of Lords and Commons were but little inclin'd to a War of Archbishop Laud's kindling.

The

MEMOIRS, GC.

The King being thus difappointed, diffolv'd this Parliament as he had done the reft, when they had fcarce fat a Month; and made what fhifts he could to raife a new Army against the Scots. They upon the other hand being refolv'd not to be behind in their Preparations, enter'd into England with a numerous Army, compos'd for the most part of Veteran Officers and Troops, that had ferv'd in Germany under Gustavus Adolphus, and taking Berwick and Newcastle, push'd their way as far as Durbam.

King Charles came in Perfon to Tork, and there found himfelf inviron'd with perplexing Difficulties on all Hands: The Nobility and Gentry that attended him, express'd on all occasions their diflike of the Cause, and the War they were engag'd in: The Scots stood firm to their Ground, being stelly'd with Success: And the King was follow'd from the South with Petitions from the City of London, from several Counties, and from a considerable Number of Lords, desiring him to call a Parliament, as the only effectual Means to quiet the Minds of the People, and compose the present War without Bloodsted.

To extricate himself out of this Labyrinth, King Charles fummon'd the Great Council of Peers to meet at Tork, to confult what was fit to be done in this Juncture; who advis'd him unanimously to enter into a Treaty with the Scots at Rippon, and to fummon a Parliament to meet at Westminster; with both which Advices the King comply'd, and immediately issued out Writs for a Parliament to fit down in November, 1640. and adjourn'd the Treaty with the Scots to London.

No Age ever produc'd Greater Men than those that fat in this Parliament : They had sufficient Abilities and Inclinations to have render'd the King and their Country happy, if England had not been through a Chain of concurring Accidents ripen'd for Destruction.

The Parliament. 1641. At their fitting down, a Scene of Grievances under which the Nation had long groan'd, was laid open, and all Topicks made use of to paint them out in liveliest Colours. The many Cruelties and Illegal Practices of the Star-chamber, and High Commission Court, that had alienated Peoples Minds from the Hierarchy, were now infissed on to throw down those two Arbitrary Tribunals, and with them in fome some time after, the Bishops out of the Houfe of Peers, and at length Episcopacy it felf out of the Church. It was not a few of either House, but indeed all the Great Patriots, that concurr'd at first to make Enquiry into the Grievances of this Reign. Sir Edward Hide, afterwards Earl of Clarendon, and Lord Chancellor of England; the Lord Digby; the Lord Falkland; the Lord Capell; Mr. Grimstone, who was chosen afterward Speaker of the House of Commons that brought in King Charles the Second, and was Master of the Rolls; Mr. Holles, fince Lord Holles ; all which fuffer'd afterwards on the King's fide; and in general, most of those that took the King's part in the fucceeding War, were the Men that appear'd with the greatest Zeal for the Redrefs of Grievances, and made the sharpeft Speeches upon those Subjects. The Inténtions of those Gentlemen were certainly Noble and Juft, and tended to the equal advantage of King and People: But the Fate of England urg'd on its own Ruin step by step, till an open Rupture between the King and Parliament made the Gap too wide ever to be made up again.

É 2

Sir

Sir Thomas Wentworth, Earl of Strafford, and Dr. Laud, Archbishop of Canterbury, had too great a share in the Ministry, to escape being censur'd; and they were the sirft that felt the effects of a Popular Hatred. These two Gentlemen, and James Duke of Hamilton, first advis'd King Charles to call this Parliament; and all three fell by it, though not at the same time.

The Fall and Charafter of the Earl of Straftord;

The Earl of Strafford was a Gentleman. of extraordinary Parts, a great Orator, and yet a greater Statesman: He made a confiderable Figure in the first Three Parliaments of King Charles; and no Man appear'd with greater Zeal against Shipmoney, Junnage, and Poundage, and other Taxes illegally impos'd upon the Subject. The Court bought him off, and preferr'd him to great Honours and Places, which loft him his former Friends, and made the Breach irreconcilable. There had been a long and intimate Friendship betwixt Mr. Pym and him, and they had gone hand in hand in every thing in the House of Commons. But when Sir Thomas Wentworth was upon making his Peace with the Court, he fent to Pym to meet him alone at Greenwich; where he began in a fet Speech to found ' about the Dangers they were like to run by the Courfes they were in ; and what Advantages they might have, if they would but liften to some Offers would probably be made them from the Court. Pym understanding his drift, stopt him short with this Expression, You need not use all this Art to tell me that you have a mind to leave us: But remember what I tell you, You are going to be undone. But remember that though you leave us now, I will never leave you while your Head is upon your Shoulders. He was as good as his Word, for it was Pym that first accus'd him of high Treason in the House of Commons, he carried up his Impeachment to the House of Lords, and was the chief Manager of his Tryal, and Bill of Attainder.

MEMOIRS, CC.

There never was a more folemn Tryal than that of the Earl of Strafford, whether we confider the Accusers, or the Person accus'd; the Accusation, or the Defence. As in every thing elfe, fo in this more particularly, he expres'd a Wonderful Prefence of Mind, and a vaft Compass of Thought, with such nervous and moving Flights of Eloquence, as came nothing short of the most celebrated Pieces of Antiquity. This did manifestly ap-E 3 pear pear from his fumming up the long Aniwer he made ex tempore to every one of the Articles against him, with this Pathetick Conclusion : My Lords, faith he, I have troubled you longer than I should have done, were it not for the Interest of these dear Pledges a Saint in Heaven hath left me. At this Word he stop'd, pointing to his Children, that flood by him, and dropt fome Tears; then went on, What I forfeit for my felf is nothing; but that my Indiscretion should extend to my Posterity, woundeth me to the very Soul. You will pardon my Infirmity; Something I should have added, but am not able; therefore let it pass. And now, my Lords, for my self, I have been by the Bleffing of God taught, That the Afflictions of this prefent Life are not to be compar'd to that Eternal weight of Glory which shall be reveal'd hereafter. Aud so, my Lords, even so, with all Tranquility of Mind, I freely submit my lelf to your Judgment : And whether that Judgment be of Life or Death, Te Deum laudamus.

It's believed that King Charles's appearing fo heartily for him, did him no good with the House of Commons: And it's confidently faid, that he wrote his Majesty a Letter from the Tower, praying him him not to intercede in his Affair ; and that his not feeming to be concern'd in it, would be the best method to calm the Rage of his Enemies. But notwithstanding this Caution the King came to the House of Lords, and fending for the House of Commons, made a warm Speech in favour of the Earl ; which fome of his Friends took for fo good News, that they went straight from Westminster to give him an Account of it : Strafford received it as his Doom, and told them, The King's Kindness had ruin d him, and that be had little else now to do, but to prepare himself for Death.

MEMOIRS, C.

As King Charles was millaken in his Intercession for the Earl of Strafford, fo was the Earl himfelf much more, in neglecting the advice of his Friend's against his coming up to this Parliament. It was eafy to forefee there was fomething defign'd to his Prejudice; and he had fair warning given him not to come up at that time; at least, till he faw how matters would go. He had two plausible Pretences for his absence, if he had pleas'd to make use of them; the necessity of his Prefence in Ireland, where he was Lord Lieutenant; or in the North of England, where he was Lieutenant-General E 4 neral of the Army that had been rais d against the Scors. But being too confident, not only of the King's Favour and his Interest among the Lords, but of the good effects an Humble Honey Speech might have with the House of Commons (to use his own Words,) he came late at Night to Town, and took his place next Morning in the House of Lords, with an Intention to ask leave that very day to go down to the House of Commons to clear himself of the Misrepresentations he lay under.

. 55

Mr. Pym hearing he was come, mov'd to have the Doors lock'd, and the Keys laid upon the Table, left any Member fhould give Intelligence of what they were upon: Which being done, he accus'd. the Earl of Strafford of Higb-Treafon; and an Impeachment was immediately drawn up, and agreed to by the Houfe. in the mean time, it fell out unluckily for the Earl of Strafford, that at his coming into the Houfe of Lords, they were upon a Debate that took them up a confiderable time; and while he was waiting till that was over, the Commons came up with their Impeachment.

As the Earl was strangely unfortunate in most things that befel him in the latter Peri-

MEMOIRS, C.

Period of his Life, he was no lefs in the very Opinion of the King himfelf, and those others that did all they could to fave his life. For the King in the Speech he made to both Houfes in his favour, was pleas'd to fay, That he did not think my Lord Strafford fit bereafter to ferve him or the Commonwealth in any place of Truft, no, not so much as that of a Constable. And the Lord Digby, in the Speech he, made in the House of Commons against the Bill of Atrainder, for which among other things he was forc'd to fly, treats the Earl in yet much harsher Terms: The Name of the Earl of Strafford (fays he) is a Name of Hatred in the present Age by his Practices, and fit to be made a , Terror to future Ages by his Punifoment. I am still the same in my Opinions and Affectons as to the Earl of Strafford (continues he after) I believe bim to be the most daugerous Minister, the most insupportable to free Snbjects that can be character'd. I believe his Practices in themselves as high, Tyrannical, as any Subject ever as ventur'd upon; and the Malignity of them highly aggravated by those rare Qualities of his, whereof God has given him the Use, but the Devil the Application. In a word (adds the Lord Digby) I believe 🖌 bim him still that Grand Apostate to the Commonwealth, who must not expect to be pardon'd in this world, till he be dispatch d into the other. And yet let me tell you, Mr. Speaker my Hand must not be at that Dispatch. Thus far a Nobleman that was intirely in the King s Interest; and for his Zeal to the Royal Cause became the most obnoxious to the Parliament.

57

After all, there feems to have been some Mistake about the main Article in his Accusation, of his advising the King to bring over the Army from Ireland to reduce England; which contributed more to the undoing of this Minister, than all the reft: For the Proof of this Article being only Words contain'd in Mr. Secretary Vane's Notes, (which are plac d. in the Appendix) and faid to be spoke at the Council Table, they do naturally refer to the Kingdom of Scotland, and not to England; the thing then under Debate, being how to reduce Scotland. And though Secretary Vane fwore to the Truth of his Notes, yet it was after fuch a manner, as left the Matter still more dubious : And though he had fworn more politively, it was but the Tellimony of One Witness, and that contradicted by Four Lords, who were then present in Council.

itized by Google

Appendix.

Numb. 6.

Pog. 273.

MEMOIRS, Grc.

Council, and who declar'd upon their Honours, That they did not remember they heard the Earl of Strafford speak those Words.

I cannot leave the Earl of Strafford, without taking notice of a filly Mistake that has gain'd fome Credit in the World, as if the Bill of Attainder against him was of so extraordinary a nature, and so much out of all the known Methods of Justice, that the Legislators themselves were oblig'd to infert a Claufe into the Body of it, That it should never be drawn into Prefident. Whereas that Clause does express relate only to Judges in Inferior Courts; and is conceiv'd in the following words; Provided, That no Judge or Judges, Justice or Justices what soever, shall adjudge or interpret any Act or Thing to be Treason, nor bear or determine any Treason, in any other manner than be or they should or ought to have done, before the making of this AA.

As Archbishop Land was nothing inferior to the Earl of Strafford in Parts, and much his Superior in Learning; fo it is as hard to determine which of the two made a Nobler Defence at their Tryal. The Fate of the former has been the 59

the fame with that of most Great Men, to be represented to Posterity in Extremes; for we have nothing writ of him, but what's either Panegyrick, or Satyr, rather than History.

That Archbishop Land was brought to his Tryal, and found Guilty, during the Heat of a Civil War, and when all things were tending to Confusion, was nothing ftrange : Nor was Serjeant Wild's Introduction at the opening of his Charge, any thing but what might have been expected at fuch a time, when he told the Lords, That it might be faid of the Great Caufe of the Archbishop of Canterbury, as it was in a like Cafe, Repertum est hodierno die facinus, quod nec Poeta fingere, nec Hiftrio sonare, nec Mimus imitari potuerit. But it was indeed strange, and none of the least of this Great Man's Misfortunes, That Three Years before, he should be declar'd by the Houfe of Commons a Traytor. Nemine contradicente, at a time when there was not the least Misunderftanding betwixt the King and Parliament, being within the first Month after they fat down : And which was yet stranger, That no body was more severe upon him, than fome of those that afterwards took the King's Part against the Par-

ł

Parliament, and were at last the chief Inftruments of his Son's Restoration. Whoever reads Sir Harbottle Grimstone's Speech upon voting his Impeachment, or Pym's upon carrying it up to the Lords, will be apt to think, That scarce any Age has produc'd a Man whose Actions and Condust have been more obnoxious to Obloguy, or given greater occasion for it.

There was one Thread that run through his whole Accusation, and upon which most of the Articles of his Impeachment turn'd; and that was, his Inclination to Popery, and his defign to introduce the Romish Religion : Of which his Immortal Book against Fisher, and his Declaration at his Death, do fufficiently acquit him. And yet, not Protestants only, but even Roman Catholicks themfelves were led into this Miftake; otherwife they would not have dar'd to offer one in his Post a Cardinal's Cap, 'as he confesses in his Diary they did twice. The Introduction of a great many Pompous Ceremonies into the Church, the Licenfing fome Books that fpoke favourably of the Church of Rome, and the refusing to Licenfe others that were writ against it, were the principal Caufes of his being thus mifrepresented : And indeed his Behaviour haviour in fome of these matters, as likewise in the Star-Chamber and High-Commission-Court, can hardly be accounted for; and particularly his Theatrital manner of Confecrating a New Church in London; related at length in the Appendix.

Appendin. Numb. 7. Pag. 275.

He was certainly, in fpite of Malice; a Man of an elevated Capacity, and vaft Defigns; a great Encourager of Learning, and Learned Men; and fpar d no Pains nor Coft to enrich England with fuch a Noble Collection of Books and Manufcrips in most Languages, as look d rather like the Bounty of a King, than of a Subject. As he left behind him many lasting Monuments of his Beneficence to the Learned World, fo was he in a way to have carried it much further, if his Misfortunes had not interven'd, and depriv'd Learning of fo powerful a Benefactor.

But after all; as there is feldom found a Mind fo Great but has fome Allay, fo it feems Archbishop Land, notwithstanding his excellent Endowments, was not Proof against either the Impression of Dreams, or Revenge of Personal Affronts, though never so trivial in themselves, nor the Person never so mean: Of the one, witness witnefs his taking so particular notice in his Diary of feveral of his Dreams; and of the other, his carrying his Refentments fo far against Archie the King's Fool, for a mere Jest, that he had him turn'd out of Court by an Order of Council : Which being so unaccountable a piece of Weakness in so great a Man, and done at a full Board, the King and the -Archbishop present; the Order is plac d in the Appendix, for a remarkable Inflance Appendix, how far the Greatest of Men may at some p. 278. times be left without a Guard against Pashon.

MEMOIRS, GC.

pigitized by Google

To return to King Charles, he did every thing that was possible, to give fatiffaction to the Parliament, or could be reasonably expected from a Gracious and Beneficent Prince. He pas d the Bill for attainting the Earl of Strafford, though with reluctancy, as believing he deferv'd nor fuch hard measure: He took away Monopolies, that had been a great Discouragement to Trade: He express'd himfelf to their Contentment in the matters of Loan, Ship-money Tunnage and Poundage, and other unwarrantable Methods that had been us'd in raising Money; and showed a setled Resolution to comply with with them in every thing that might tend to the Eafe and Security of the Subject. As in the preceeding Parliament he had paft the Petition of Right, fo in the beginning of this he had agreed to the Acts for Triennial Parliaments, and for abolifhing the Star-Chamber and High-Commission Courts, which had been great Grievances; and with Chearfulnefs pas'd that Act which feem'd inconfistent with his own just Prerogative, That that Parliament should not be diffolv'd, but by Act of Parliament; nor prorogu'd or adjourn'd, but by their own Confent.

The King having upon these Concessions receiv'd the Publick Thanks of Both Houses, and the loud Applauses of his People, took a Journey for Scotland in August, 1641. to settle matters there, that requir'd his Presence; leaving the Parliament sitting, which they continu'd to do for some time, and then adjourn'd themselves to October following. At the King's going away, Affairs had been already settled betwixt the two Kingdoms by an Ast of Pacification, and both Armies order'd to be disbanded, the Scots returning home for that purpose.

While

Digitized by Google

Memoirs, Cr.

While the King was in Scotland, the The Irifs Irifh Rebellion broke out, which became a new Bone of Contention between the King and the Parliaments of both Nations. He took what Measures were posfible in Scotland about suppressing that Rebellion, and made what hafte he could back to England to concert with the Parliament there, what was further to be done towards it; leaving the Scots, as he faid himself, a contented People, and every thing fetled to their mind both in Church and State.

He returned to London the latter end of November, and was receiv'd with all demonstrations of Affection. The Lord Mayor and Aldermen, the Nobility, Gentry, and Train'd-Bands met him without the City, and conducted him in great state with the Acclamations of the People (the City Companies in their Formalities lining the Streets on each fide) to Guildhall, where he was Royally feasted, and after Dinner conducted with the fame, Pomp to Whitehall.

What man that had feen a Prince thus receiv'd into his Capital City, could have imagin'd, that within lefs than Seven Weeks he should be oblig'd to leave it upon the account of Tumults, never to fee F fee it again, but as a Prisoner brought thither to die upon a Scaffold ? Yet this was King Charles's hard Fortune : And it's here I would willingly draw a Veil over the remaining part of his Reign, that ended in one of the most difinal Tragedies that ever was acted upon the English Stage. His Virtues and Morals deferv'd a better Fate, and he suffer d for the Faults of others, rather than Errors of his own.

The Houfe of Commons had begun fome few days before his Return, to fall into new Heats about Innovations in Religion; the Rebellion in Ireland; Plots faid to be laid in Scotland; the difabling the Clergy to exercise Temporal Jurisdiction; and excluding the Bifhops from Votes in Parliament : All which matters, together with Reports that were buzz d about of fome Defigns against the Parliament, led the Houfe into that Remarkable Petition and Remonstrance of the State of the Nation; in which they rip'd up again all the Mismanagements in the Government fince the King's coming to the Crown; and attributed all to Evil Counfels and Counsellors, and a Malignant Party about the King. This Remonstrance was roughly penn'd, both for Matter and Expression, and and met with great Opposition in the House; the Debate lasting from Three a Clock in the Afternoon till Ten a Clock next Morning; and was prefented to his Majesty the Eighth Day after his Return from Scotland.

The Petition and Remonfirance of the H. of Commons to King Céarles.

Мемоікs, crc.

It was no wonder King Charles was furpriz'd at this Petition and Remonstrance, confidering how much he had done to comply with his Parliament in all they defired. And fince from these two Papers, and from the King's Answer to them at their delivery, and from the Declaration he publish'd more at large afterwards to the fame purpose, the Reader will be better enabled to make a Judgment of the Causes and Arguments on both fides. for the Civil War that enfued, I have plac'd all the Four in the Appendix : The Appendix, Length of them may be more easily par-p-g 279. don'd, fince upon the Matters contain⁶d in them, the whole almost of all the Differences that came to be decided by the Sword, happen'd to turn.

Things were now going fast on to- K charles's wards lessening the Confidence betwixt coming to the H. of the King and Parliament: And yet there Commons were not wanting Endeavours on both to demand Sides to accommodate Matters by foft the Five Members. and healing Methods, when the King's F 2 coming coming to the House of Commons in Perfon to demand Five of their Members, whom he had order'd the Day before to be impeach'd of High Treason, did put all into a Combustion, and gave occasion to the Houfe to affert their Privileges with a greater Warmth than ever. This was the most unlucky step King Charles could have made at that Juncture: And the Indifcretion of fome that attended the King to the Lobby of the Houfe, was infifted upon as an Argument that the King was reloved to use violence upon the Parliament, which it's to be prefum'd was a thing far from his Thoughts. The Five Members had hardly time to make their Escape just when the King was entring ; and upon his going away, the Houfe adjourn'd in a Flame for some Days, ordering a Committee to fit in Guildhall in the mean time, as if they were not fafe at Westminster.

Digitized by Google

Whoever they were that advisd the King to this rafh Attempt, are juftly chargeable with all the Blood that was afterwards fpilt; for this fudden Action was the first and visible Ground of all our following Miseries. It was believed, That if the King had found the Five Members in the House, and had call'd in his his Guards to feize them, the House would have endeavour d their Defence, and oppos'd Force to Force ; which might have endanger'd the Kings Perfon. But the Confequences were bad enough without this; for immediately upon it there was nothing but Confusion and Tumults, Fears and Jealoufies every where, which fpread themselves to Whitehall in the rudest manner; fo that his Majesty thinking himself not safe there, he retir'd with his Family to Hampton Court.

MEMOIRS, &c.

The King leaving the Parliament in this manner, there were fcarce any hopes of a thorough Reconciliation. But when after a great many Removes from Place. to Place, his Majesty came to set up his Standard at Nottingham, there enfued a The Be-Fatal and Bloody War; which it's reasona- of the Cible to believe was never defign'd at first vil Wars, by either Side.

Each Party blam'd the other for beginning this War; and it's not easy to determine which of them began it. Though the King made the first Steps that feem'd to tend that way; fuch as raifing a Troop for a Guard to bis Perfon; Summoning the Gentlemen and Freeholders of several Counties to attend him in his Pro-Fa grefs gress to the North, and ordering Arms and Ammunition to be bought in Holland for his use : Yet the Parliament did as much at the fame time; for they likewife rais'd Guards of their own, and took care that the Magazine of Hull should not fall into the King's hands. So that the King and Parliament prepar'd themselves infenfibly for War, without confidering that these Preparations must gradually and inevitably come to Blows in the end. The King's fetting up his Standard at Nottingham was not the first publick Notice of this War, as has been commonly reported by Historians that should have known better; for that was not done till August 22. 1642. and yet the House of Commons past these Two Votes the 12th of July before ; 1. That an Army should be forthwith rais'd for the safety of the King's Person, Defence of both Houses of Parliament, and of those who have obey'd their Orders and Commands; and preferving of the true Religion, Laws, Liberty, and Peace of the Kingdom. And 2. That the Earl of Effex should be General, and the Earl of Bedford General of the Horfe. To which Votes the House of Lords agreed.

69

Who-

Digitized by Google

MEMOIRS, Crc.

Whoever begun the War, it was carried on in the beginning with equal Succets, and it was hard to determine which Side had the better: Till in the Sequel, the lofs of Effex's Army in the West, and other difadvantages, brought the Parliaments Affairs to a low Ebb, and feem'd to Promife the King an intire Maftery. To retrieve their finking Fortune, the Parliament was oblig'd to call in the Scots to their affiftance; which fo far turn'd the Scale, that the King loft ground every day after: And the defeat of his Army at the Battels of Marston-Moor, and Naleby, put him out of Capacity to keep the Field, and broke entirely all his Measures.

During the whole courfe of this Unnatural War, it was hard to divine what would be the Fate of England; whether an Abfolute Uulimited Monarchy; a new hudled-up Commonwealth; or a downright Anarchy. If the King fhould prevail, the first was to be fear'd, confidering that the many Indignities put upon him, might imbitter him against the Parliament: If the Parliament should prevail, the fecond was to be apprehended: And if the Army should fet up for themfelves, as afterwards they did, the last F_A was 71 was inevitably to follow. All which fome of the best Men about the King wifely forefaw, and trembled at the Event of every Battel that was fought, whoever happen'd to be Victors. It was the dread of these Misfortunes that hinder d the Lords and Commons whom the King call'd to Oxford, to assume to themfelves the Name of The Parliament of England, and from declaring those met at Westminster, Rebels; though the King again and again importuned them to it, and took their Refufal fo ill, that in one of his Letters to the Queen, intercepted at Naseby, he reflects heavily upon them for it, and calls them in derifion his Mungrel Parliament. It was likewife the difinal Prospect he had of this War, even in the beginning of it, that mov'd that Accomplish'd Gentleman the Lord Falkland to throw away his Life, rather than be a witnefs of the Miferies were coming upon the Nation. For though he was Secretary of State to the King, and follow d his Fortune ; yet seeing all his Endeavours for promoting a Peace were in vain, he went on with a Party to skirmish with the Enemy, the day before the first Battel of Newbury; and being diffuaded by his Friends, as having no Call to it, it, being no Military Person, he faid, He was weary of the Times, and forefaw much Misery to his Countrey, and hop'd he (hould be out of it e're Night. So pushing into the Battel, he was Slain.

MEMOIRS, GC.

Many Endeavours were us'd from Endeatime to time to bring Matters to an Ac- vours that commodation by way of Treaty; but for an Acstill some one unlucky Accident or commoother render'd them all abortive. At the dation. Treaty of Uxbridge, though the Parliament's Demands were high, and the King show'd a more than ordinary Aversion to comply with them ; yet the ill posture of the King's Affairs at that time, and the fatal Confequences they fear'd would follow upon breaking off of the Treaty, oblig'd a great many of the King's Friends, and more particularly that Noble Perfon the Earl of Southampton, who had gone Post from Uxbridge to Oxford for that purpose, to press the King again and again upon their Knees, to yield to the necessity of the Times; and by giving his Allent to some of the most material Propositions that were fent him, to fettle a lasting Peace with his People. The King was at last prevail'd with to follow their Counfel; and the next Morning was appointed for figning a Warrant to his Commisfioners fioners to that effect. And fo fure were they of a happy end of all differences, that the King at Supper complaining his Wine was not good, one told him merrily, He hop'd that bis Majefty would drink better before a Week was over, at Guildhall with the Lord Mayor. But fo it was, that when they came early next Morning to wait upon him with the Warrant that had been agreed upon over Night, they found his Majefty had chang d his refolution, and was become inflexible in thefe Points.

The unhappy Occasion of this Alteration has lain hitherto a Secret in History, and might have continued such still, if a Letter from the Marquiss of Montrols in Scotland, whereof I have seen a Copy under the Duke of Richmond's Hand, did not give a sufficient Light into it. To make the Matter better understood, it's necessary to say something of Montrols and his Actions in Scotland.

This Nobleman had been at first very active and zealous for the Liberties of his Country; and was the first Man that past the River Tweed at the Head of Five hundred Horse, upon the Scot's First Expedition into England. But being afterwards disoblig'd, or, as some say, repenting of his

Digitized by Google

Montrofics Fatal Letter.

MEMOIRS, GC.

his former Error, he left that Side, and came in to the King at the breaking out of the War between him and the Parliament, When the Scots came into England the fecond time to affift the Parliament, Montrofs apply'd himfelf to the King for a Commission to levy War against his Rebel Subjects, as they were call'd, of Scotland; assuring his Majesty, he was able with the Affiftance of his Friends, and Concurrence of the reft of the Royal Party, to make at least a very confiderable Diverfion, if not to reduce the whole Countrey to his Majesty's Obedience. Accordingly the Marquess was made Governor of Scotland; where in the space of five Months, with a handful of raw undisciplin'd Men, and those not half arm'd, he did over-run a great part of the Countrey, and gain three very confiderable Battels: the last of which was that of Inverlocby, fought the fecond of February, 1644. according to the English, and 1645. according to the Scotch Account. In this Battel the Earl of Argyle was entirely defeated, and the Prime of the Noble Family of the Campbells cut off, with inconsiderable Lois on Montrofs's fide; who next day dispatch'd an Express to the King with the News of this and his two former Victories : And in his Letter express'd his atter Aversion to all Treaties with his Rebel Parliament in England, as he calls them : Tells the King, he is heartily forry to hear that his Majesty had confented to Treat; and hopes it is not true: Advises him not to enter into Terms with his Rebellious Subjects, as being a Thing unworthy of a King : And assures him, That he himfelf was now fo much Master of Scotland, that he doubted not but to be able within a few Months to march into England to his Majesty's assistance, with a brave Army. And concludes with this odd Expression, When I have conquer'd from Dan to Beersheba, as I doubt not I shall very quickly, I hope I may have then leave to fay as David's General faid to his Master, Come thou, left this Countrey be call'd by my Name.

This Letter writ with fuch an Air of Affurance, and by a Perfon that was thought capable to make good his Promifes; and the Matter contain'd in it, fuiting but too well with the King's Inclinations, was unluckily deliver'd to the King but a few Hours before he was to have fign'd the Warrant before-mention'd; and had as ill effects as the worft of King Charles's Enemies could have wifh'd; for it it dash'd out in a Moment all the Impreffions his best Friends had been making upon him for a confiderable time, towards, full Settlement with his People.

MEMOIRS, OC.

It look'd as if there was fome fecret Fatality in this whole matter; for it could hardly have been imagin'd, that a Letter writ the Third of February, in the furthermost North Corner of Britain, fhould come fo foon to Oxford, confidering the length of the Journey, the badness of the Roads at that time of the Year, especially through the Mountainous parts of Scotland, together with the Parliament's and Scotch Armies and Garifons that were posted all along the Road : And yet certain it is, it came through all these Dangers and Inconveniencies in very few Days; for it's indors d upon the Copy.I have feen, That it was deliver'd to the King during the Treaty of Uxbridge; which every Body knows began the 30th of January, and ended the 22d of February: And further, it must have been deliever'd before the 19th of February, becaufe King Charles takes notice of it in a Letter to the Queen, of that Date, found among others at Nafeby; where he fays, Though I leave News to others, others, yet I cannot but tell thee, That even now I have received certain Intelligence of a great Defeat given by Montrofs to Argyle, who upon surprize totally ruted those Rebels, and kill d Fifteen hundred upon the Place. And it's remarkable, That in the fame Letter to the Queen, immediately after the mentioning Montrofs's Victory, the King adds, That as for trusting the Rebels, either by going to London, or difbanding my Army before a Peace, do no ways fear my hazarding fo cheaply or foolifhly; for I esteem the Interest thou hast in me at a far dearer rate; and pretend to have a little more Wit (at least, by the Sympathy that's betwixt us) than to put my felf into the Reverence of Perfidious Rebels. Which Words being compared with Montrofs's Letter, it will be found the one is a Commentary upon the other.

Appendix, Numb 10, P. 353

I have plac'd Montrofs's Letter it felf in the Appendix; and cannot leave it, without making this Observation, That confidering the time it was writ, the Critical Minute it was deliver'd, with the fad Confequences that attended it; it makes this Axiom true, That oftentimes the Fate of Princes and States is chiefly owing to very minute and unforefeen Accidents.

The

Digitized by Google

78

MEMOIRS, OC.

The Treaty of Uxbridge being thus broke off, the War was renew'd with greater Fury than ever; till at last the Parliament's Army having beaten the King out of the Field, came to kick their Mafters out of the House ; and having modell'd the Parliament and Army to their own Minds, did fet up for themfelves, and at one Blow compleated the Ruin of their Country in the Murther of King Charles I. and the Extirpation of Monarchy. In fhort, a continued Series of Misfortunes attended the Royal Cause ; and several favourable Accidents that feem'd from time to time to promife better Events, did concur in the end to the King's undoing : till at last, that Unhappy Prince, in being brought be-fore a Tribunal of his own Subjects, and fubmitting his Neck to the Stroke of a Common Executioner, taught the World an aftonishing Example of the Instability of Human Greatness; and in that and the reft of his Sufferings, a lasting Pattern of Christian Magnanimity and Patience.

The Character of King Charles I. The Chamay be taken in a great part from what racter of has been already faid; and I fhall only Charles I. add a few things more. He was a Prince of

79

of a Comely Presence, of a Sweet, Grave, but Melancholly Aspect. His Face was Regular, Handsome, and well-complexion'd; his Body Strong, Healthy, and well made; and though of a low Stature, was capable to endure the greatest Fatigues. His Face, contrary to that of his Son's Charles II. was eafily taken, either in Painting or Sculpture; and Icarce any one, though never fo indifferently skill'd in their Art, fail'd to hit it. He had fomething in the Lines and Features which Phyfiognomifts account unfortunate : And it's commonly reported, that his Picture being fent to Rome to have a Bufto done by it; a famous Statuary not knowing whose it was, told the Gentleman that brought it, He was forry if it was the Face of any Relation of his; for it was one of the most Unfortunate be ever faw; and according to all the Rules of Art, the Person whose it was must dye a violent Death. In his Temper he was Brave, Magnificent, Liberal and Constant ; but more affable to Strangers than his own Subjects. It, was his Noble and Generous Behaviour that took fo much with the King of Spain, when he went thither to court the Infanta, that he rejected the repeated Solicitations of his Council

Council to feize him; and paid him more Refpect than could have been well expected if he had been King of England at that time. Of his Composure of Mind in time of greatest danger, he gave a Noble Instance in his Behaviour in that great Storm in the Road of St. Andrees, which was worthy the Ancient Philosophers: Nor did he fall short of the Bravest in Personal Courage; having exposed his Person in every Battel he was in, and oftentimes charging at the Head of his Squadrons.

He had a good Tafte of Learning, and a more than ordinary Skill in the Liberal Arts, especially Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, and Medals; and being a Generous Benefactor to the most Celebrated Masters in those Arts, he acquird the Nobleft Collection of any Prince in his time, and more than all the Kings of England had done before him. It's faid, notwithstanding his natural Generosity, That he bestow'd Favours with a worfe Grace than his Son King Charles the Second denied them; and many times obliterated the fense of the Obligation by the manner of it : But indeed he had feldom much to give, being kept fhort of Money a great part of his Reign. The F.flencials Effentials' of Divinity he was as much Master of as ever his Father had been, but without the Allay of Pedantry : Of this, among other things, the Papers that past betwixt him and Mr. Henderson at Newcaftle, will be a lasting Monument. He was a great Patron of the Clergy; but his employing them in the higheft Offices of Trust in State-Matters, created Envy against them, and lessen'd the Love of the Nobility towards him. Yet fuch Dr. Juxon, was the Honefty and Integrity of one of them in the greatest and most obnoxious Bilhop of Post in the Kingdom, and when some Years after he had refign'd the Treafurer's Staff, and when the Parliament wanted not will to crush him, they could not find upon the narrowest Scrutiny, any one thing to object either against his Accounts, or his Behaviour in that Place.

> King Charles was a passionate Lover of his Queen, who was a Beautiful Lady, and in all things very well accomplished; infomuch that his Friends regretted the Ascendant she had over him on some occalions, while others tax'd him with the Character of an Uxorious Husband. He was fond of his Children, and kind to his Servants; though these last felt sometimes the hafty Sallies of his Paffion. He was 100 not miktaken of himself, when he faid before the High-Court of Justice, Ibat he underflood as much Law as any private Gentleman in England: And pity it was that any of his Ministers should have advis'd him to make Breaches in what he fo well understood.

London.

He fooke feveral Languages very well, and with a fingular good Grace ; though now and then, when he was warm in Discourse, he was inclinable to stammer. He witt a tolerable Hand for a King, but his Scale was ftrong, and his Stile Laconicks and yet he feldom wrote in any Language but Englight. Some of his Manifestoes, Declarations, and other Publick Papers, he drew hunfelf, and most of them he Corrected. In comparing those of the King's with the Parliamenr's. one would be eafily inclin'd to prefur, for the most part, the King's, for the Strength of Reafoning, and the Force of Expresfion. I have feen foveral Pieces of his own Hand, and therefore may the better affirm, That both for Matter and Form, they furpals those of his Ablest. Ministers, and come nothing short of Strafford or Falkland, the Two most Celebrared Pens of that time.

G 2

As

As to his Religion, he was Protestant, and in the strictest sense, of the Church of England, and for the Divine Right of Episcopacy. But his consenting perfonally to the total Abolition of that Order in Scotland, does not well agree with this part of his Character; especially confidering his repeated Protestations at the Treaties of Uxbridge and Nemport, That he could not superfede it, but for a time in England. What his opinion was, about Subjects defending their Religion and Liberties by Force of Arms, appear'd in the bufinels of Rochell. For though fome would have had us believe of late, That Defenhve Arms were inconfistent with the Principles of the Church of England; it's hop'd they will not deny but King Charles I. understood the Doctrine and Principles of that Church as well as any other Perfon can pretend to do ; and yet it's certain, that in his Practice and Declarations heallow'd of the People of Rochell's windicating their Religion and Liberties from the Encroachments made by their Sovereign, and that by Force of Arms ; and affifted them in fo doing.

His affifting the King Charles did not only affift the Rochellers after the War was actually be-Rechtlier. gun, but we have reason to believe that hc

MEMOIRS, C.

he encourag'd them to it at first, if we: look into the Duke of Rhoan's Memoirs. and Apology; where that Great Man acquaints the World in what manner he was brought into that War, in these words, as near as I can translate them from the Original : When all our Privileges (fays he) were violated, and our Religion brought to Rain, and the City of Rochell in the greatest Danger, I could fee no possibility to escape, but was upon the sad thoughts of submitting our selves to the Mercy of the King (meaning Lewis the XIIIm.) Being in this desperate state, there came a Gentleman to me from the King of England; who told me from his Master, That he seeing our Privileges were violated, and our Religion in danger of being subverted, bad taken Compassion on our Sufferings, and thought himself oblig'd in Honour and Conscience to affist and protect us ; which he was refolv'd to do, by employing all bis Kingdoms; and bis own Person, in so just a War; Provided we would join our Arms with his, and not enter into any Treaty with the King (meaning the French King) without him; and for that effect be would make War against the French King both by Sea and Land. Intreating me (continues the Duke of Rhoan) not 3 * G t ø to abandon my Party in so just and bonourable a War. And a little after in the same Apology, he has these Words; I refer it to all the World, if I can be justly call d the Author of the Third War, considering I was follicited to it by the King of Great Britain.

85

But suppose there were no Credit to be given to the Duke of Rboan, whole Honour and Veracity even his very Enemies never call'd in question; and suppose it were false, which all the World knows to be true, that King Charles did actually affift the Rochellers again and again againft their Prince ; yet we have Authentick Accounts of feveral Speeches made by the Duke of Buckingham's Secretary to the Rochellers, and of feveral Meffages fent to them from the Duke, in name of the King his Master, all to the fame purpose : And likewise a Manifesto publish'd by him, and fign'd with his own Hand, dated July 21. 1627. aboard the Admiral Ship; in which he has this Expression : No private Intereft (fays he) bas oblig'd my Master to make War against the French King, but merely the Defence of the Protefant Church : My Master's defign is the Reestablishment of the Church; their Good is bis Interest, and their Contentment his End. We

Digitized by Google

Hiftoire de La Siege de Rocholl par Mr. Mer-Vauls.

MEMOIRS, GC.

We have also Authentick Copies of the League betwixt King Charles and the People of Rochell; in which there is this Expression, That the Rochellers may be deliver'd from the Oppressions they groan under. And to fum up all, there were two Letters writ by King Charles with his own Hand to the Rochellers, which are mention'd by Monsieur Mervault, a Syndic of that Town, and who was active in the whole matter, and present during the whole Siege, of which the Copies follow.

To the Mayor, Sheriffs, Peers, and Burgeffes of the City of Rochell.

Gentlemen,

BE not discouraged, though my Fleet be return'd. Hold out to the last; for I am resolv'd that my whole Fleet shall perish, rather than you be not reliev'd. For this effect I have order'd it to return back to your Coasts, and am sending several Ships to reinforce it. With the help of God the Success shall be bappy for you.

At Weftminfter, May 19. O S. 1628.

Your Good Friend,

CHARLES R. G 4 The

Digitized by Google.

87

MEMOIRS, C.

The other Letter, directed as before, runs thus:

Gentlemen,

I Have been very much troubled to hear that my Fleet was apon the point of returning home, without obeying my Orders in supplying you with Provisions, cost what it will. I have commanded them to return to your Road, and not to come away until you are suppli'd, or at least till they are reinforc'd, which I have order'd to be done with all diligence. Assure your selves, That I shall never abandon you; and that I shall employ the whole Power of my Kingdom for your deliverance, until God assist me to obtain for you an assured Peace.

Given at our Palace of Weffminster, May 27. O S. 1628

CHARLES R.

Your Good Friend.

I have dwelt the longer upon this Subject, because it is easy to draw a Parallel betwixt the Case of King Charles s affisting Subjects against their King in the Defence of their Religion and Liberties, and that of another Prince's doing the fame upon a late occasion. But as the former had no other Right to interpose in in the one, but the Common Interest of Religion; fo the other had over and above thar, the Right of a Prince of the Blood, and the Interest of the Presumptive Heir of the Crown; all which alter d the Cafe greatly to the advantage of the latter. King Charles was as unfortunate in this War with France, as he was in all others he engag'd in. The poor City of Rochell, after a long and cruel Siege, amidst the Horrors of Famine and Death, was at last forc'd to submit to the Will of the Conqueror; and the loss of that Bulwark of 'the French Liberty, was in fome time follow'd by the total Ruin of the Protestant Interest in France. The English Fleet lay within view of the Town when it was taken; and which added to the Misfortune, that mighty Dyke, that had been rais'd at ineftimable Charges to block up the Harbour, fell down the very next day after the Surrender, and open'd a Pallage for the Fleet that came to relieve it, when it was now too late.

MEMOIRS, GC.

During this War, he loft his Favou- The Charite, George Villers, Duke of Buckingham. racter of This Gentleman was one of the greatest the D. of Bucking-Prodigies of Fortune that any Age has ham. producid; and gave us a fignal Instance how how far it is possible for the same Person to be the Favourite of two Successive Monarchs. He posses'd King James's Favour without a Rival, and without any other Interruption, but that Cloud which the Intrigues of Spain rais'd against him in the King's mind, which has been already hinted at; wherein the Son fhar'd equally with the Favourite, and which Bishop Williams's dexterity soon diffipated. King Charles out-did his Father in his Kindnefs to Buckingham, and had no Favourite after him. He had all the Qualities that are requisite for a Court, and fit to acquire and preferve. his Maller's Affection. Notwithstanding he was in his Temper highly Generons and Beneficent, and that there were few Great Families in England but he had fome way or other oblig'd, either in themselves or their Relations, yet he fell under the Misfortune that attends Favorites : but it must be own'd he was rather envied than bated. He had the ill luck to be charg'd with a great many Things of which he was Innocent, and particularly in relation to the Spanish Match. By all that I have feen, he deferv'd the Thanks of the Nation upon that account, rather than an Impeachment in Parliament :

89

Vid Hacket's Life of B. Willisms.

MEMOIRS, Cr.

ment : For it was he chiefly that broke off that Match, when he faw how much King James fuffer'd in his Honour, through the manner he was treated in it, which he found out fooner than the King did himfelf. It's none of the leaft Proofs of the Duke of Buckingham's Innocency in these matters, that Spanhemicus in his History of the Electrice Palatine, (writ long after Buckingham's Death) ipeaks always honourably of him in the Business of the Palatinate ; whereas at the fame time he exposes King James's Conduct.

It's a vulgar Mistake, that he came to be the First Minister, merely through the Caprice of King James; for the Court unanimously promoted his Interest, and recommended him to the highest Favour, in opposition to Somerset, whose Atrogancy, Covetousness, and Pride, had disoblig'd every Body, and made both the King and the Court weary of him. No Servant did his Master more Honour in the Magnificence of his Train, and the splendid Manner of his Living; especially in his Embally to France; where in the Gracefulness of his Person, and Nobleness of his Behaviour and Equipage, he out-did any thing that ever was feen 91

feen of that kind before. He was more form'd for a Court than a Camp; and though very Brave in his Perfon, he was Unfuccefsful in the only *Military Expedi*tion he was engag'd in, which was that of Rochell: And when he was upon the embarking a fecond time to repair that Difgrace, he was bafely murther'd amidft a Crowd of his Friends, and in the beight of his Glory.

To return to King Charles's Character. If he had any Personal Faults, they were much over-weigh'd by his Virtues : But an Immoderate Defire of Power, beyond what the Constitution did allow of, was the Rock he fplit upon. He might have been happy, if he had trufted more to his own Judgment, than that of those about him; for as in his nature he was an Enemy to all violent Measures, fo was he apt to fubmit his own Reafon to that of others, when any fuch things came under confideration. There was another Error that run through the whole Management of his Affairs, both Domeftick and Publick, and which occasion'd a great part of his Missortunes : He appear'd many times stiff and positive in denying at first, what he granted afterwards out of time, and too late to give fatif-fatisfaction; which encourag'd ambitious and interested Persons to ask more than they thought of at first, and lost him the fruits of his former Concellions. So that in the whole Conduct of his Life he verified this Maxim, That Errors in Goverament bave ruin'd more Princes than their Personal Vices.

92

MEMOIRS, GC.

I shall have done with this Melancholy Subject, after the Reader has been acquainted with one remarkable Accident, nor hitherto mention'd with that Exactnefs it deferves, by any Author I know of; which confidering its Confequences, is an extraordinary Instance, upon what fmall Hinges the greatest Revolutions may turn.

That the principal Rife of all King The true Charles's latter Troubles, was from the Caufe of Second War with the Scots, has been alrea- coming dy show'd. But what the Motives were first into that embolden'd the Scots to alter their Measures from those they had observed in the first War, continues in great part a Mystery to this Day. In the first War, they ftood upon the Defensive only, and came no further than their own Borders; but in the fecond they acted fo much on the offensive, that they march'd into England as far as Durham, and were coming on the Scots England.

93

on further, if the Treaty that was fet afoot at Rippon had not ftopt them. All the Accounts we have of this Proceeding of the Scots, do feem to be grounded upon the Informations they had of the Backwardness of England to affilt the King in this War; and that they were well assurid of Friends all over the Kingdom, and fome of nearest accels to the King's Perfon, who they knew would interpofe in their 'behalf, rather than Matters fhould come to Extremities. But thefe general Encouragements can hardly be thought to have had fuch weight with the Scots, as to make them venture upon fo bold an Attempt; and therefore it's but reasonable to believe they went upon furer Grounds, when they made this Invahon.

This Matter will be let in a clearer Light, when the Reader is acquainted, That a Forg'd Letter (pretended to be fent from fome of the most Leading Men of the Nobility of England) came to have the fame effects as if it had been a True One, and really fign'd by the fame Perfons whose Names were affix'd to 'ir. Which fell out in this manner.

After the Pacification at Duns, which put an end to the first War, the King at his his Return to London, was prevail'd with, upon the account of feveral Things the Scots were faid to have done contrary to the Articles of the Treaty, and the Duty of Subjects, to order the Pacification to be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman. To reduce them to Obedience, he was meditating a New War, and in order thereto was levying another Army, and was pleas'd to call a Parliament to affift him in it. The Scots had their Commissioners at London at that time, who wanted not Friends in both Houses to inform them of every thing that happen'd in Parliament and Council, which they fail'd not to write home to their Countrey; advising them to be on their Guard, and to put themselves in a Posture not to be surpriz'd.

MEMOIRS, C.

The Scots knowing how Matters went in England, and that a new Storm was like to break out upon them, were refolv'd to put themfelves into a Posture of Defence; and to the Forces they had not yet disbanded, they added confiderable new Levies both of Horse and Foot. Their Preparations went faster on than the King's, and with the more Cheerfulness; for by this time he had parted on ill Terms with his Parliament, and withwithout obtaining a Supply. While the King was advancing towards the North, the Scots drew to their Borders; and it was debated at feveral Councils of War, where a Committee of Estates affisted, Whether they should expect the King upon the Borders, as they had done before, or march into England, and carry the War out of their own Countrey. But they had taken no Resolution in the matter, before the King was got as far as Tork.

In this nice Juncture there came a Gentleman to the English Border, who. fent a Message to the Earl of Rothes, That he defir'd to acquaint him with a Matter of the greatest Importance and Secrecy, if he might privately and with fafety speak with him alone. Rothes thereupon fent a Trusty Servant with a Passport, to conduct him to his Quarters; where the Gentleman told him, That he was directed particularly to him, as a Per-fon of great Honour, and whom they could fafely truft, with a Meffage from feveral Great Men of England; who were griev'd for the Ruin they forefaw must necessarily attend their Countrey, if the King should make himself Absolute Ma-Iter of Scotland ; Jeeing after that, they were were to expect the same Fate, confidering how little to the King's fatisfaction things had been carried in the Parliament of England, and how much he had refented their refufing a Subfidy to carry on this War. He told him, That nothing was so much defir'd in England, as a Free Parliament to redrefs their Grievances : And if the Scots would march immediately into England; the King must necessarily be straightned to that degree in his Affairs, as to be oblig d to call a Parliament : And that upon their March, the City of London, and the greats est part of the Nobility and Gentry would not only petition the King for a Free Parliament, but likewise mediate between the King and them, and bring matters to such an accommodation, as might be for the good of both Nations Adding withal, That if the Scots flipt this Opportunity, they were net ver to expect the like again. The Gentleman having delivered this Meffage, gave the Earl a Letter directed to him, and fign'd by about Twelve Noblemen; much to the fame purpofe, but writ more cautiously, and in more general terms; defiring him for a farther Explanation, to give intire Credit to the Bearer, whom they had fully inform'd of their Intentions.

MEMOIRS, ÔĈ.

Rothes;

98

Rothes, with the Gentleman's leave. acquainted General Lesley, afterwards Earl of Leven, and one or two of the most leading Men of the Committee of Estates, with this Message ; and upon folemn Promises of Secrety, show'd them the Letter; both which agreeing fo well in the main with the Intelligence they had receiv'd from England, and fuiting with their own Inclinations, determin'd them in the Point : And next Morning, in the Council of War, It was refolv'd to march into England that Afternoon ; which accordingly they did. Rothes in the mean time dispatch'd back the Mesfenger with an Anfwer to the Noblemen he fuppos'd had writ to him ; Thanking them for their Advice, and acquainting them with the Refolution had been taken thereupon:

It fell out afterwards at the Treaty of Rippon, when the Englifb and Scotch Commissioners grew familiar with one another, that the Earl of Rothes came from Newcastle to the Place of Treaty; and one of the Englifb Noblemen making him a Vist, they fell into discourse about the present Juncture of Affairs. The Englifb Nobleman express dhow much he had been surprized upon the first News of the Scots entring into England; and told him, That though he hop'd it would now turn to the advantage of both Nations; yet it was in it felf a dangerous and rash Attempt, and might have been fatal to the Scots, if the King had not been pleas'd to enter into a Treaty for an Accommodation of Matters in difpute between them. Rothes was at a stand what to make of this Difcourfe, confidering this Nobleman was one of those whole Name was to the Letter formerly mention'd; and therefore answer'd, That be wonder'd his Lordship was surprized at an Action he had fo much influenc'd : And that if it had not been for the invitation of him-Self and his Friends, perhaps the Scots Army might have continued still on the other hde of Tweed. The Two Lords being equally in the dark as to one another's meaning, were at length, upon produ-cing of the Letter, both of them undeceiv'd, and found it was a mere Forgery ; which was afterwards acknowledg'd by the Contriver, who was the Lord Savile, created some time after Earl of Suffex.

This Letter, though forgotten now, was much talk'd of during the Civil Wars: And I have feen feveral Original Papers of those Times, that H 2 men-

MEMOIRS, GC.

The Lord Wharton. mention'd it. A Noble Lord, lately dead whose Name was to the Letter, never made any fcruple of telling this Paffage to his Friends, in the manner I have re-lated it. And I once had a Copy of the Letter it felf (from the Original, which was then, and I believe is still among the Papers of the Noble Family of Rothes), which I have fince loft. I must confers, I have dwelt longer upon this matter, than confifts with the Brevity I intended, and that it might have been more properly mention'd in another place : Yet thus it was, that a Counterfeit Invitation brought the Scots into England, in the Year 1640. And confidering the Confequences, it may be faid, That Providence many times seems to play with Human Affairs, and influences the Fate of Kingdoms by Counsels and Measures the most improbable to succeed, if he had not defign'd them to be subservient to his great Ends.

Bishop of Salisbury's Memoirs of the Dukes of Hamilton. There is an Historian for whom I have the highest Veneration; who in his Memoirs of the Dukes of Hamilton, mentions a Passage not unlike to this, and perhaps it may be the very same, though his Relation and mine differ in the time, and fome other Circumstances. And seeing I happen'd happen'd to look into that Book fome time after I had writ thefe Sheets; that I may do Juftice to its Reverend Author, whofe Information I am willing to believe may be better than my own, though I had mine from no common hands, I shall give an Account of it in his own words; and the rather, for that I do not remember the Date of the Letter upon which the Passage turns, though I do the main Defign and Contents of it.

"But that the Reader may not be "wholly in the dark, fays this Great Hiforian, about the Grounds of this Confidence the Covenanters had, I fhall fet down what I had from fome Perfons of Great Honour, who were fully inform'd about it. When the Earls of Dumfermling and Loudon came to London, a Perfon of Quality of the English Nation (whofe Name is fupprefs d becaufe of the Infamy of this Action) came to them, and with great Vehemence prefs'd them to engage in a new War; and among other Motives brought them Engagements in Writing from most of the greatest Peers of England, to join with them, and affist them when they should come into Eng-H 3 " land

" land with their Army. This did much " animate them; for they had not the " leaft doubt of the Papers brought them. " But all this was difcovered at the Treaty of Rippon, to have been a base Forgery : " " For there the Scottifh Lords looking " very fullenly upon fome of the English " Lords, as on Perfons of no Faith or " Truth, the Lord Mandevil came to the " Earl of Rothes, and ask'd the reafon of " that change of their Countenances and " Behaviour in them ; who after fome " high Reflections, at length challeng'd " him and the other Lords of not keep-" ing what they engag'd to them. Up-" which that Lord flood amaz'd, and told him, and fo did the other Lords " " there, That they had fent no fuch " Meffages nor Papers to them; and $٤ that they had been abus'd by the black-" est Imposture that ever was. Thus it " appear'd (concludes this Author) how " dangerous it may be to receive fome " things that feem to have the highest probabilities in them, eafily and upon " truft.

To leave this Subject, it may not be improper to add another Pallage out of the fame Book; where that Reverend Trelate fpeaking of the Inducements that that prevail'd with the Scors to come in to the Assistance of the Parliament Three Years after; tells us, " That among other Arguments, That Paper which was fent " down in the Year 1640. as the Engage-" ment of Twenty Eight of the Peers of " England, for their Concurrence with " the Scottifb Army that Year, was shown " to divers, to engage them into a grate-" ful Return to those to whom it was " pretended they were fo highly oblig'd. " For though the Earl of Rothes (and a "few more) were well fatisfied about " the Forgery of that Paper ; yet they " thought That a Secret of too great " Importance to be generally known; " therefore it was still kept up from " the Body of the Nation.

MEMOIRS, Orc.

To fhut up what relates to K. Charles I. K. Charles's After the Treaty of Newport was broke off, and he once more carried away by the Army, he found his Cafe was defpe- (rown to rate, and thereupon began to have fome Thoughts of Refigning the Crown to the Prince of Wales, as the only means in that unhappy Condition, to preferve it for his Family. But before he had time to digest this Resolution, or an opportunity to acquaint the Parliament with it, H_4 he thoughts of Refignjig the his Son.

Digitized by Google

103

he was hurried on to his Tryal. The laft day of that Tryal he carneftly propos'd, That before Sentence pass'd, he might be beard before the Lords and Commons in the Painted Chamber, where he had something to offer for the Peace of the Kingdom, and the Liberty of the Subject, which might settle all differences. It is probable he meant by this, to have refign d the Crown; which his Enemies having some Intimation of, and fearing it might be accepted, they were the more forward to proceed to Sentence and Execution.

About ferting up the Duke of Gloucefler King. Likewife fome Days before his Death, the prevailing Party had thoughts of fetting up the Duke of Gloucester King. This was not kept fo fecret, but King Charles had fome notice of it; for the Duke and his Sifter having leave to wait upon him the Night before the Execution, he took the Young Duke in his Arms, and told him, They were going to take off his Father's Head, and may be they would fet the Crown upon kis Head; which he forbad him to accept of while his Two Elder Brothers were living.

There befel him an Accident, which though a Trifle in it felf, and that no Weight is to be laid upon any thing of that nature ; yet fince the best Authors, both both Ancient and Modern, have not thought it below the Majesty of History to mention the like, it may be the more excufable to infert it.

MEMOIRS, C.

The King being at Oxford during the His con-Civil Wars, went one Day to fee the fulking Publick Library, where he was show'd Virgiliane. among other Books, a Virgil nobly Printed, and exquisitely bound. The Lord Falkland, to divert the King, would have his Majesty make a Tryal of his Fortune by the Sortes Vigilianæ; which every Body knows was an usual kind of Augury fome Ages past. Whereupon the King opening the Book, the Period which happen'd to come up, was that part of Dido's Imprecation against Aneas ; which . Mr. Dryden translates thus:

· Yet let a Race untam'd, and haughty Foes, Annial IV. His peaceful Entrance with dire Arms oppose. 1. 88. Oppress'd with Numbers in th' unequal Field.

His Men discourag'd, and bimself expell'd, Let him for Succour sue from Place to Place, Torn from his Subjects, and his Son's embrace.

First let him see his Friends in Battel slain, And their untimely Fate lament in vain :

And

And when at length the cruel War shall cease, On hard Conditions may he buy his Peace. Nor let him then enjoy Supreme Command, But fall untimely by some hostile Hand, And lye unbury'd on the barren Sand.

It is faid K. Charles feem'd concern'd at this Accident; and that the Lord Falkland observing it, would likewife try his own Fortune in the fame manner; hoping he might fall' upon some Passage that could have no relation to his Case, and thereby divert the King's Thoughts from any Impression the other might have upon him: But the place that Falkland stumbled upon, was yet more suited to his Destiny than the other had been to the King's; being the following Expressions of Evander, upon the untimely Death of his Son Pallas, as they are tranflated by the fame Hand.

Eneid. XI. O Pallas! thou hast fail'd thy plighted Word, ^{1. 230}: To Fight with Caution, not to tempt the Sword:

> I warn'd thee, but in vain; for well I knew, What Perils Touthful Ardour would purfue: That boiling Blood would carry thee too far; Toung as theu were't in Dangers, raw to War!

> > Q curft

MEMO'IRS, Crc.

O curft Effay of Arms, difaft rous Doom, Prelute of Bloody Fields, and Fights to come !

To return to our Hiftory: Upon the Death of King Charles I. there was a Total Eclipfe of the Royal Family for Twelve Years: During a great part of which time an unufual Meteor fill'd the English Orb, and with its furprizing Influence over-aw'd not only Three Kingdoms, but the powerfullest Princes and States about us. A great Man he was, and Posterity might have paid a just Homage to his Memory, if he had not embrued his Hands in the Blood of his Prince, or had not usurp'd upon the Libersies of his Countrey.

It being as natural a Cariofity in Mankind to know the Character of a Fortunate Ulurper, as of a Lawful King, it may not perhaps be much amils to lay fomething of Oliver Cromwell.

By Birth he was a Gentleman, and The Ulurbred up for some time at the University, and Chather though nothing of a Scholar. When the rather of Civil Wars broke out, he took the Par- Oliver liament's Side ; and his first Employment in the Army was a Captain of Horfe, whence by degrees he role to be Lieurenantnant-General under the Earl of Manchefer : In which Post he was the chief Instrument, together with Lieutenant-General Lesley, of gaining the Battel of Marston-Moor, which prov'd the first remarkable Stop to the King's Succefs. Some time after, the Earl of Manchester having refus'd to give an Order to Cromwell, to charge a Party of Horse where the King was perfonally prefent, he came up to London to complain against him, tho he ow'd his advancement chiefly to his Favour. Which the Earl having notice of, and being by this time weary of a War, of which he forefaw the fatal Confequences, he took that opportunity to lay down his Command ; wherein he was fucceeded by Cromwell.

Cromwell,

Sir Thomas Fairfax also laying down his Commission fome time after, he was declar'd General of all the Forces rais'd or to be rais'd by the Parliament; and having modell'd the Parliament and Army to his Mind, he difmiss'd the former, when he had no more use for them; and upon their forc'd Refignation, he assumed the Supreme Power, under the Title of Protector.

Being thus mounted to fo high a Pinacle of Fortune, he became more formidable

MEMOIRS, C.

dable both at Home and Abroad, than most Princes that had ever fat upon the English Throne. And it was faid that Cardinal Mazarine would change Countenance whenever he heard him nam'd; fo that it pass'd into a Proverb in France, That be was not so much afraid of the Devil, as of Oliver Cromwell. He had a Manly Stern Look, and was of an Active Healthful Constitution, able to endure the greatest Toil and Fatigue. Though Brave in his Person, yet he was Wary in his Conduct; for from the time he was first declar'd Protector, he always wore a Coat of Mail under his Cloaths. His Converfation among his Friends was very diverting and familiar, but in publick referv'd and grave. He was sparing in his Diet, though fometimes would drink freely, but never to Excess. He was moderate in all other Pleafures, and for what was visible, free from Immoralities, especially after he came to make a Figure in the World. He writ a tolerable good Hand, and a Stile becoming a Gentleman; except when he had a Mind to wheedle, under the Mask of Religion; which he knew nicely how to do, when his Affairs requir'd it. He affected for the most part a Plainness in his Cloaths; but in them, as

109

as well as in his Gnards and Attendance, he appear'd with Magnificence upon Publick Occafions. No Man was ever better ferv'd, nor took more Pains to be fo. As he was fevere to his Enemies, fo was he beneficent and kind to his Friends. And if he came to hear of a Man fit for his purpofe, though never fo obfcure, he fent for him, and employ'd him; fuiting the Employment to the Perfon, and not the Perfon to the Employment. And upon this Maxim in his Government depended in a great measure his Succefs.

In Matters of greatest Moment, he trusted none but his Secretary Thurlo, and oftentimes not him. An Instance of which Thurlo us'd to tell of himself; That he was once commanded by Cromwell to go at a certain hour to Grays-Inn, and at fuch a Place deliver a Bill of Twenty thousand Pounds, payable to the Bearer at Genoua, to a Man he should find walking in such a Habit and Posture as he describ'd him, without speaking one Word. Which accordingly Thurlo did; and never knew to his dying Day, either the Person or the Occaston.

At another time the Protector coming late at Night to Thurlos Office, and beginning to give him Directions about fomefomething of great Importance and Secrefy, he took notice that Mr. Moreland, one of the Clerks, afterward Sir Samuel Moreland, was in the Room, which he had not obferv'd before ; and fearing he might have over-heard their Difcourfe, though he pretended to be afleep upon his Desk, he drew a Ponyard, which he always carried under his Coar, and was going to difpatch Moreland upon the Spot, if Tburlo had not with great Intreaties prevail'd with him to defift, affuring him that Moreland had fat up two Nights together, and was now certainly faft afleep.

There was not the finalleft Accident that befel King Charles the Second in his Exile, but he knew it perfectly well; infomuch that having given leave to an English Nobleman to Travel, upon condition he should not see Charles Stuart; he ask'd him at his Return, If he had punctually obey'd his Commands? Which the other affirming he had; Cromwell replied, It's true you did not see bim; for to keep-your Word with me, you agreed to meet in the Dark, the Candles being put out for that end: And withal, told him all the particulars that pass'd in Conversation betwixt the King and him at their Meeting.

That

MEMOIRS, CC.

The Bulinefs of Dunkirk.

That he had Spies about King Charles, was not strange; but his Intelligence reach'd the most secret Transactions of other Princes; and when the Matter was communicated to but very few. Of which we have a notable Instance in the Business of Dunkirk. There was an Article in the Treaty between France and the Protector, That if Dunkirk came to be taken, it should be immediately deliver'd up to the English; and his Ambassador Lockart had Orders to take possession of it accordingly. When the French Army, being join'd with the English Auxiliaries, was in its March to Invest the Town, Cromwell sent one Morning for the French Ambassador to Whitehall, and upbraided him publickly for his Master's defign'd Breach of Promife, in giving fecret Or-ders to the French General to keep Poffef-fion of Dunkirk, in cafe it was taken, contrary to the Treaty between them. The Ambassador protested he knew nothing of the matter, as indeed he did not, and begg d leave to assure him, that there was no fuch thing thought of. Upon which Cromwell pulling a Paper out of his Pocket, Here (fays he) is the Copy of the Cardinal's Order : And I defire you to dispatch immediately an Express, to let him him know, that I am not to be impos'dupon; and that if he deliver not up the Keys of the Town of Dunkirk to Lockhart within an hour after it (hall be taken, tell him, 1 ll come in Person, and demand them at the Gates of Paris. There were but Four Perfons faid to be privy to this Order, the Queen-Mother, the Cardinal, the Mareschal de Turrenne, and a Secretary, whole Name it is not fit at this time to mention. The Cardinal for a long time blam'd the Queen, as if the might possibly have blabb'd it out to some of her Women: Whereas it was found, after the Secretary's death, That he had kept a fecret Correspondence with Cromwell for several Years; and therefore it was not doubted but he had fent him the Copy of the Order above-mention'd.

Memoirs, &c.

The Message had its effect; for Dunkirk was put into the possession of the English. And to palliate the matter, the Duke and Mareschal of Crequy was dispatch'd into England, Ambassador Extraordinary, to Compliment Cromwell, attended with a numerous and Splendid Train of Persons of Quality; among whom was a Prince of the Blood, and Muncini, Mazarine's Nephew, who brought a Letter from his Uncle to the I Pro-

Protector, full of the highest Expression ons of Respect ; and assuring his Highness, That being within view of the Eng-lith Shore, nothing but the King's Indispofition (who lay then ill of the Small-Pox at Calais) could have hinder'd him to come over to Éngland, that he might enjoy the . Honour of waiting upon one of the Greatest Men that ever was; and whom, next to bis Master, his greatest Ambition was to serve. But being deprived of so great a Happines, he had fent the Person that was nearest to him in Blood, to affure him of the profound Veneration he had for his Person, and how much he was refolu'd, to the utmost of his Power, to cultivate a perpetual Amity and. Friendship betwixt his Master and him.

Few Princes ever bore their Character higher upon all occasions, than Oliver Cromwell, especially in his Treaties with Crown'd-Heads. And it's a thing without Example, that's mention'd by one of the best inform'd Historians of the Age, Puffendorf, in the Life of the late Elector of Brandenburgh, That in Cromwell's League with France against Spain, he would not allow the French King to call himself King of France, but of the French; whereas he took to himself now only the Title of Protector of England, but but likewife of France. And which is yet more furprizing, and which can hardly be believ'd, but for the Authority of the Author, whose own Words are in Puffendorf the Margin, in the Instrument of the de Rebus Gestu Frés Treaty, the Protector's Name was put derici Wils before the French King's. It's true, France belimi Elewas then under a Minority, and was not Geris Brana arriv'd at that Greatness to which it has p. 313. denburgici, fince attain'd. Towards which, Cromwell Id porro contributed not a little, by that League Protectos with France against Spain; being the risin His falfest Step he ever made, with respect spanos adco opporª to the Tranquility of Earope. tunum. Gallo adcedebat, ut fummo Studio istum fædore fibi innettere ftuderet, etis am concesso, ut Cromwellus eundem, Gallorum Regein, non Gallidrum nuncuparet, alia ipse Protectoris quoque Franciæ, vocabulum, ficut Angliæ affumptutus: Simul pateretur Cromwellum Instrumento suo Nomen titulumque ante Gallicum ponere.

MEMOIRS, C.

As every thing did contribute to the Fall of King Charles I. fo did every thing contribute to the Rife of Cromwell. And as there was no defign at first against the King's Life, fo it's probable that Cromwell had no Thoughts, for a long time, of ever arriving at what he afterwards was. It is known he was once in Treaty with the King, after the Army had carried his Majesty away from Holmby House, to have restor'd him to the Throne ; which I 2 pro-probably he would have done, if the Secret had not been like to take Vent, by the Indifcretion of fome about the King; which push'd Cromwell on to prevent bis own, by the Ruin of the King.

It's likewise certain, that the Title of Protector did not fatisfie his Ambition, but that he aim d to be King. The Matter was for some time under Consideration, both in his Mock Parliament, and Council of State; infomuch, that a Crown was actually made, and brought to Whitehall for that purpose. But the Aversion he found in the Army against it. and the fear of the Commonwealth-Party, oblig'd him to lay the Thoughts of it aside, at least for that time. Yer it's probable these high Aims did not dye, but with himfelf: For to be able with the help of Spanish Gold to carry on his Defign in England, without depending upon a Parliament for Money, is thought was the true Motive of his Attempt upon St. Domingo; which was the only Action of War he fail'd in.

But notwithstanding his specious Pretences to the contrary, Cromwell invaded and betrayed the Liberties of his Countrey, and acted a more Tyrannical and Arbitrary Part than all the Kings of England land together had done fince the Norman Conquest. And yet after all, his Good Fortune accompanied him to the last; for after a long Chain of Success, he died in Peace, and in the Arms of his Friends: was buried among the Kings with a Royal Pomp, and his Death condot d by the Greatest Princes and States of Christendom, in Solemn Embassies to his Son.

MEMOIRS, Orc.

But this is not all; for whatever Reafons the Houfe of Austria had to hate the Memory of Cromwell, yet his causing the Portugal Ambaffador's Brother to be Executed for a Tumult in London, notwithftanding his Plea of being a Publick Minifter as well as his Brother, was near Twenty Years after Cromwell's Death, brought as a Precedent by the prefent Emperor, to juftify his arrefting and carrying off the Prince of Furstenburgh at the Treaty of Cologne, notwithstanding Furstenburgb's being a Plenipotentiary for the Elector of that Name. And in the Printed Manifesto published by the Emperor upon that occasion, this piece of Cromwell's Justice in executing the Portuguese Gentleman, is related at large.

To fum up Cromwell's Character, it's observable, That as the Ides of March were equally fortunate and fatal to Julius I 3

lius Cæfar, another famous Invader of the Liberties of his Countrey; fo was the Third of September to Oliver Cromwell; For on that Day he was born; on that Day he fought the Three great Battels of Marfton-Moor, Worcefter, and Dunbar; and on that Day he died.

Cromwell died in the peaceable Poffeffion of the Sovereign Power, though dif guis'd under another Name, and left it to a Son that bad neither Heart nor Abilities to keep it. The Genius of the Nation return'd to its Natural Byass; and Monarchy was fo much interwoven with the Laws, Customs, and the first Threads of the English Constitution, that it was altogether impoffible it could be ever totally worn out. Our Ancestors had wifely setled themselves upon that Bottom ; and those very Men that fome Years before had juffled out Monarchy, upon the account of its Encroachments upon the Rights of the People, were become as zealous now to reftore it again, upon the Encroachments that the assuming part of the People had made of late upon the Rights of their Fellow-Subjects. For near two Years together after Cronwell's Death, the Government of England underwent various Shapes, and every Month almost almost produc'd a New Scheme; till in the end all these Convulsions co-operated to turn the Nation again upon its True and Ancient Basis. Thence it was, that the Son of King Charles the First, after Ten Years Exile, was reftor'd to his Father's Throne in the Year 1660, without Blood, or any Remarkable Opposition.

118

This Revolution was the more to be The Re-formation admir'd, fince not only all Attempts to of King bring King Charles back by force of Arms, Charles IL proy'd ineffectual; but that notwithstanding upon Cromwell's Death, every thing at home feem'd to concur to his Restoration ; yet the bare Name of an English Parliament, though but the Shadow of what formerly it was, continued to be fo terrible abroad, that neither France nor Spain durst venture to give King Charles the least affiftance to regain his Throne; but on the contrary, were oblig'd to treat him in a manner altogether unworthy of a Crown'd Head: As appears by the following Inftances at the The Beba-Treaty of the Pyrenees.

King Charles after having in vain and spamifought a Sanctuary in France, was necessirated to throw himself upon the Friend- at the ship of Spain. He was at Bruffels when Treaty of I 4 viour of the Franch aras to K. Charles 11. the lyreho nees,

Digitized by Google.

119

he receiv'd the News of the Disposition that was in England to restore him just at the time the Conferences were to begin between Cardinal Mazarine, and Don Lewis de Haro, the two Plenipotentiaries of France and Spain, in order to a General Peace. This determin d King Charles to take Poft from Bruffels through France, to the Place of Treaty, that he might in Person reprefent his Interests to these Two Ministers. He judg d the Spaniards had reason to be Enemics to the then Government in England, for not only having taken Dunkirk and Jamaica from them, and enter'd into a League with Portugal against them, but for endeavouring all that was possible to perfuade the French to continue the War. Upon the other hand it was but reasonable to think that France could not be well pleas'd to see the English Master of fuch a Frontier Town as Dunkirk ; or that Mazarine, the most Ambitious Man upon Earth, would not be willing to raife his own Glory, by efpoufing the Caufe of an Exil'd Prince, effectally when there was fo great probability of Succefs.

Memoirs Politick de Monfieur du Meut. Notwithstanding all these plausible Appearances, King Charles made this long Journey to no purpose. It's true, Dom

120

Don Lewis de Haro receiv'd him with all poffible Marks of Refpect : But the Cardinal politively deny'd him Access. All he could be brought to, after feveral Meffages from the King, was, to allow the Duke of Ormond to talk to him upon the Road from St. Jean de Luz to the Place of Treaty, as if it had been but an accidental Rencounter. Ormond obtain'd nothing of the Cardinal, but general and ambiguous Answers : Till being press'd, he told Ormond plainly, That all his Master could do for bis Coufin the King of England, was to compassionate bis Missfortunes; as not being in a condition himself to break with the Government of England, with which his Affairs oblig'd him to keep a good Correspondence. Over and above this Neglect of Mazarine's, King Charles had the Mortification to fee Ambaslador Lockbart receiv'd at the fame time with the greatest Pomp and Splendor, having the Cardinal's Coaches and Guards fent a day's Journey to receive him, and the Cardinal giving him the Right Hand, which was a Refpect he denied the Ambassadors of Crown'd Heads. Nor was Don Lewis kinder upon the matter to King Charles, notwithstanding all his Civilities; for having ask'd the Command mand of the Army in Flanders, which the Prince of Conde was by the Treaty oblig'd to to quit, Don Lewis refus'd it. All which will be a lafting Example to Pofterity, bow little Truft is to be repos'd in Foreign Aid, when a Prince comes to need it, for recovering bis Throne.

Monk's part in the Reftoration.

It were the highest Injustice to deny General Monk the greatest Share of the Honour in Restoring King Charles II. and yet it is a question whether his Defign to do it, was of to long standing as some have reported. It's probable he had no Thoughts that way, till about the time that Richard Cromwell was depriv'd of the Government : In which he was afterwards the more confirm'd, upon the Army in England's fetting up once more for themfelves. If he had really form'd an Intention at that time to bring back the King, it must be confessid he acted the part of a Politician much better than that of a Christian ; for he declared once again at that time, for a Commonwealth, without the King, a Single Perfon, or Houfe of Lords ; and formally Renounc'd the Family of the Stuarts. All which will appear by a Lester fign'd by him and his Officers to the Parliamenr, upon Ri-chard's Abdication, and the Declaration it it felf, mention'd at length in the Appen-Appendix, Numb 11, p. 360.

MEMOIRS, OC.

It's, hardly to be imagin'd he had a 'mind to fet up for himfelf, as his Enemies have given out; for he could not but fee the whole Nation was returning apace to their Ancient Monarchical Principles; and therefore he had little elfe to do, but to comply a while with the Times, till by declaring for a Free Parliament, he pav'd the way for the King's Return. It's certain the People that then alfum'd the Supreme Power, were jealous of his Intentions; and it was within an Ace he elcap'd a Trap laid for him, juft at the time when he was ready to march from Scotland, which would have inevitably ruin'd his Defign, if a mere Accident had not interven'd.

For Monk keeping his ordinary Refidence at Dalkeith, fome four Miles on this fide of Edinburgh; the London Pacquet touch'd conftantly there, that the General might have his Letters before it reach'd Edinburgh. The Committee of Safety being refolv'd to fecure Monk, dispatch'd fecret Orders to Scatland by the ordinary Pacquet, left an Express might give fufpicion; and instead of directing the Label for Dalkeith, as was usual, usual, it was order'd strait for Edinburgh. It happen'd that one of Monk's Liteguard met accidentally the Post turning out of the Road that led to Dalkeith; and finding he had not touch'd there, he brought him back, notwithstanding the Label was directed otherwise. Monk suspecting something, open'd all the 'Letters that he found directed to the Officers of the Army; among which there was one from the Committee of Safety to Colonel Thomas Wilks, ordering him to use the most effectual, speedy, and secret way to secure the Person of General Monk, and to send him up to London under a strong Guard, in a Frigat that lay in Leith Road; and then to take upon him the Command of the Army, till farther Order.

Having taken out this, and what other Letters he thought fit, together with his own from the fame Committee, full of high Compliments, and Expressions of Trust, he sent away the Pacquet as it was directed. But having communicated the matter to some of his particular Friends, he gave Orders for a General Review of the Army to be made next Morning at Edinburgh, where he arrested Colonel Wilks, and some other Officers he had had reason to suspect, and sent them Prifoners to the Castle; filling up their Commissions with others of his own Creatures.

MEMOIRS, CC.

Monk in his March through England, and after he came to London, carried on the Thread of Diffimulation with wonderful dexterity, till all things were fully ripe for throwing off the Mask, and calling home the King. As he was fingularly happy in being the Chief Inftrument of that Revolution, he was no lefs in the Senfe King Charles continued to express of so great an Oligation. And it show'd him to be a Man of true Judgment, That the Duke of Albemarle behay'd himself in such a manner to the Prince he had thus oblig'd, as never to seem to overvalue the Services of General Monk.

King Charles the Second prov'd one of the Fineft Gentlemen of the Age, and had Abilities to make one of the Beft of Kings. The firft Years of his Reign were a continued Jubilee. And while we were reaping the Fruits of Peace at Home, after the Miferies of a long Civil War, a Potent Neighbour was laying the Foundation of a Power Abroad, that has fince fince been the Envy and Terror of Europe. One might have thought that his Parliament had glutted his Ambition to the full, by heaping those Prerogatives upon him, which had been contested for with his Father, at the Expence of so much Blood and Treasure : But he grasp'd early after more, and from his first Accession to the Crown, show'd but little Inclination to depend upon Parliaments. Of which we have a remarkable Instance in an Affair that was one of the true Causes of the Disgrace of that Great Man, Chancellor Clarendon, which happen'd a few Years after.

125

:

It looks as if Heaven took a more than ordinary Care of England, that we did not throw up our Liberties all at once, upon the Restoration of that King ; for though fome were for bringing him back upon Terms ; yet after he was once come, he posses'd so intircly the Hearts of his People, that they thought nothing was too much for them to grant, or for him to receive. Among other Defigns to please him, there was one form'd at Court, to fettle fuch a Revenue upon him by Parliament during Life, as fhould place him beyond the necessary of asking more, except in the Cafe of a War, or lome fome fuch extraordinary Occasion. The Earl of Southampton, Lord High Treasurer, came heartily into it, out of a mere Prin-. ciple of Honour and Affection to the King; but Chancellor Clarendon fecretly oppos'd it. It happen'd that they two had a private Conference about the matter; and the Chancellor being earnest to bring the Treasurer to his Opinion, took the freedom to tell him, That he was better acquainted with the King's Temper and Inclinations, than Southampton could reasonably expect to be, having had long and intimate Acquaintance with his Majesty abroad; and that he knew him fo well, that if fuch a Revenue was once fetled upon him for Life, neither of them Two would be of any farther use ; and that they were not in probability to see many more Sellions of Parliament during that Reign. Southampton was brought over ; but this Passage could not be kept fo iecret, but it came to King Charles his Ears, which together with other things. wherein Clarendon was misrepresented to him, prov'd the true reafon why he abandon'd him to his Enemies.

MEMOIRS, C.

Notwithstanding this disappointment, King Charles made a shift, partly by his obliging Carriage, partly by other Inducements, ments, to get more Money from his first Parliament towards the Expence of his Pleasures, than all his Predecessors of the Norman Race had obtain'd before, towards the Charges of their Wars. This Parliament had like to have been Perpetual; if the Vigor wherewith they began to prosecute the Popiss Plot, and the Resentment they express'd against his Brother, had not oblig'd him, much against his Will, to part with them, after they had fat near Nineteen Years.

The Difcovery of the Popifh Plot.

That there was at that time a Popilb Plot, and that there always has been one fince the Reformation, to fupport, if not restore the Romish Religion in England, fcarce any body calls in queftion. How far the near Prospect of a Popifh Successor ripen'd the Hopes, and gave new Vigor to the Defigns of that Party, and what Methods they were then upon, to bring those Designs about, Coleman's Letters alone, without any other concurring Evidence, are more than fufficient to put the matter out of doubt. But what Superstructures might have been afterwards built upon an unquestionable Foundation, and how far fome of the Witneffes of that Plot might come to darken Truth by fubsequent Additions of their own, muft must be deferr'd till the Great Account, to be made before a Higher Tribunal: And till then, a great part of the Popifh Plot, as it was then fworn to, will in all human probability lye among the darkest Scenes of our English History. However, this is certain, the Discovery of the Popish Plot had great and various Effects upon the Nation : And it's from this remarkable Period of Time, we may justly reckon a New Æra in the English Account.

128

In the first place, it awaken'd the Na- In Eff. ets tion out of a deep Lethargy they had been in for Nineteen Years together; and alarm'd them with Fears and Jealoufies that have been found to our fad Experience but too well grounded. In the next, it gave the Rife to, at least setled that unhappy diftinction of Whig and Tory among the People of England, that has fince occasion'd fo many Mischiefs. And lastly, the Discovery of the Popili Plot began that open Struggle between King Charles and his People, that occafon'd him not only to diffolve his first Favourite Parliament, and the Three others that fucceeded; but likewife to call no more during the reft of his Reign. All which made way for bringing in queflion the Charters of London, and other K Corpo-

Digitized by Google

129

Corporations, with a great many difinal Effects that follow'd. It was likewife about this time, that a certain Set of Men began a fecond time to adopt into our Religion a Mahometan Principle, under the Names of Paffree Obedience and Non-Refiftance; which fince the time of the Impoftor that first broach'd it, has been the means to enflave a great part of the World.

The Bill of Exclufion.

The great fhare which the Duke of Tork was suppos'd to have had very early, in a Defign to overturn our Religion and Liberties, and the mighty Hopes which the near Prospect of a Popish Successor gave the Roman Catholicks, of bringing about their Grand Project of rooting out the Northern Herefy, were the Reafons why a great part of Both Houses of Parliament had recourse to a Bill of Exclusion against the Duke, as the only effectual means they could think on in that Jun-Aure, to prevent Our intended Ruin. This Prince had been privately reconcil'd to Rome in the time of his Exile : But it feenis it was not thought convenient he should declare himself till several Years after. And though he had abandon'd the Worship of the Church of England, it was accounted a heinous Crime to fay he

120

MEMOIRS, Cre.

he was a Roman Catholick, when every Body knew that he was one; and fome were Fin'd in great Sums of Money for faying it. King Charles's Conversion (if we believe Huddleston the Priest) was of an older Date: But, if true, he either wanted Courage, or thought it not his Interest to declare himself in his Lifetime. If he had any design of introducing Popery, he knew the Temper of the Nation too well, to imagine it could be brought about in a short time, or by such open and barefac'd Methods as his Brother was pleas'd afterwards to put in practice.

But the truth is, King Charles was neither Bigot enough to any Religion, nor lov'd his Ease so little, as to embark in a Bufiness that must at least have disturb d his Quiet, if not hazarded his Crown. The Romifb Emissaries knowing this, were refolv'd to make fure of one of the Brothers: And the Dake was now the Rifing Sun ; King Charles having no prospect of Islue by the Queen. It was not the Roman Catholicks alone, that began to pay him their early Devotions; there were others that came nothing fhort of them in their Addresses to him. He had in the time of his Banishment, and after the Reftoration, acquir'd the Reputation . K 2 of of being Brave, and skill'd in the Art of War : Flanders and the Ocean were the Théatres on which he had given unque-ftionable Proofs of both ; having Commanded the Spanish Horse in-the one, and the English Fleet on the other. From a Prince thus posses'd of a Warlike Character, and thus devoted to the See of Rome, it was no wonder the Roman Catholicks expected, and the Protestants fear'd fome extraordinary Change in England, if ever he should come to wear the And therefore as it was the Crown. Interest of the first to have him upon the Throne, fo it was equally the Interest of the latter to exclude him from it.

It's faid King Charles came in at first to the Bill of Exclusion, or seem'd to do so. The Favourite Mistrefs was prevail'd with, from secret Motives and Prospects of her own, to concur with others in persuading him to abandon his Brother; and waving the Duke's Right, to accept of an Act of Parliament in his own Favour, like that made in the Reign of Henry VIII. by which he should have a Power invested in him, to dispose of the Crown at his Death, under such Restrictions and Limitations as should be agreed on.

Whether

132

Мемонкs, Сс.

Whether any fuch At was really intended, it's hard to determine; but it's certain fuch an Offer was made to King Charles, with a Promife of a confiderable Sum of Money, towards the fupplying his preffing Wants. It's likewife certain, that King Charles feem d willing to accept of it; till it happen'd that a Foreign Court, whofe Intereft it was to fupport the Duke of Tork, ftruck up a Bargain with the King, to give him more Money for refufing, than had been offer'd him for confenting to the Bill of Exclusion. Some time before the Popifh Plot came upon the Stage, King Charles had been prevail'd with to marry the Eldest of his Nieces to the Prince of Orange, as he did afterwards the Youngest to the Prince of Denmark: The happiest Actions of his Life, and by which he made a sufficient Attonement for all the Errors of his Reign. It were Ingratitude to enquire too narrowly into the Motives that induc'd him to these Matches: It's enough to entail a lafting Honour on his Name, that he did it, and did it against the Advice of his Brother, and in fpight of all the Sollicitations that were made to him from Abroad, to marry them to Princes of the Romilb Religion. The Parliament had K 3 had in their view the Princefs of Orange, in the Bill of Exclusion; and it was She and the Prince her Husband that were to have fill'd the Throne, upon the Death of their Uncle. But King Charles either not daring, or not willing to confent to the Bill, he diffolv d both that and the next Parliament at Oxford, merely to ward off the Blow that threaten'd his Brother.

133

After the Diffolution of the Oxford Parliament, King Charles shew'd but little Inclination to call any more; and was prevail'd with to enter into harlher Measures than hitherro he had taken; and which seem'd contrary to his Natural Goodness and Temper. The Charters of the City of London, and other Corporations, stood in the way of an Absolute Government ; and it was refolved to break through this Barrier. In order to which, Quo Warranto's were brought against them; and in progress of time they were either furrendred by the Corporations themselves, or vacated in West-minster-Hall, by a sett of Judges pickt out for that purpose. And it was resolv'd thereby to make one of the Estates of Parliament depend entirely upon the Will and Nomination of the Prince.

While

Digitized by Google.

134

MEMOIRS, CC.

While these Quo Warranto's were going on, whole Peals of Anathema's were rung out against those Patriots 'that had ftood up for the Liberties of their Countrey in the Preceding Parliaments. And it was lookt upon as a Crime against the State, for any one to regret the approach-ing Fate of his Countrey. Even the Holy Scriptures themselves were made a Stale for Arbitrary Power; and the Laws which were given to the Jews as they were a Political State, were now brought in upon every occasion, to countenance the Defigns of the Court. As if those Laws which were intended only to fupport the Political Government of the Jews, were the real Foundation of the Christian Religion ; or that the Constitution of England was founded upon the Jewish Doctrine All which was not much for the Honour of those Gentlemen that broach'd that Notion. This was a time never to be forgot, when to wish well to our Countrey, was a Crime; and when Heaven it felf was rank'd upon our Enemies fide, by fome that pretended to expound its Will. In fome Places a new kind of Funeral Harangues came in fafhion: Our Laws our Liberties, our Parliaments, our Native Rights were to be K 4 buried; buried, but instead of dropping a Tear at their Funeral, fullom Panegyricks were made upon their Murtherers, and Curses denounc'd against those that would have retriev'd them from Destruction.

135

The Difgrace of the Duke of Manmouth, and its Confeguences.

All these Transactions were attended with the Publick Difgrace of the Duke of Monmouth. This Gentleman flood poffess d of all the Qualities requisite to gain him the Love of the People, and stir up the Jealoufy of the Duke of York. King Charles had heap'd Honours upon him; aud nothing pleas'd him fo much as to fee him Great. He had been fent to Scotland in the Year 1679. to suppress an Infurre-Ction which the Severity of Lauderdale's Administration had occasion'd ; where his Lenity towards a People made by Oppreffion mad, gain'd him the ill-will of a Predominant Party at Court. The Zeal he shew'd some time after in the prosecution of the Popifh Plot, and his Friendships with fome that were profess'd Enemies to the Duke, concurr'd to his Fall. Yet King Charles still continued underhand the fame Tenderness for him; though he was declar'd in publick to be in The Duke's Faction Difgrace. at home, and a Foreign Interest abroad, were too powerful for King Charles to grapple grapple with, even though the Fortune of a Favourite Son was at stake.

Digitized by Google

135

The more he was depress d by the Envy of his Uncle, the higher he rofe in the Affections of the People; till the breaking out of what was call'd the Protestant The Pro-Plot, overwhelm d not only lfim, but a Plot. whole Party with him. This Plot was in fome part a greater Mystery than the Popish Plot had been before, and had more difinal Effects. The fhatter'd Remains of English Liberty were then attack'd on every fide; and fome of the Noblest Blood in the Nation was offer'd up a Sacrifice to the Manes of Popish, Martyrs, and made to atone for the Bill of 'Exclusion. Swearing came once more into Fashion, and a new Evidence-Office was erected at Whitehall. But whereas the Witnesses of the Popish Plot were brow-beaten and difcourag'd, those of the Protestant Plot were highly enco rag'd'; and instead of Judges and Juries that might perhaps boggle at half-Evidence, as it fell out in the Profecution of the former; care was taken in this to pick out fuch as should stick at nothing to ferve a Turn. It was by fuch Judges and Juries that the Lord Ruffel and Mr. Sidney fell, and the cutting off those Two 137 .

Two Noble Lives, may be reckon'd among the first Triumphs of the Dukes Party in England.

It's true King Charles feem'd inclin'd to pardon both the one and the other; and the very day the Lord Ruffel was executed, fome Words escap'd him, that shew'd sufficiently his Irrefolution in that matter: But by this time he was too far gone, to make a handsome Retreat on a fudden; and there was observed ever after, a fensible Change in his Temper; for from an Easiness and Debonairness that was natural to him, he came at length to treat Men with Hard Names, and upon some occasions to express a Severity in his Disposition, that he had been ever averse to before.

'The reft of that Reign was one continued Invation upon the Rights of the People, and the Nation feem'd unwilling now to contend for them any more. King Charles, notwithstanding his great Abilities and Fitnes's for busines's, appear'd to be quite lull'd asleep with the Charms of a new-swell'd up Prerogative; while some of our Neighbours were playing their Game, to the Prejudice of England abroad, and the Duke's Creatures were managing all things to their own mind at home. Nature

MEMOIRS, GC.

Nature prevail'd upon King Charles at length; and the shame of feeing himself impos'd upon by others far short of him in Parts, and that the Court was anticipating his Death, by their Addresses to his Brother, as if he had been already King, did help to awaken him out of his Slumber, and brought him to lay a Projest for a mighty Change in the Affairs of England, which probably might have made both him and the Nation happy. If he had liv'd but a few Weeks longer, Monmouth had been recall'd to Court, the Duke of York had been fent beyond Sea, and a New Parliament conven'd. But what farther was to follow, must be buried with his Ashes, there being nothing left us, but bare Suspicions of what might have been. This is certain, his Death came opportunely for the Duke ; and in fuch a Manner, and with fuch Circumstances, as will be a Problem to Posterity, whether he died a Natural Death, or was halten'd to his Grave by Treachery. In fo nice a Point as this is, it becomes one that would write Impartially, to fet Death of down with the exacteft Fidelity, every King Charles IL. thing of Moment of either fide, that may determine the Reader in his Judgment, without venturing to give his own. This

The

139

This Rule I have fet to my felf, in laying down the following Particulars.

The Sufpici ons about the Manner of it confider'd.

It's confect few Princes come to dye a fudden Death, but the World is apt to attribute it to Foul Play, especially if attended with unufual Circumstances in the Time and Manner of it. King Charles had a healthful Constitution beyond most Men, and took great care to preferve it by Diet and Exercife, which naturally promife a long Life. And it was more extraordinary to fee fuch a Man dye before Threefcore, than another in the Bloom of Youth. Now if he died a Natural Death, it's agreed by all, that it must have been an Apoplexy. This Discase feizes all the Vital Faculties at once; and yet for the most part, does not only give fome fhort Warnings of its Approach, by unufual Affections of the Head, but many times is occasion'd by fome evident preceding Caufe. In King Charles's Cafe, there appear'd no visible Cause either near, or remote, to which with any certainty of Reafon, his Di-fease could be ascrib'd; and the Forerunners of it were rather to be found in the Stomach and Bowels, than in the Head. For after he was a-bed, he was overheard to groan most of the Night : And both both then, and next Morning, before he fell into the Fit, he complain d first of a heavy Oppression in his Stomach, and about his Heart, and afterwards of a sharp Pain in those Parts; all which Symptoms had but little relation to an Apoplexy. That Morning there appear'd to every body about him a Ghastliness and Paleness in his Looks : And when he fat down to be shav'd, just before the Fit took him, he could not fit strait, as he used to do, but continued in a ftooping Posture, with his Hand upon his Stomach, till the Fit came. After he had been brought out of it by opening a Vein, he complain'd of a Racking Pain in his Stomach, and of no Indifpolition any where elfe : And during the whole time of his Sicknefs, and even when he feem'd most infensible, he was observed to lay his Hand for the most part upon his Stomach, in a moaning Pofture, and continued fo to his Death. And fo violent was the Pain, that when all hopes were gone, the Phyficians were desir'd to use all their Art to procure him an Eafy Death.

. 140

So much for the Diftemper it felf: There remains fome things to be taken notice of, that fell out before and after his Death. A few days before he was taken ill, ill, King Charles being in Company where the present Posture of Affairs was discours'd of, there escap'd him some warm Expressions about the uncasy Circumstances he was plung'd into, and the ill Measures had been given him : And how in a certain particular Affair he was pleas'd to mention he had been abus'd : Adding in fome Paffion, That if he liv'd but a Month longer, he would find a way to make himself easy for the rest of his Life. This Paffage was whifper'd abroad next day; and the Rumour of recalling the Duke of Monmonth, and fending away the Duke of Tork, came to take Air about the fame time. Indeed all things were making ready, to put the latter in execution; and there is reason to believe the King had intimated as much to the Duke himfelf; for fome of his Richeft Furniture was put up, and his chief Servants order'd to be in a readiness to attend their Master upon an Hour's warning ; and Yatchts were waiting to Transport some Perfon of Quality, without mentioning who it was, or whither bound. The Romash Party that manag'd about Court, were observ'd to be more than ordinary diligent and bufy up and down Whitehall and St. James's, as if fome very important Affair

142

Memoirs, Oc.

Affair was in agitation; and a new and unufual Concern was to be feen on their Countenances. Nor was it any wonder; for in this fulpected Change they were like to be the only Lofers, and all their teeming Hopes were in a fair way to be difappointed. How far the Principles of fome of that Party might leave them at liberty to pufh on their Revenge for this defign'd Affront, as well as to prevent the Blow that threaten'd them, though without the Privacy, much lefs the Confent of the Duke of Tork, is left to the Reader to judge.

There was a Foreign Minister, that fome days before the King fell ill, order'd his Steward to buy a confiderable Parcel of Black Cloth, which ferv'd him and his Retinue after for Mourning : And the late Ambassador Don Pedro Ronquillo, made it no Secret, that he had a Letter from Flanders the Week before King Charles died, that took notice of his Death, as the News there. But both these might fall out by mere Accident.

There remains two things more, that deferve fome Confideration in this matter. When his Body was open'd, there was not fufficient time given for taking an exact Obfervation of his Stomach and Bowels;

MEMOIRS, CC.

Bowels ; which one would think oughr chiefly to have been done, confidering the violent Pains he had there : And when a certain Phyfician feem'd to be more inquisitive than ordinary about the Condition of those Parts, he was taken aside and reprov'd for his needless Curiosty. In the next place, his Body stunk fo ex-tremely within a few Hours after his Death, notwithstanding the Coldness of the Scafon, that the People about him were extremely offended with the Smell: Which is a thing very extraordinary, in one of his ftrong and healthful Conftitutution; and is not a proper Confequent of a mere Apoplectical Diftemper.

There was some Weight laid upon an Accident that fell out at Windsor some Years before his Death : For the King drinking more liberally than usual, after the Fatigue of Riding, he retir'd to the next Room; and wrapping himfelf up in his Cloak, fell asleep upon a Couch. He was but a little time come back to the Company, when a Servant belonging to one of them, lay down upon the fame Couch, in the King's Cloak, and was found stabb'd dead with a Ponyard. Nor was it ever known how it happen'd, but the matter hush d up, and no Enquiry made about it. Τo

Digitized by Google

144

To conclude ; Dr. Short, who was a Man of great Probity and Learning, and a Roman Catholick, made no fcruple to declare his Opinion to fome of his intimate Friends, that he believ d King Charles had foul Play done him. And when he came to die himfelf, express d fome fuspicion that he had met with the fame Treatment for opening his Mind too freely in that Point.

So much for the Circumstances of King Charles's Death that feem to have an ill Aspect. There are others that feem to destroy all Suspicions of Treachery in the matter.

As First, He had liv'd so fast, as might enervate in a great measure the Natural Force of his Constitution, and exhaust his Animal Spirits; and therefore he might be more subject to an Apoplexy, which is a Disease that weakens and locks up these Spirits from performing their usual Functions. And though in his later Years he had given himself more up to the Pleasures of Wine than of Women, that might rather be the effect of Age than of Choice.

Next, it's known he had been once or twice attack'd before, with Fits that much refembled those of which he afterwards died: And yet as the manner of them is told, they look rather to have been Convulfive Motions, than an Apoplexy; feeing they were attended with violent Contorsions of his Face, and Convultions of his whole Body and Limbs. This is the more confirm'd, by a Passage that happen'd during the Heat of the Popifh Plot. King Charles had fome fecret Matters to manage at that time, by the means of a Romilb Priest then beyond Sea, whom he order'd to be privately fent for : And the Gentleman employ'd betwixt the King and him (from whom I had the Story) was directed to bring him in a Difguise to Whitehall. The King and the Priest were a confiderable time together alone in the Clofet, and the Gentleman attended in the next Room : At last the Priest came out with all the Marks of Fright and Aftonishment in his Face; and having recover'd himself a little, he told the Gentleman, That he had run the greatest Rifque ever Man did; for while he was with the King, his Majesty was suddenly furpriz'd with a Fit, accompanied with violent Convulfions of his Body, and Contorfions of his Face, which lasted for fome Moments; and when he was going going to call out for help, the King held him by force till it was over, and then bid him not be afraid, for he had been troubled with the like before; the Prieft adding what a condition he fhould have been in, confidering his Religion, and the prefent Juncture of Affairs, if the King had died of that Fit, and no Body in the Room with him befides himfelf.

MEMOIRS, GC.

But leaving this Story to the Credit of the Priest; there might be another Natural Caufe affign'd for King Charles's falling into fuch a Fit as that of which he died; which is this: He had had for fome time an Islue in his Leg, which run much, and confequently must have . made a great Revultion from his Head, upon which account it's probable it was made. A few Weeks before his Death, he had let it be dried up, contrary to the Advice of his Phyficians, who told him it would prejudice his Health. Their Prognostick was partly true in this, that there came a painful Tumor upon the place where the Islue had been, which prov'd very obstinate, and was not thoroughly heal'd up when he died.

In fine, it is agreed on all Hands, that King Charles express'd no sufficient of his being poyson'd, during all the time of L 2 his his Sickness: Though it must be also obferved, that his Fits were fo violent, that he could not speak when they were upon him, and shew'd an aversion to speaking during the Intervals. And there was not any thing to be seen upon opening his Body, that could reasonably be attributed to the force of Poyson. Yet to allow these Considerations no more weight than they can well bear, this must be acknowledg'd, That there are Poysons which affect originally the Animal Spirits, and are of so subtractions of the Bodies of those they kill.

The Chr. racter of K. Charles the IId. Thus Reign'd, and thus Dy'd King Charles the Second; a Prince endowed with all the Qualities that might juftly have render d him the Delight of Mankind, and entitled him to the Character of one of the greatest Genius's that ever fat upon a Throne, if he had not fullied those Excellent Parts with the fost Pleafures of Ease, and had not entertain'd a Fatal Friendship, that was incompatible with the Interest of England. His Religion was Deism, or rather that which is call'd s; and if in his Exile, or at his Death, he went into that of Rome; the first was to be imputed to a Complaisance for for the Company he was then oblig'd to keep, and the last to a lazy Diffidence in all other Religions, upon a Review of his past Life, and the near approach of an uncertain State. His Perfon was tall and well made, his Conflicution vigorous and healthy; and it's hard to determine, whether he took more pains to preferve it by Diet and Exercise, or to impair it by Excess in his Pleasures. In Health he was a great Pretender to Phylick, and Encourager of Quacks, by whom he was often cheated of confiderable Sums of, Money for their pretended Secrets : But whenever he was indifpos'd, he confulted his Phyficians, and depended on their Skill only.

Digitized by Google

148

His Face was compos'd of harfh Features, difficult to be trac'd with the Pencil; yet in the main it was agreeable; and he had a Noble Majestick Mien. In contradiction to all the common receiv'd Rules of Phyliognomy, he was Merciful, Good-natur'd, and in the last Twenty four Years of his Life, Fortunate, if to fucceed in most of his Defigns, may be call'd fo. Never Prince lov'd Ceremony lefs, or defpis'd the Pageantry of a Crown more; yet he was Master of fomething in his Person and Aspect, that commanded L z manded both Loye and Veneration at once.

He was a great Votary to Love, and yet the easiest and most unconcern'd Rival. He was for the most part not very nice in the choice of his Mistreffes, and feldom possess'd of their First Favours; yet would facrifice all to pleafe them ; and upon every Caprice of theirs, denied himself the use of his Reason, and acted contrary to his Interest. He was a Refpectful, Civil Husband; a Fond Father, a kind Brother; an eafy Enemy; but none of the Firmest or most Grateful Friends: Bountiful by Starts; one Day lavish to his Servants; the next leaving them to ftarve : Glad to win a little Money at Play, and impatient to lofe but the thousandth part of what within an Hour after he would throw away in grofs. He feem'd to have had nothing of Jealoufy in his Nature, neither in Matters of Love nor Power. He bore patiently Rivals in the one, and Competitors in the other ; otherwife he would not have contributed to a Foreign Greatness at Sea, nor given his Brother fo uncontroul'd a share in the Government.

Though his Understanding was quick and lively, with a vast Compass of Thought,

Digitized by Google

150

3

Thought, yet he would fubmit his Judgment in greateft Matters, to others of much inferior Parts : And as he had an extraordinary fhare of Wir himfelf, fo he lov'd it in others, even when pointed against his own Faults and Mismanagements. He had read but little, yet he had a good Taste of Learning, and would reason nicely upon most Sciences. The Mechanicks were one of his peculiar Talents, especially the Art of building and working of Ships; which no Body underftood better, nor if he had liv'd, would have carried it farther. He had a ftrong Laconick way of Expression, and a Gentile, Eafy, and Polite way of Writing: and when he had a mind to lay asside the King, which he often did in felect Companies of his own, there were a thoufand irressifible Charms in his Conversation. He lov'd Money only to spend it: And would privately accept of a small Sum paid to himself, in lieu of a far greater to be paid into the Exchequer.

He lov'd not Business; and sought every occasion to avoid it; which was one reason that he pass'd so much of his time with his Mistress: Yet when Necessity call'd him, none of his Council could-reason more closely upon Matters of State; L 4 and and he would often by fits outdo his Ministers in Application and Diligence. No Age produc'd a greater Master in the Art. of Diffimulation; and yet no Man was lefs upon his Guard, or tooner deceiv d in the Sincerity of others. If he had any ' one fix'd Maxim of Government, it was to play one Party against another, to be thereby the more Master of both : And no Prince underflood better how to shift hands upon every Change of the Scene. To fum up his Character, he was dextrous in all the Arts of Infinuation; and had acquir'd fo great an Afcendant over the Affections of his People, in spite of all the unhappy Measures he had taken, that it may in some sense be faid, He died opportunely for England; fince if he had liv'd, it's probable we might in compliance with him have complimented our felves out of all the Remains of Liberty, if he had had but a mind to be Master of them ; which it's but Charity to believe he had not, at least immediately before his Death.

There is one thing more that may help to make up the Character of this Prince, That in the Lines and Shape of his Face (all but the Teeth) he had a great Refemblance of the Ancient Bustoss and Sta-

MEMOIRS, Crc.

Statues we have of the Emperor Tiberius : Infomuch that one of the most Learned Men of this Age told me, That walking in the Furnefian Gardens at Rome, with a Noble Italian that had been at the Court of England, he took notice of this Resemblance in an Antique Statue of Tiberius; and asking the Italian if he remembred any Prince he had feen that refembled it, the other immediately nam'd King Charles. As there was a great Likenels betwixt these Two Princes in their Faces, there was likewife fome in their Maxims of Government, the Time of their Age in which they came to govern, the Length of their Reigns, and the Suspicions about the manner of their Death. And indeed, excepting Tiberius's Temper, his Cruelty, Jealoufy, and unnatural Lufts, any one that's acquainted with both their Stories, will easily find fomething of a Parallel betwixt them. Nor is this any Reflection upon the Memory of King Charles; for except in what I nam'd, Tiberius may be reckon'd among the Wifeft and the Braveft of those that wore the Imperial Purple.

Upon King Charles's Death, James Duke of Tork mounted the Ihrone, by of King the Name of King James the Second. All James II. the

the former Heats and Animolities against him, and even the very Memory of a Bill of Exclusion, feent d to be now quite forgot, amidst the loud Acclamations of his People at his Accession to the Crown. He had many Years of Experience when he came to it; and few of his Predeceffors could boaft of the like Advantages : In most of the Transactions of the preceeding Reign, he had born a confiderable Share as to Action, but much more as to Counfel and Influence. In the Post of Lord High Admiral of England, he had large opportunities to be fully acquainted with the Native Strength, and peculiar Interest of the Nation, I mean the Affairs of the Navy; in which he had acquir'd defervedly a great Reputation. He had met with but too many occasions to understand the Genius and Temper of the People he was to govern, and to know how far it was impracticable to overturn the Establish'd Religion, or to introduce a New one; for he had wrestled through a great many Difficulties upon the account of his own. He could not but have a true value for his Brother's great Parts and Abilities, and be acquainted with the Arts by which he gain'd and preferv'd the Affections of his People, 101-notwithstanding all the Hardships he had been induc d sometimes to put upon them : And he had feen how fearful and averse he had been to push things too far, or to drive his Subjects to Extremities.

Digitized by Google

154

MEMOIRS, GC.

He had before him the Fatal Example of a Father; who though he was a Protestant, yet upon a false Suspicion of having a Defign to introduce Popery, was fent to his Grave by a violent Death; and he was past Childhood when that Tragedy happen'd, and had suffer'd Ten Years Banishment, among other Consequences that attended it. He had been acquainted abroad with a Princefs fam'd for Parts and chrifting Learning, who Refign'd her Crown, the late Q. of Sueden. apprehending she might be divested of it for embracing the Romish Religion, by those very Subjects that held her before in the greatest Veneration, both upon her own account, and that of a Father, who had rais'd them to the highest Pitch of Glory that ever the Suedifh Nation arriv'd to. And he might have remembred what his Mother faid upon her Return to Somerset-boase after the Restoration, That if the had known the Temper of the People of England some years past, as well as she did then, she had never been oblig'd to leave leave that Houfe. But the Hiftory of his Anceftors might have more fully inform'd him, That those that grasp'd at Immoderate Power, or a Prerogative above the Law, were always Unfortunate, and their Reigns Inglorious.

There was also a Passage at his Father's Death, which he would have done well to have observ'd : He deliver'd his George to Dr. Juxon upon the Scaffold, and bid him Remember, without faying more. The Council of State was willing to know the meaning of that Expression, and call'd the Doctor before them, to give them an Account of it ; who told them, That the King immediately before his coming out to the Place of Execution, had charg'd bim to carry to the Prince his Son, his George, with these his Two last Commands, That he (hould forgive his Murtherers : And, That if he ever came to the Crown, he should so govern his Subjects, as not force them upon Extremities.

Puffendorf, ut lupra.

Over and above all this; one of the beft Historians of the Age, who had the advantage of all the late Elector of Brandenburgh's Papers and Memoirs, acquaints us, That King Charles the Second delivering to King James at his Death, the Key of his Strong Box, advis'd him not to

156

to think upon introducing the Romish Religion into England, it being a thing that was both dangerous and impracticable. And that the late Don Pedro Ronquillo, the Spanish Ambassador, at his first Audience after the Death of King Charles, having ask'd leave to fpeak his mind freely upon that occasion, made bold to tell him, That he Saw several Priests about him, that he knew would importune him to alter the Establish'd Religion in England; but be wish'd his Majesty would not give Ear to their Advice; for if he did, he was afraid his Majesty would have reason to repent of it when it was too late. /This Author tells us, That King James took ill the Freedom of the Spanish Ambaslador; and ask'd him in Paffion, Whether in Spain they advis d with their Confessors? Tes, Sir, (an-fwer'd Ronquillo) we do, and that's the reason our Affairs go so ill. The fame Historian does likewise inform us (but he does not tell us upon Pope linewhat grounds,) That Pope Innocent XI. cent Xith's writ a Letter to King James upon his Ac- Letter to K. James. ceffion to the Crown, to this purpofe, That he was highly pleas'd with his Majesty's Zeal for the Catholick Religion; but he was afraid his Majesty might push it too far, and instead of contributing to his own Greatness, nefs, and to the Advancement of the Car tholick Church, he might come to do both It and himself the greatest Prejudice, by attempting that which his Holiness was well assured from long Experince, could not succeed. This Letter does very well agree with what I shall have occasion to mention afterwards, concerning the Earl of Castlemain's Embassi to Rome.

Digitized by Google

157

How far he profited by all these Advantages on the one hand, and Examples and Advices on the other, will appear in the sequel.

The first Speech he made as King, the day his Brother died, gave hopes of a Happy Reign; and even those that had appear d with the greatest Warmth against him before, were willing now to own themselves to have been mistaken, and were ready to express their Repentance for what was past. For he told them, That fince it had pleas'd Almighty God to place him in that Station, and that he was now to succeed to so good and gracious a King, as well as fo very kind a Brother, he thought fit to declare to them, That he would endeavour to follow his Example, and especially in that of his great Clemency and Tenderness to his People : And that though he had been reported to be a Man for Arbitrary Power, yet he was refolu'd to make it his Endeavour to preferve the Government of England both in Charch and State, as it was then Establish'd by Law. That he knew the Principles of the Church of England were for Monarchy; and that the Members of it had shew'd themselves good and Loyal -Subjects; therefore he would always take care of it, and defend and support it. That he knew that the Laws of England were fufficient to make the King as great a Monarch as he could wish : And that as he would never depart from the just Rights and Pre-rogatives of the Crown, so he would never invade any Man's Property. Concluding, That as he had often hitherto ventur'd his Life in defence of this Nation, So he was resolu'd to go as far as any Man in preserferving it in all its just Rights and Liberties.

1 5 8

If a Trajan or an Antoninus had been to lay down a Scheme of Government to make their People happy, they could not have done it in better Terms, nor could the Nation well defire, or in reason with for more. If his fubfequent Actions had come up to it, he had eterniz'd his Name, and might have revived in himfelf the Memory of those of his Ancestors who have defervedly given them by Posterity, the Character of Good and Great.

This

This promising Speech was not many days old, nor King Charles's Ashes well cold, when the Nation was alarm'd with a Proclamation for levying that part of the Customs that had been granted to his Brother only for Life, and was expir'd at his Death. This was not only an open Violation of his Promise in his forementioned Speech, bur of our Fundamental Constitution, by which no Money can be levied on the Subjea, but by their Confent in Parliament. As it was contrary to Law, fo it was altogether needless at that time, fince a Parliament was to meet within a few days, which no body doubted would in a Parliamentary way continue the fame Cuftoms for his Life, as they had been for his Brother's.

He was not the first Prince that did illegally feize what he had no Right to: But few Instances can be given of a King that did openly violate the Constitution of his Countrey, to obtain that which he was certain would be granted him in a Legal Manner, and with the Good-Will of his People.

Notwithstanding this unufual Stretch of Power upon his entring into the Administration, yet the Parliament he had call'd fat down in a good Humour, and with

MEMOIRS, Orc.

with a hearty Inclination to do every thing in compliance with him, that might tend to his Honour or Safery. His Speech to both Haufes was much of the fame strain with his former to the Council upon his Brother's Death, but more full. He. demanded the fetling of his Revenue during Life, as it was in his Brother's time; and acquainted them with the Earl of Argyle's Landing in Scotland; and threaten'd to reward his Treason as it deferv'd.

This Speech buoy'd up the Minds of the People that had been fufficiently flunn'd before with the Unprefidented Proclamation for levying the Cuftoms; And fo earneft was the Parliament to give the King no juft occasion of Difpleasure, and so great a Confidence did they place in a Royal Promife from the Throne, that they immediately complied with him in the Matter of the Revenue, thank'd him for his Speech, and refolv'd by an Unanimous Vote, To assift him with their Lives and Fortunes against the Earl of Argyle, and all other his Evenies whatfoever.

Some few Days after, the Bill for fetling his Revenue, was prefented to him for his Affent; upon which Occasion he M made made them another Memorable Speech ; He thank'd them for the Bill; told them of want of Stores in the Navy and Ordnance; of the Anticipations that were upon feveral Branches of the Revenue; of the Debts due to bu Brother's Servants and Family; which he faid were fuch as deserv'd compassion; and of the extraordinary charges he must be at in suppressing the Rebellion in Scotland: Upon all which accounts he demanded an extraordinary Supply; and fumm'd up all, with recommending to them the Care of the Navy, which he was pleas'd to call the Strength and Glory of the Nation : And in the end told them, He could not express bis Concern upon that occasion more suitable to his own Thoughts of it, than by affuring them, He bad a true English Heart, as jealous of the Honour of the Nation, as Theirs could be: And that he pleas'd himself with the Hopes, Appendiz. That by God's Bleffing and the Parliament's Numb 12 167. HisSpeech Affistance, be might carry the Reputation to the Par- of it higher in the World, than ever liament. it had been in the time of any of his Anceltors.

> It was no wonder that a Speech of this Strain, so becoming an English Monarch, did meet with a kind Reception from an English Parliament, and be answer'd, as it was,

was, with a large Supply ; fince a Neighbouring Court was thereupon at a fland what to think of a Prince they had reckon'd upon as their own, and of whofe real Friendship this unexpected Speech gave them ground to doubt. They well knew, that a true English Heart was diametrically opposite to their Defigns; and that a King jealous of the Honour of the English Nation, must needs be an Enemy to all Encroachments of any Neighbouring State. To plunge that Court yet the more into a Maze of Thoughts about King James upon this Occasion, the carrying the Reputation of England yet higher in the World than ever it had been in the time of any of his Ancestors, were Words that feem'd to promife no lefs than the imitating, or rather out-doing of an Edward III. or a Henry V. that had rais'd to themselves immortal Trophies, at the Expence of their Neighbours, and wrote their own Panegyricks with their Enemies Blood.

How this Speech was relifh'd abroad, cannot be better express'd, than in Two Letters writ at that time by a certain Great Minister, to an Ambassador here, which being communicated to me by a Noble Person, into whose Hands many of M 2 that that Ambassador's Papers happen'd to fall upon the late Revolution, they are plac'd at length in the Appendix in English.

Appendix, Numb.13. p. 369. In the first of these Letters, That Minister discovers a sort of diffidence in King James, as if he were not the Man they bad taken him for. Expresses his Fears, that a Cordial Agreement between him and the Parliament, might unhinge all the Measures had been so long a concerting betwixt him and his Master, when King James was but Duke of York. He recommends to the Ambassador, to enquire narrowly into the Motives and the Advisers of this Speech to the Parliament, as the most confiderable Service that could be done in that Juncture.

The other Letter chides the Ambassiador, for not being yet able to found King James's Intentions; and tells him, They had receiv'd from a fure Hand better News than what it appears the Ambassador had writ. And which is most remarkable in the whole Letter, there is in it a plain Infinuation, That there was in that Court some great Matter under confideration, concerning the Edict of Nants, which was not to be declar'd until King James's Intentions were fully known. And concludes with a Command to the Ambassador, to fift out how bow King James stood affected to the Prince of Orange.

MEMOIRS, GC.

What discoveries were made in obedience to these Letters, can be no otherwife guess'd at but by the Event; for at this very time the Unfortunate Duke of Monmouth by a desperate, ill-tim'd Attempt to overturn King James's Throne, did all that in him lay, to fix it the fafter.

King Charles, as I have faid, lov'd Monmouth tenderly; and all the Difgraces and Hardships that had of late Years been put upon him, were rather the effects of Fear and Policy, than Inclination or Choice. He was fond of him to that degree, that though he was the greatest Master in the Art of Dissimulation, yet he could not refrain sometimes in Company where he might be free, from regretting his own hard Fortune, which necefitated him to frown upon a Son, whole greatest Crime was to have incurr'd his Brother's Displeasure.

His Fondness was yet more express'd in his Behaviour to the Duke of Monmouth, upon the Discovery of that which was call'd the Protestant Plot, and in the manner he brought him back to Court, after the Ferment was a little abated. All the

M₂

the time Monmouth was absconding, and when there was a Proclamation out for apprehending him, King Charles not only knew where he was, and fent him Meffages every Day, but faw him feveral times in private. When the Duke's Anger was a little appeas'd by the Sacrifices that were offer'd up to it, King Charles thought it was then time to have his Son once again about him. In order to which, he fo manag'd the matter, that Monmouth should owe the Favour to the Duke of Iork, and that his Pardon should be granted merely at the Duke's Intercession.

The Night he appear'd first at Court upon his Reconciliation, King Charles was fo little Master of himself, that he could not diffemble a mighty Joy in his Countenance, and in every thing he did or faid : Infomuch, that it was the publick Talk about Town, and ftrongly infinuated to the Duke of York, That all the King's former Proceedings against the Duke of Monmouth, were but Grimace, and that his Royal Highness being made the Instrument of the Reconciliation, was all but a Trick put upon him. This so far incens'd the Duke, that he never refted till King Charles was prevail'd with to to demand of Monmouth the Publication of a Paper which he had fign'd under Truft, and with an Affurance given him that it fhould never be made Publick; which the Party about the Duke knew Monmouth would not confent to, as being against his Honour. They were not miltaken, for Monmouth refus'd it; and upon his Refusal was difgrac'd once again.

Digitized by Google

166

MEMOIRS, OC.

King Charles's Kindness ended not here, but attended him to Holland, whither he was oblig'd to retire. He found fecret means to furnish him with Money, and fent him Messages from time to time, and fometimes writ to him with his own Hand. He could not bear any hard thing to be faid of him in his absence ; and some officious Courtiers found to their Coft, that it was not the way to make their Fortune, to aggravate Monmouth's Crimes: Nor did the King take any thing more kindly, than the Noble Reception Monmouth receiv'd from a Prince of his Blood in a Foreign Countrey, when he was forc'd to abandon his own.

King Charles, tir'd out at last with the uncontroul'd Hardships that were every Day put upon him by the Duke's Creatures, and asham'd to see his own Lustre obscur'd, and his Power lessen'd M 4 by by a Party that had rais'd themfelves upon Monmouth's Ruin, he refolv'd to thift the Scene; and in order to make himself eafy for the rest of his Life, as he express'd it, he determin'd to fend away the Duke of York, and recall the Duke of Monmonth. April was the time agreed on to put this Resolution in practice ; but there is little left us, by which we can judge whether Monmouth was to be recall'd to Court by a Formal Invitation of the King's, or whether King Charles's usual Thread of Diffimulation was to be fpun out to that length, that Monmonth was to Land with an Arm'd Force. The first feems more probable, if it were but for what he has writ himfelf in the Pocket-Book, which there will be occasion to mention hereafter. It's true, the laft looks more of a piece with the reft of his Behaviour towards his Brother and Son, and more agreeable to his Natural Biafs, which feldom inclin'd him to chufe the High Road, when there could possibly be found a By-Path to tread in.

But Death put a fudden ftop to all King Charles's Defigns and Monmonth's Hopes; and at the fame time warded off a Blow that threaten'd the Duke of Tork fo near. And Monmouth being just ready to rife higher higher than ever, was left by all his good Stars, which fet with that Royal Sun that gave them Birth and Heat.

MEMOIRS, Cr.

I would not be mistaken here, as if I were of opinion that in this New Turn rhat was upon the Anvil, immediately before the Death of King Charles, there was any Defign of altering the Succession, or bringing Monmouth within the View of a Crown : The whole Course of King Charles's Actions does sufficiently contradict any fuch thought : And though Monmouth was afterwards prevail'd with by a headstrong Party about him, to assume the Title of King, yet it's next to a Certainty, that all that was originally aim d at by King Charles and the Duke of Monmonth, was only to weaken the Duke of Tork's Faction, which was then become infupportable, by playing Monmonth's Party against it; which was confistent with the only fix'd Maxim of Government in that Reign, That when any one Party grew too ftrong, to throw in the Royal Weight into the lightest Scale.

Monmouth was infliciently flunn'd with this unexpected Change in his Fortune, by the Death of King Charles: But his great Courage and vain Confidence in a Popular Affection and Affiliance, bore him him up against all Difficulties, and prompted him on to attempt by Force of Arms, what was never design d him by King. Charles.

With Three small Ships, and about an Hundred and fifty Men, the Duke Landed in the West of England, the Parliament fitting. A Romantick kind of Invalion, and scarce parallel'd in History : Yes with this Handful of Men, and the common People that join'd him, without Arms, Provisions, Martial Discipline, Money, or any one Place of Strength to retire to, in case of Accidents, did this Brave Unfortunate Man bid fair for a Crown: And if his Ill Fate had not placd a Battalion of Dumbarton's Regiment in his way, he had in all probability furpriz'd the King's Army in their Camp, and perhaps at that fingle Blow decided the Fortune of England for once. Yet this Attempt may be faid to have pav'd the Way for a Nobler Change in the Throne, by leaving King James at liberty through this Success to act without Controul, what at length tumbled him down.

Monmouth paid the Price of his Rebellion with his Blood : And King James in ordering him to be brought into his Prefence

MÈMOIRS, CH.

lence under the Sentence of Death, was pleas'd to make one Exception against a General Rule obfervd inviolably among Kings, Never to allow a Criminal under the Sentence of Death, the fight of his Prince's Face, without a defign to pardon him.

There is nothing deliver'd concerning this Unfortunate Gentleman, but what I have unquestionable Grounds for, and which fome Perfons yet alive, of the First Quality, know to be true. But of the most things above mention'd, there is an infallible Proof extant under Monmouth's own Hand, in a little Pocket-Book which was taken with him, and deliver'd to King James ; which by an Accident is needless to mention here, I had leave to copy, and did it in part. A great many dark Passages there are in it, and fome clear enough, that shall be eternally huried for me : And perhaps it had been for King James's Honour to have committed them to the Flames, as Julius Cæsar is faid to have done upon a like occafion. All the use that shall be made of it, is only to give in the Appendix some few passages out of it, that refer to this Appendix, Numb. 14. Subject, and confirm what has been above $p_{1,373}$. related.

- Monmouth

Monmouth seem'd to be born for a bet-Monmouths Charafter. ter Fate; for the first part of his Life was all Sunshine, though the rest was Clouded. He was Brave, Generous, Affable, and extremely Handsome : Constant in his Friendships, just to his Word, and an utter Enemy to all fort of Cruelty. He was eafy in his Nature, and fond of Popular Applause, which led him infenfibly into all his Misfortunes : But whatever might be the hidden Defigns of fome working Heads he embark'd with, his own were Noble, and chiefly aim'd at the good of his Countrey, though he was mistaken in the means to attain it. Ambitious he was, but not to the degree of aspiring to the Crown, till after his Landing in the West; and even then, he was rather Passive than Active in assuming the Title of King. It was Importunity alone that prevail'd with him to make that Step; and he was inflexible, till it was told him, That the only way to provide against the Ruin of those that should come in to his Affiftance, in cafe he fail'd in the Attempt, was to declare himfelf King ; that they might be [helter'd by the Statute made in the Reign of Henry VII. in favour of those that should obey a King de Facto. Those that advis d him, had dif= different Ends in it : Some to render the Breach betwixt King James and him irreconcilable, and thereby pave a way for a Common-wealth, in playing them againft one another. Others to prevent a poffibility of his being reconcil'd to King James, by the merit of delivering up those that should join him; which was a Thought unworthy of that nice Sincerity he had shewn in all the former Conduct of his Life.

MEMOIRS; C.

To confirm this, I remember to have heard Rumbold fay openly at his Execution in Scotland, upon the account of Argyle's Invation, That Moumouth had broke bis Word with them, in declaring himfelf King. And I have reason to know, that he was to far from a Defign upon the Crown before he left Holland, that it was not without great difficulty he was perfuaded to come over at all: And that upon King Charles's Death he express'd a firm Resolution to make no fuch Attempt, but to live a retir'd Life, without giving King James any diffurbance.

In his latter Years he us'd to complain of the hittle care had been taken of his Education ; and in his Difgrace endeavour'd to make up that Want, by applying himfelf to ftudy, in which he made in 173 in a fhort time no inconfiderable Progress. He took the occasion of his Afflictions to inform his Mind, and recollect and amend the Errors of Youth ; which it was not strange he should be tainted with, being bred up in all the Pleafures of a Luxurious Court. What fedate Thoughts his Retirement brought him to, and, which is in a great part hitherto a Secret; how little Inclination he had to make a Bustle in the World (to give it in his own Words) is best express'd in a Letter of his own, to one that afterwards loft his Life in his Quarrel: which though without a Date, appears to be writ after King Charles's Death, and is plac d in the Appendix ; which was deliver'd me by a Gentlemen yet alive, that Numb.15. was intrusted with the Key of that and Mr.Spence, other Letters that were writ at that time: Which rather than difcover, he chofe to to the late fubmit himself to be thrice cruelly tortur'd; all which he bore with a Courage worthy of the Ancient Romans.

> The Duke of Monmouth, when he was brought Prisoner to King James's Pre-fence, made the humblest Submissions for his Life; and it's a Mystery what could move King James to fee him, when he had no mind to pardon him : But the Manner

> > Digitized by Google

174

Appendix.

P. 377.

Secretary

Earl of Argyle.

MEMOIRS, Crc.

Manner of his Death Three Days after, did more than acquit him of any Meannefs of Spirit in defiring to live, fince he died with the greatest Constancy and Tranquility of Mind, and fuch as became a Christian, a Philosopher, and a Soldier.

The Storm being thus blown over that threaten'd his Crown, King James thought it time to cast off the Mask, and to act without difguise what till then he had in some part endeavour'd to dissemble. This Parliament had express'd a more than ordinary Zeal in Attainting Monmouth, and had readily granted him a competent fupply to fupprefs that Rebellion. Not only fo, but to teltify the Confidence they had in his Promifes mention'd in the former Speeches, the Houfe of Commons Pafs'd a Vote, nemine contradicente, That they did acquiesce, and entirely rely and rest wholly satisfied on His Majesty's Gracious Word, and repeated Declarations to support and defend the Religion of the Church of England as it is now by Law Establish d, which was dearer to them than their Lives. So that they had reason to expect some fuitable Returns to all this Kindness and Confidence on their fides. But they were were mistaken; for King James began to talk to them in a quite other strain than he had done before. And in another Speech from the Throne, gave them to understand by a plain Infinuation, That he was now Master, and that for the future they must expect to be govern'd, not by the known Laws of the Land, but by his own fole Will and Pleasure.

175

No part of the English Constitution Was in irfelf more facred, or better fecur'd by Law, than That by which Roman Catholicks were declard incapable of Places of Trust either Civil or Military in the Go-vernment: And he himself, when Duke of Tork, was forc'd by the Test-Att to lay down his Office of Lord High-Admiral, even at a time when he had not publickly own'd his Reconciliation to the Church of Rome. But he did what lay in his Power to break down this Barrier, upon Monmonth's Defeat. And in a Speech to his Parliament, told them, That after the Storm that feem d to be coming when he parted with them last, he was glad to meet them again in fo great Peace and Quietness. But when he reflected what an inconfiderable number of men began the late Rebellion; and how long they carried it on without any Oppositiox;

MEMOIRS, . Or.

tion; He hop'd every Body was convinc'd that the Militia was not Sufficient for Such Occasions; and that nothing but a good Force of Disciplin'd Troops was sufficient to defend Us from Infults at Home and Abroad: And therefore he had increas d the Number of Standing Forces to what they were : And demanded a Supply to Support the Charge the Pailiaof them, which he did not doubt they would mentafter comply with. Then, as the main End of Monmouth his Speech, and to let them know what Appendix, he was politively refolv'd to do; He Numb 161 adds, Let no Man take Exception that there are some Officers in the Army not qualified according to the late Test for their Employment: The Gentlemen I must tell you, are most of them, well known to me; and having formerly ferv'd me on . feveral Occasions, and always approved the Loyalty of their Principles by their Pratices, I think them now fit to be Employ d under me; and will deal plainly with you, That after having had the benefit of their Services in such time of need and danger, I will neither expose them to Disgrace, nor my felf to the Want of them, if there hould be another Rebellion to make them neceffary to me, And at last he cells them, That he was afraid some may hope that a difference might happen betwixt Him and his

K James's Z-379.

177

were miftaken; for King Jame to talk to them in a quite ot¹ than he had done before. A ther Speech from the Throne, to underftand by a plain Infini he was now Mafter, and th ture they must expect to not by the known Laws but by his own fole Will

No part of the English in irfelf more facred, or Law, than That by wl licks were declard inc. Trust either Civil or vernment .: And he 1 of Tork, was forc'd lay down his Of Admiral, even at a publickly own'd the Church of F lay in his Powe Barrier, upon A: in a Speech to 1 That after the : ing when he was glad to . Peace and u flected what men began long they an om tee int, and ales of their te, that their , of a Popish grounded, and an Catholick King Lingdom. The Parle manner representat might attend fuch to render him inexcugat Enfue. And that a wanting to themfelves, they Voted an Advey told him, That they and readiness taken into Is Majefty's Gracious Speech. - part of it relating to the e serving not qualified for their to the Act of Parliament,

Digitized by Google

176

hounden Daty these

. 1-UCijefty, 's them . now in-...ng them in xen to be a Act of Part which was of e Rights of all e Laws made for cligion ; Therefore ch His Majesty, That y pleas'd to give fuch that no Apprehensions at remain in the Hearts of bove what was contain'd in , the House of Commons g to capacitate by an Act of it, fuch a Number of the Roman Officers, as King James should List of. But both this Offer and Address were highly referted; and withstanding that they were prepa-N 2 ring his Parliament on that Occasion; which he cannot apprehend can befal him, or that any thing can shake them in their Loyalty to him, who will ever make all returns of kindnels and protection, and venture bis Life in the Defence of the true Interest of the Nation.

It was no wonder, That this Speech furpriz'd a People who valued themfelves fo much upon their Liberties, and thought themselves secure of them, both from the Constitution of their Government, and the folemn repeated Promifes of their Prince. They found too late, that their Fears in the former Reign, of a Popifh Succeffor, were too well grounded, and how inconfistent a Roman Catholick King is with a Protestant Kingdom. The Parliament did in humble manner represent the inconvenience that might attend fuch Measures, at least to render him inexcufable for what might Enfue. And that K. James upon that they might not be wanting to themselves Speech and their Posterity, they Voted an Addrefs, wherein they told him, That they bad with all Duty and readine(s taken into Confideration His Majesty's Gracious Speech. And as to that part of it relating to the Officers of the Army not qualified for their Employment according to the Act of Parliament.

The Parliament's Addressto K. James

MEMOIRS, C.

ment, they did out of their bounden Duty humbly Represent to His Majesty, That these Officers could not by Law be capable of their. Employments ; and that the Incapacities they bring upon themselves that way, could no ways be taken off, but by an Act of Parliament : Therefore out of that great Reverence and Duty they ow'd to His Majesty. they were preparing a Bill to indemnify them from the inconveniences they had now incurr'd. And because the continuing them in their Employments may be taken to be a dispensing with Law without an Att of Parliament, the Consequence of which was of the greatest concern to the Rights of all his Subjects, and to all the Laws made for the Security of their Religion ; Therefore they most humbly beseech His Majesty, That he would be graciously pleas'd to give such Directions therein, that no Apprehensions or Jealouhes might remain in the Hearts of his Subjects.

Over and above what was contain'd in this Addrefs, the Houfe of Commons were willing to capacitate by an Act of Parliament, fuch a Number of the Roman Catholitk Officers, as King James should give a List of. But both this Offer and the Addrefs were highly refented; and notwithstanding that they were prepa-N z ring ring a Bill for a confiderable Supply to Anfwer his extraordinary Occasions, and had fent to the Tower one of their Members for speaking indecently of his Speech, King James was influenc'd to part with this his fuss and only Parliament in difpleasure, upon the Fourth Day after they presented the Addres.

As his former Speeches to his Council and Parliament had put a Foreign Court to a Stand what to think of him; fo this last put them out of Pain, and convinc'd them he was entirely Theirs. Their Senfe of it can hardly be better express'd than in a Letter from Abroad contain'd in the Appendix; which by its Stile, though in another Hand, seems to be from the fame Minister that writ the two former: In which he tells the Ambaffador here, That he needed not a surer Character of King James and his Intentions, than this last Speech to the Parliament, by which they were convinced of his former Refolution to throw off the Fetters which Hereticks would impose upon him, and to act for the time to come En Maistre, as Master : A word till then altogether Foreign to the English Constitution.

What other Effects this Speech had upon the Minds of the People at Home and Abroad,

Appendix.

Namb 17. p. 382.

1

Abroad, may be eafily guefs'd from the different Interests they had in it : Nor is it to be pass'd over without some Remark, That the Revocation of the Edict of Nants, which probably had been some time under Consideration before, was now put in Execution, to the Astonishment of all Europe.

The Parliament being diffolv'd, and no visible means left to retrieve the Liberties of England, King James made haste to accomplish the Grand Defign, which a head-ftrong Party about him pushd on as the certain way in their Opinion to Eternize his Name in this World, and to merit an Eternal Crown in the other. They forefaw that this was the Critical Jun-Eture, and the only one that happen'd fince the Days of Queen Mary, to Reftore their Religion in England. And if they were wanting to themfelves in making use of it, the prospect of a Protestant Successor would infallibly prevent their having any fuch opportunity for the future. King James was pretty far advanc'd in Years, and what was to be done, requir'd Expedicion; for all their Labour would be loft if he should die before the accomplishment. If he had been Younger, or the next presumptive Heir had not been Nz a Proa Protestant, there had been no such abfolute necessity for Dispatch : But the Uncertainty of the King's Life call'd for more than ordinary diligence in a Defign that depended meerly upon it. The Party being resolv'd for these Reafons to bring about in the Compass of one Single Life, and that already far spent, what seem'd to be the Work of a whole Age, they made large steps to-Roman Catholicks were not wards it. only Employ'd in the Army, but brought into Places of greatest Trust in the State. The Earl of Clarendon was forthwith remov'd from the Office of Privy-Seal, and the Government of Ireland, to make room for the Earl of Tyrconnel in the one, and the Lord Arundel in the other. Father Peters, a Jesuit, was sworn of the Privy Council. And though by the Laws it was High-Treafon for any to affume the Character of the Pope's Nancio; yet these were become too flender Cobwebs to hinder a Roman Prelate to appear publickly at London in that Quality; and one of the greatest Peers of England was difgrac'd for not paying him that Respect which the Laws of the Land made Criminal.

182

A Pope's Nuncio in England.

Duke of Somerfet.

Digitized by Google

To

MEMOIRS, Cr.

To bear the Publick Character of Am- An Ambaffador to the Pope, was likewife an open fent to Violation of the Laws: But to fond was Rome, the governing-Party about King James to flew their new acquir'd Trophies at Rome, that the Earl of Castlemain was dispatch'd thither Extraordinary Ambaffador, with a Magnificent Train, and a most Sumptuous Equipage. What his Secret Instructions were, may be partly guefs'd by his Publick ones, which were, To Reconcile the Kingdoms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, to the Holy See, from which they had for more than an Age fallen off by Heresy.

Innocent XI. receiv'd this Embassy as one that faw further than those who fent flighted by the it. The Ambaffador had but a cold Re- Pope. ception of the Holy Father ; and none of the Cardinals, but those of a particular Faction, and the good natur'd Cardinal of Norfolk, took any further notice of it, than Good Manners oblig'd them. The Court of Rome were too refin'd Politicians to be impos'd upon with Shew and Noife ; and knew the World too well, to expect great Matters from fuch hafty, illtim'd Advances as were made to them. Not only fo, but Innocent having an Averfion in his Nature to a Faction he knew N 4 King

٠,

183

King James was embark'd in, which he never took pains to diffemble, was not over-. fond of an Embally from a Prince who was in an Interest he had long wish'd to fee humbled. King James met with no-. thing but Mortifications at Rome in the Person of his Ambassador, which occafion'd his making as thort a Stay as was possible. In which may be seen the vast. difference there was at that time betwixt the Politicks of Italy, and those of a headftrong Party in England. And however the World has been impos'd upon to believe that the Pope's Nuncio at the English Court, who is fince made a Cardinal, was an Instrument to push on things to extremities; yet certain it is he had too much good Senfe to approve of all the Measures that were taken ; and therefore defir d often to be recali'd, left he should Dr. Gee's be thought to have a Hand in them.

Animad-Altho' the Earl of Cafflemain was vertions pleas'd upon his Examination before the on the Je-Parliament, so fay, that his Embally to Justs Memo-ial for Rome was only such as is between Two Temthe Interporal Princes, about Compliment and Comded Reformition of merce ; yet Father Warner in his Manu-Ergland, under the script History, quoted by a Learned Au-first optim thor ", gives us another account of it, in P-ince. these Words; Things being thus setled Lundon. (lays 1690.

Cardinal

Dada.

(fays he) within the Realm; the next care his Majefty had, was to unite his Conntries to the Obedience of the Bifbop of Rome, and the Apostolick See, which had been cut off by Herefy about an Age and a half before. To try the Pope's Inclination, in the Year 1685. he fent Mr. Carryl thither; who succeeding according to his Wishes, and being recall'd, the Earl of Castlemain was sent the next Year; as Extraordinary Ambassador to the Pope, in the Name of the King and the Catholicks of England, to make their Submission to the Holy See.

Caftlemain had feveral Audiences of the Pope, but to little purpole; for whenever he began to talk of Business, the Pope was seasonably attack d with a Pir of Coughing, which broke off the Ambassador's Discourse for that time, and oblig'd him to retire. These Audiences and Fits of Coughing continued from time to time, whilst Caftlemain continued at Rome, and were the subject of diverfion to all but a particular Faction at that Court. At length he was advis'd to come to Threats, and to give out that he would be gone, fince he could not have an opportunity to treat with the Pope about the Business he came for. Innocent was fo little concern'd for the Ambaffador's Referencent, that when they told him of it, he answered with his ordinary Coldness, E bene, se vous andersene ditegli adonque che si levi di buon matino al fresco e che a mezzo giorno si repost, per che in questi paes non bisogna viaggiare al caldo del giorno. Well! let him go; and tell him, It were sit be rise early in the Morning, that he may rest himself at Noon; for in this Countrey it's dangerous to travel in the Heat of the Day.

In the end, he was recall'd; being able to obtain of the Pope two triffing Requests only, that could hardly be demied to an ordinary Courier; The one was a License for the Mareschal d'Humiers's Daughter to marry her Uncle: And the other, a Dispensation of the Statutes of the Jesuits Order, to Father Peters, to emjoy a Bishoprick: The want of which, fays my Author, was the reason that the Archbishoprick of York was kept so long vacant.

The Jefuits Noble Entertainment of the Englifh Ambaffador at Reme.

Mersure Heftorique

1687.

pour June,

Though the Pope carried himfelf in this manner towards the English Ambassa dor, yet the Jesuits paid him the highest Respect imaginable; which did him no service with the Old Man; for He and That

MEMOIRS, CFC.

That Order were never hearry Friends. They entertained him in their Seminary with the greatest Magnificence; and nothing was wanting in Nature or Art to grace his Reception. All their Stores of Sculpture, Painting, Poetry, and Rhetorick, seem'to have been exhausted upon ' this Entertainment. And though all the Inscriptions and Emblems did center upon the Triumph of the Romish Religion, and the Ruin of Herefy in England ; yet Care was taken not to omit fuch particular Trophies and Devices, as were adapted to their new-acquir'd Liberty of fetting up their Publick Schools at London. Among a great many other Panegyricks upon King James, the following Distich was plac'd below an Emblem of England.

Restituit Veterem tibi Religionis honorem, Anglia, Magnanimi Regis aperta sides.

The open Zeal of this Magnanimous King, has reftor'd to England its Ancient Religion.

There was also this Infcription put round King James's Picture :

Digitized by Google

Poten-

MEMOIRS, Crc. Potentifimo & Religiohfimo Magna Britane. Ditt REG1 JACOBOIL Generosà Catholicæ Fidei Confessione Regnum Auspicanti. INNOCENTIO XI, P. M. Per Legatum Nobilissimum & Sapientissimum D. Rogerium Palmerium Comitem de Castlemain ÷, .• Obsequium deferenti. Collegium Romanum Regia Virtutum Infignia dedicat.

To the most Potent and most Religious JAMES the Second, King of Great Britain; beginning his Reign with the Generous Confession of the Catholick Faith.

A N D Paying his Obedience to Pope I N N O C E N T XI. By the most Noble and most Wise Roger Palmer, Earl of Castlemain, The Roman College Dedicates These Royal Emblems of his Virtues.

MEMOIRS, GC.

In the Great Hall the Ambassador was Harangued by the Rector of the College in a Latin Speech ; which, to fhew the vain Hopes they had of King James and their own Fortune at that time, is plac'd in the Appendix, with a Translation of it into English : Referring the Reader for Appendix. the reft of that Solemnity, to an Ingenious Gentleman that was then upon the Place, and has given a particular Account of it.

But yet it may not be amifs to mention what the fame Gentleman tells us, of a Device that related to King James's having a Son; which was, A Lilly, from whole Leaves there distill'd some Drops of Water, which as the Naturalists fay, becomes the Seed of new Lillies ; and the Motto was, Lachrimon in Prolem : I weep for Children. Underneath was this Diffich :

Pro Natis, Jacobe, geømis, Flos candide Regum ? Hos Natura Tibi fi neget, Astra dabunt.

Doft thou figh for Children, O James ! thou best of Kings ! If Nature denies, Heaven will grant them.

Numb. 18. p. 383. Noveau Voyage de Italıc Edit. 3 Tom. 2. Par Monfreur Miffon.

-189

Digitized by Google

There

There was one Infeription more this Author takes notice of; which being one of the most unaccountable things of that kind, afforded matter for the Wits of Rome to descant upon. Though the Words are ill chose, and strangely harsh, yet it's certain the Fathers had a good meaning in them; and they refer to King James's Influence upon his Brother to turn Roman-Catholick at his Death. The Infeription runs thus,

Jacobo Secundo Angliæ Regi Quod ipfo Vitæ Exemplo preunte, Et impellente Confiliës, Carolus Frater & Rex Mortem obierat admodum piam : Regnaturus à tergo frater Alas Carolo addidit; E T Ut Cælo dignum E T Dignum fe Rege Legatum, eligeret, Fratrem Mift.

To King James II. King of England; for baving by his Example and his Counfel, prevail d with Charles his Brother to dye a Pious Death.

М Б м о I R s, GC.

And being to fucceed him, He gave Wings to Charles; and that be might make choice of an Ambassador worthy of Heaven and himself, he sent his Brother.

I will not pretend to give the nice Senfe of thefe words; and tho' I would, I cannot, there being fuch a perplexity in them. But for the Expressions that follow, I may venture to give them in English, though they seem to be as much out of the ordinary Road as the former.

Nuncii ex Anglià Proceres Retulerunt Regibus aliis Jacobum Regnan-Cælo (tem.) Primus omnium retulit Carolus. Nec Immerito; Reges alii Legatos fuscipiunt Mittuntque Principes, Legatos Reges Deum Excipere decuit; Jacobum mittere.

English Noblemen were fent to other Kings, to acquaint them with King James's Accession to the Crown: But Charles first of all brought the News of it to Heaven.

It

It was but reafonable, For Kings to fend and receive Princes as Ambaffadors: But

It became God Almighty to receive, and James to fend no Ambassadors but Kings.

The Mortifivitions K James met with at Rome, about his Marriage with the Princefs of Efte.

Genealogies of the Family of Mordant, Orc. in a large Fel.

p 427. 423.

To see King James neglected at Rome in the Pontificat of Innotent XI. was not fo strange, confidering what has been faid of his Antipathy to a Faction wherein that Prince was concern'd : But that in the time of Innocent's Predecessor, and when he was Duke of Tork, he fhould be denied a common Favour, which that Court feldom or never refuses to any one, was a thing altogether unaccountable : Yet so it was, That he having fent the late Earl of Peterborough to Italy, to Espouse the Princess of Modena in his Name, all the Interest he could make, was not able to obtain a Dispensation for the Marriage. The account of this matter being fo little known, and that Earls Book wherein he mentions it, being for rare, and as I am told, but Twenty four Copies printed, I shall give it in the Earls own Words:

" But

MEMOIRS, 5.

193

Digitized by Google

" But now from Rome there was Ad-" vice (fays he) by the Abbot of Angeo, " of the great Difficulties that arose in " the Confultations of this Affair (mean-" ing the Matriage.) The French Am-" bassador, the Duke d' Estrees, favour'd " the Marriage with all the Power of the " French Faction ; fo did Cardinal Barbe-" rini, and all the other Friends and Al-" lies of the House of Este. But his Ho-" lines himself was very averse, and " Cardinal Altiers, who was the Govern-"ing Nephew, a profess'd and violent " Oppoler. The main pretence for this " Obstinacy, was the Duke of Torks not " declaring himfelf publickly of the Ro-" mish Church, though they knew that he " was of a long time reconcil'd to ir.

"But now at last (continues the Earl "of Peterborough) came from Romê the "Abbot of Angeo without the Dispensa-"tion, which he could by no means ob-"tain, by reason that Cardinal Altieri "was inflexible, and Threats of Excom-"munication were issued out against any "that should undertake to perform or "celebrate the Marriage. Whereupon "we were all upon the fears and expecta-"tions of a total Rupture. The Dutchess of Modena her felf, a Zealous, if not a "Bigot Woman, was in great pain about "the part that might seem offensive to "his Holiness, or neglective of his Au-"thority: And the Young Princess took " occasion from hence to support her " unwillingness. But in truth, Cardinal " Barberini, upon whom the Dutchefs had " great dependance, and all the other "Adherents and Relations of the House " of Eftê, being every Day more and "more possess' of the Honour and In-" tereft they were like to find in this Alli-" ance, were feandaliz'd at the unreafo-"nable Obstinacy of the Pope and his " Nephew; and did frankly advise the "Dutchefs of Modena fuddenly to make " up and perfect the Marriage: The "Peace and Excuse of the thing being " easier to be had after it was done, than " any present License to be obtaind for " doing it.

"The Bishop of Modena was then ap-"plied to (adds the Earl) for the Per-"formance: But he refusing, a poor "English Jacobine was found, Brother to "Jerome White, that after served the "Dutchess, who having nothing to lose, "and on whom the Terror of Excommu-"nication did not so much prevail, did "undertake it, and so he perform d the "Cere-MEMOIRS, Or. " Ceremony, Thus far the Earl of Peterborough.

But to leave this Digression, and to re- The true turn to our Hiftory. It was about this defign of time that the Romifh Cabal about King cution of James began to play their Popular Engine, Diffenters and which was likely to do most Execu- charles tion, by weakning the National Establish'd time. Church, and dividing Protestants among themfelves, when in the mean time the Roman Catholicks were to be the only Gainers. This was difguis'd under the specious Names of Liberty of Conscience. And the very fame Party that advis d this Toleration, were they that had push'd on all the Severities against the Protestant Dissenters in the former Reign, with defign to widen the Breach between them and the Church of England, and to render the first more willing to swallow the Bait of Ideration, whenever it should be offer'd to them. They gain'd in a great part their End; for the Diffenters were not fo fond of Perfecution and Ill Ufage, as to refuse a Liberty that was frankly offer'd them, which neither their Prayers, nor Tears could obtain before : Nor did they think it good Manners to enquire too narrowly how that Liberty came 0 2 about.

195

l g and

the

about, as long as they were shelter'd thereby from the Oppressions they lay under.

The Church of England faw through all this Contrivance, and fear'd the Confequences. The Protestant Diffenters were more pitied now in their feeming Prosperity, than ever they had been in their real Adversity. Some that had been zealous before in putting the Penal Laws in Execution against them, did now see their Error too late, and found they had been us'd but as Tools to prevent the Diffenters from uniting with the Church of England, whenever the common Danger should come to threaten both.

This Toleration could not fublift, being contrary to the Eftablifh'd Laws of the Realm, unlefs a new Monster was introduc'd to give it Life, under the Name of a Dispensing Power. When King James came to affume to himfelf this Power as his Prerogative and Right, he unhindg'd the Constitution all at once; for to difpense with Laws already made, is as much a part of the Legislature, as the making of new ones. And therefore in arrogating to himself fuch a Dispensing Power, he invaded the very Essence of the English Constitution, by which the Legislature gislature is lodg'd in King, Lords and Commons; and every one of them has a Negative upon the other two.

K. James grants a Toleration of Religion.

Charles II. was the first King of England that ever aim d at any thing like a Dispensing Power. In the Year 1662. he was prevail d upon for fome Reafons of State to islue out a Proclamation, dispenfing with some few things that related to the Act of Uniformity, but without the least regard to Roman Catholicks. And though in his Speech to the Parliament upon that occasion, he did in a manner acknowledge that he had no fuch Power, in faying, That if the Diffenters would demean themselves peaceably and modestly, he could heartily with he had such a Power of Indulgence to use upon occasion: Yet the Parliament was fo jealous of this Innovation, that they prefented the King with an Address against the Proclamation; and plainly told him, That he had no Power ta disponse with the Laws without an Act of Parliament.

King Charles made another Attempt of the like nature, in the Year 1672; and in a Speech to Both Houses, did mention his Declaration of Indulgence, and acquainted them with the Reasons that induc'd him to it; telling them withal, O_3 how how little the Roman Catbolicks would be the better for it. Upon which the House of Commons made an Address to him for recalling this Declaration : Wherein they plainly told him, That in claiming a Power to dispense with Penal Laws, his Majesty bad been very much misinform'd; fince no Juch Power was ever claim'd or exercis d by any of his Predeceffors; and if it should be admitted, might tend to the interrupting of the free course of the Laws, and altering the Legislative Power, which has always been acknowledg'd to refide in his Majefty, and his Two Houses of Parliament. King Charles was so far fatisfied in the matter contain'd in this Address, that he immediately thereupon cancell'd his Declaration of Indulgence, and order'd the Seal to be torn off; and acquainted both Houses, That he had done fo ; with this further Declaration, which was enter'd upon Record in the House of Lords, That it should never be drawn into Example or Consequence. ". The next that attempted such a Difpenfing Power, though of a far larger Extent, was King James, as has been faid : And how any thing that look'd that way was relified by the House of Commons, does appear by their Address against againft sgainst the Roman Catholick Officers; which also has been mention'd.

197

Digitized by Google

Memoirs, Øc.

It was not enough for King James to And if affume this Difpenfing Power, and to act fumes a difpenfing by it; but such was the Mifery and hard Power. Fate of England, that the Farty about the King would have had us believe, That a Power in the King to dispense with Laws, was Law. To maintain this Monftrous Polition, there were not only Mercenary Pens fet a work, but a Set of Judges found out, that to their Eternal Reproach, did all was possible for them to compliment the King with the Liberties of their Countrey. For these Gentlemen gave it for Law, ..

- That the Kings of England are Sovereign Princes.
- That the Laws of England are the King sa Laws.

That therefore it's an incident inseparable Prerogative in the Kings of England, as in all other Sovereign Princes, to dispense with Penal Laws, in particular Cases, and upon particular necessary Reasons.

- That of those Reasons and those Necessities the King himself is the sole Judge. And then, which is consequent upon all,
- That this is not a Trust invested in, or granted to the King by the people, but is the Antient Remain Remain of the Sovereign Power and Frerogative of the Kings of England, which never yet was taken from them, nor can be.

Thus were we fallen under the greatest Missfortune that could possibly happen to a Nation, To have our Laws and Constitution trampled upon under colour of Law. And those very Men, whose Office it was to support them, became now the Betrayers of them to the Will of the Prince.

This mighty Point being gain'd, or rather forc'd upon us, the Roman Catholicks were not wanting to make the best use of it for themselves. The free and open Exercise of their Religion was set up every where, and Jefuit Schools and Seminaries crected in the most considera, ble Towns. The Church of England had now but a presarious Title to the National Church, and Romish Candidates had swallow d up its Preferments and Dignities already in their Hopes. Romilb Bishops were publickly Confecrated in the Royal Chappel, and difpatch'd down to exercise their Episcopal Function in their respective Diocesses. Their Pasteral Letters, directed to the Lay Catholicks of England, were openly difpers'd up and down, down, and printed by the King's own Printer, with Publick Licenfe. The Regular Clergy appear'd in their Habits in Whitehall and St. James's; and made no foruple to tell the Protestants, They hop'd in a little time to walk in Procession through Cheapfide.

MEMOIRS, Co.

A mighty Harvest of New Converts was expected; and that Labourers might not be wanting, Shoals of Priests and Regulars were fent over from beyond Sea to reap it. The only Step to Preferment, was to be of the King's Religion : And to preach against the Errors of Rome, was the heighth of Difloyalty, because forfooth, it tended to alienate the Subjects Affections from the King. An Order was directed to the Protestant Bishops about Preaching, which was, upon the matter, forbidding them to defend their Religion in the Pulpit, when it was at the fame time attack'd by the Romiffs Priests with all the Vigor they were capable of, both in their Sermons and Books. This Order was taken from a Precedent in Queen Mary's time; for the first Step she made to introduce Popery, notwithstanding her Promises to the Gentlemen of Suffolk and Norfolk to the contrary, upon their appearing first of any for

201

×.

Remain of rogative of never yet u

Thus we Misfortune a Nation, To tion trampl And those was to fupp Betrayers o Prince.

This mi: rather forc' licks were ufe of it for open Exerc up every w Seminaries e ble Towns. ad now bu ional Churc. wallow d 1 ties already fhops were Royal Chap exercife the respective I ters, direc England,

¥ E 11 X X X  * *  Sc. States s s Tran  *  in the second n: :---ST.T.S Salara Z 1 Digitized by Google down, 🖬 🖡

Printe, gular Chan:

Whitehal fcruple tox

in a little ti Cheapfide.

A migh

Was cape

not be w:

Regulars to chopi

Wasta

to Dist

Walks

of Parliament : And as if that een enough to mortify the England, there were some ^eolicks appointed Commissioners, mently the Enemies of the Prozion were become the Judges vrs of a Protestant Church in -and Discipline.

mmillioners thought fit to The Suf--xercife of their New Power penfion of . penfion of Dr. Compton, Bi- the Bilhop of Landan. -lon. This Noble Prelate, by orthy of his Birth, and Sta-Church, had acquir'd the teem of all the Protestant home and abroad, and was on the Mark of the Envy the Romifb Party at Court. :ted for an occasion to enofaftical Commission with fuch Sacrifice ; and fuch an octher taken than given, in of Dr. Sharp, now Arch-about the King knowing The occawas their Interest that the fion of it. rgy should not have leave Errors of the Church of Sermons, had advis'd him Bishops the enfnaring Letter for her Interest, upon the Death of her Brother, was to islue out a Proclamation, forbidding the Preaching upon controverted Points of Religion, for fear, it was staid, of raising Animosities among the People. But notwithstanding this infnaring Letter of K. James's, the Clergy of the Church of England were not wanting in their Duty : For to their Immortal Honour, they did more to vindicate the Doctrine of their own Church, and expose the Errors of the Church of Rome both in their Sermons and Writings, than ever had been done either at Home or Abroad, fince the Reformation; and in fuch a Stile, and with fuch an Inimitable Force of Reasoning, as will be a Standard of Writing to fucceeding Ages.

To haften on the Project against the Establish d Church, a new Court of Inguistion was crected, under the Name of a Commission for Ecclesiastical Affairs: And to blind the People, there were some Bishops of the Church of England nam'd Commissioners, whereof one refus'd to act from the beginning, and the other excus'd himself, after he came to see where the Design of it was levell'd. This Commission was another manifest Violation of the Laws, and against an ex-express Act of Parliament : And as if that had not been enough to mortify the Church of England, there were some Roman-Catholicks appointed Commissioners, and confequently the Enemies of the Protestant Religion were become the Judges and Directors of a Protestant Church in its Doctrine and Discipline.

202

These Commissioners thought fit to The Sufbegin the Exercise of their New Power pension of with the Sufpenfion of Dr. Compton, Bi- the Bilhop shop of London. This Noble Prelate, by a Conduct worthy of his Birth, and Station in the Church, had acquir'd the Love and Effeem of all the Protestant Churches at home and abroad, and was for that reason the Mark of the Envy and Hatred of the Romifb Party at Court. They had waited for an occasion to enoble their Ecclefiaftical Commission with fuch an Illustrious Sacrifice ; and fuch an occasion was rather taken than given, in the Business of Dr. Sharp, now Archbishop of Tork.

The Priests about the King knowing The occahow much it was their Interest that the fion of it. Protestant Clergy should not have leave to refute the Errors of the Church of Rome in their Sermons, had advis'd him to fend to the Bishops the enfmaring Letter of Landsa.

ter or Order beforemention'd, containing Directions about Preachers. The Learned Dr. Sharp taking occasion in some of his Sermons to vindicate the Doctrine of the Church of England, in opposition to Popery; this was in the Court-Dialoct understood to be the endeavouring to beget in the minds of his Hearers an ill opinion of the King and his Government; by infinuating Fears and Jealouhes, to dispose them to Discontent, and to lead them into Disobedience and Rebellion ; and confequently, a Contempt of the faid Order about Preachers. Whereupon King James sent a Letter to the Bishop of London, containing an Order to fuspend Dr. Sharp from Preaching in any Parish Church or Chappel in his Diocefs, until the Doctor had given Satisfaction, and his Majesty's farther Pleafure should be known.

The Bishop of London perceiving what was aim'd at in this Letter, endeavour'd all that was possible to divert the Storm that threaten'd him, and the Church of England through his sides. He writ a Submissive Letter to the Secretary of State, to be communicated to the King; setting forth, That he thought it bis Duty to obey his Majesty in whatever Commands be laid upon him, that he could perform with a safe a safe Conficience: But in this he was oblig d to proceed according to Law, and as a Judge: And by the Law no Judge tondemns a Man, before he has knowledge of the Cause, and has cited the Party. That however, he had acquainted Lr. Sharp with his Majesty's Displeasure; whom he found so ready to give all reasonable Satisfaclion, that he had made him the Bearer of that Letter.

MEMOIRS, CTC.

Together with this Letter from the Bishop of London, Dr. Sharp carried with him a Petition to the King in his own Name, shewing, That ever fince his Mau jesty was pleas'd to give notice of his Difpleasure against him, he had forborn the Publick Exercise of his Function : And as be had endeavour'd to do the best Service he could to his Majesty and his late Brother in bis Station, so he had not vented now in the Pulpit any thing tending to Faction or Schifm: And therefore prayed his Majesty wou'd be pleas'd to lay aside his Displeasure conceiv'd against him, and restore him to that Favour which the rest of the Clergy enjoy'd?

All this Submiffion was to no purpose. Nothing would fatisfy the Party, but a Revenge upon the Bishop of London, for his Exemplary Zeal for the Protestant Interest 3

205

ceedings

Interest; and this Affair of Dr. Sharp's was made use of as a handle to mortify him, and in his Person the whole Body of the Clergy. The Bishop was Cited before the Ecclefiastical Commission, for not Suspending Dr. Sharp, according to the King's Order, and treated by their Chairman at his Appearance, in a manner unworthy of his Station and Quality. All the Defence he could make, and his Plea to the Jurisdiction and Legality of the Court, which was good beyond all contradiction, did fignify nothing. Thefe New Inquifitors being refolv'd to flick at nothing that might please the Party that fet them at work, did by their Definitive Sentence, declare, decree, and pronounce, That the Bisbop of London should for his Disobedience and Contempt be suspended during bis Majesty's Pleasure : And accordingly was suspended; with a peremptory Admonition, To abstain from the Function and Execution of his Episcopal Office, and other Ecclefiastical Jurisdictions, during the said The Pro- Suspension, under the pain of Deprivation, and Removal from bis Bishoprick.

againft The next that felt the weight of this the Pre-Ecclepastical Commission, were the Presifident and Fellows of dent and Fellows of St. Mary Magdalen's Magdalene College in 'Oxford. The two chief Seats College. of

of Learning, the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, flood in the way of the Grand Defign; and the Party was impatient to get footing there. Magdalen College is one of the Nobleft Foundations that perhaps was ever erected to Learn. ing in the World, and therefore it was no wonder it was one of the first Marks that was shot at. This Illustrious Society from repeated Grants of Kings, ratified in Parliament, and from their own Statutes, was in an uninterrupted Possession of a Right to Elect their own Prefident. That Place being vacant by the Death of Dr. Clark, a Day was appointed by the Vice Prefident and Fellows to proceed to the Election of another to fill up the Vacancy. But before the day of Election came, Charnock, one of the Fellows (who was fince executed for the late Plot to Assa his present Majesty) brought them a Mandate from King James, to elect one Farmer into the Place; a Man of an ill Reputation, who had promis'd to declare himself Roman-Catholick, and was altogether uncapable of the Office by the Statutes of the College. This Mandate the Vice-Prefident and Fellows received with all decent Refpect, and fent their humble Address to the King, representing to

to his Majefty, That Farmer was a Perfon in several respects incapable of that Office, according to their Founder's Statutes : And therefore did earnestly beseech his Majesty, either to leave them to the discharge of their Duty and Consciences, according to his Majesty's late Gracious Declaration, and their Founder's Statutes; or else to recommend to them such a Person, who might be more serviceable to his Majesty and the College.

Notwithstanding this humble and fubmissive Address, King James fignified his Pleasure to them, That be expected to be obey'd. Upon which, the 'Fellows being oblig'd by the Statutes of their Society, to which they were sworn, not to delay the Election longer than such a day, and Farmer being a Person they could not chuse, without incurring the Sin of Perjury, they proceeded to Election, and chose Dr. Hough (now Bishop of Litchfield and Coventry) their Prefident.

Hercupon the New President and Fellows were cited before the EcclestafticalCommission, for difobeying the King's Mandate. And notwithstanding they made it appear by their Answer, plac'd at length in the Appendix, That they could not comply with that Mandate, without Breach of their Oath;

208

Dath 3 and that there was no room left for the King to dispense with that Oath, because in the Oath it self they were sworn not to make use of any such Dispensation, nor in any fort consent thereto: Yct against all Law, the Ecclestastical Commissioners did by their Sentence deprive Dr. Hough of his Presidentship, and suspended two of the Fellows from their Fellowships: While the King at the same time Inhibited the College to elect or admit any person whatsaever into any Fellowship, or any other Place or Office in the said College, till his further Pleasure.

The Coart finding by this time, that Farmer was one of fo profligate a Life, that though he had promised to declare himfelf Roman-Catholick upon his promotion to that place, they began to be asham'd of him: And therefore instead of insisting on the former Mandamus in his favour, there was another granted in favour of Dr. Parker, then Bishop of Oxford, one of the Creatures of the Coart, and who they knew would flick at ncthing to ferve a Turn.

The Place of Prefident being already in a legal manner fill'd up by the Election of Dr. Hough; which though it had not been, yet the Bilhop of Oxford was like-P wife wife inc pable by the Statutes of the College, of being elected; The Fellows did humbly offer a very pathetick Perition to his Majelly, mention d at length in the Appendix; in which they fet forth, how inexpressible an affliction it was to them to find themselves reduced to such an extremity, that either they must difobey his Majesty's Commands, contrary to their Inclinations, and that constant course of Loyalty which they had ever fbew'd hitherto upon all occasions; or else break their Founder's Statutes, and deliberately perjure themfelves. Then they mention'd the Statutes and the Oaths that every one of them had taken at their Admiffion into their Fellow bips ; and concluded with an humble Prayer to his Majelly, To give them leave to lay their Cafe and Themfelves at his Majefty's Royal Feet, earneftly befeeching his Sacred Majesty to extend to them, his bumble Petitioners, that Grace and Ten-- derness which he had wonchsaf'd to all his other Subjects.

Atpendix, Numb, 20. pag. 393.

All this Submiffion was in vain: For the Ecclefiastical Commissioners by their final Decree and Sentence, deprived and expell d from their Fellow ships all the Fellows of Magdalen College, but Three that had complied with Breach of Oath, being Twenty five five in number. And to push their Injustice yet further, they did by another Sentence decree and declare, That Dr. Hough, who had been depriv'd before, and the said Twenty five Fellows, should be incapable of receiving, or being admitted into any Ecclefiastical Dignity, Benefice, or Promotion. And such of them who were not yet in Holy Orders, they adjudg'd incapable of receiving or being admitted into the fame. Thus by a Decree of an Illegal Court, were a Set of Worthy and Learned Men turn'd out of their Freeholds, merely for not obeying an Arbitrary Command, which was directly against their Confciences : And thus was King James prevail'd with by a Headstrong Party, to assume a Power not only to dispense with Laws, but to make void Oaths.

MEMOIRS, GE.

The first Declaration for Liberty of The St conficience was not thought a lufficient cond Dis Stretch of Power; and therefore King for Libers James islued out another of a much higher ty of Cons James islued out another of a much higher ty of Cons Strain, in which the Roman-Catholicks were chiefly included, and indeed it was for their fake alone it was granted. To render the Church of England accellary to their own Ruin, there was an Order of The Or-Council made upon the latter, commanding der of Council it to be read at the ujual times of Divine upon it, P 2 Service, Service, in all Churches and Chappels throughout the Kingdom; and ordering the Bishops to cause it to be sent and distributed throughout their several and respective Diocess, to be read accordingly.

The Clergy of the Church of England had reason to take it for the greatest Hardship and Oppression that could be put upon them, to be commanded to read from their Pulpits a Declaration they knew to be against Law, and which in its Nature and Defign was levell'd against their own Interest, and that of their Religion. Some of them through Fear or Mistake, and others to make their Court, complied; but the Generality refus'd to obey fo unjust a Command. The Romiffs Party had their Ends in it, for their Refufal laid them open to the fevere Lashes of the Ecclefiastical Commission; and accordingly, every one that had not read the Declaration in their Churches, were order'd to be profecuted before that inexorable Tribunal, where they were infallibly to expect to be deprived : And fo molt of the Benefices in England must have been made vacant for a new kind of Incumbents.

But the Scene chang'd before all this could be brought about : For King James, urg'd urg'd on by his Fate, and by a reftlefs Party about him, came at this time to level a Blow against the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Six of his Suffragan Bishops, that awaken'd the People of England to shake off their Chains, and implot foreign Assistance to retrieve the dying Liberties of their Countrey.

MEMOIRS, OC.

These Seven Bishops being fensible, as The Aff ir most of the Nation was, of what was ven Biriginally aim'd at in these two Declara- shops. tions for Liberty of Conscience, did confult together about the humblest manner to lay before King James the Reasons why they could not comply with the Order of Council. - Having got leave to attend him, they deliver'd to him with the greatest Submission, a Petition in behalf of themselves, and their absent Brethren, and in the name of the Clergy of their respective Dioceffes, humbly reprefenting, That their unwilling mess did not proceed from any want of Duty and Obedience to his Majesty, nor from any mant of due Tenderness to Diffenters ; in relation to whom, they were willing to come to fuch an Temper as should be thought fit, when that Matter should be consider'd in Parliament and Convocation : But, among a great many other Confiderations, from this especially. Recaufe 3

Because That Declaration was founded upon Juch a Dispensing Power, as had been often declar'd Illegal in Parliament; and was a matter of so great moment and consequence to the whole Nation. that they could not in Prudence, Honour, or Conscience, so far make themselves Parties to it, as the distribution of it all over the Kingdom, and the folemn Publication of it even in God ¹⁰ House, and in the Time of his Divine Ser vice, must amount to, in common and red Sonable Construction. Therefore did hun bly and earneftly befeech his Majeft That he would be gracioufly pleas'd, n=1 to infift upon their distributing and reading the laid Declaration.

This Petition, the' the humbless the could be, and deliver'd by Six of the to the King alone in his Closer, was highly referted, that the Six Bishops the presented it, and the Archbishop of G. T. terbury that writ it, but was not present at its delivery, were committed Priforto the Tower.

They were a few days after broup to the King's-Bench Bar, and Indicted High Mildemeanor, for having fally, unifully, maliciously, seditiously, and scandah fram d, compos'd, and writ, a false, ficious, pernicious, and seditious Libel, cerning the King and his Royal Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, under the pretence of a Petition : And that they had published the same in presence of the King. There was a great Appearance at this Tryal; and it was a Leading Case; for upon it depended in a great measure the Fate of the rest of the Clergy of the Church of England. It lasted long, and in the end the Seven Bishops were Acquitted, with the Acclamations of all but the Court-Party.

There were two things very remarkable in this Tryal: The Difpenfing Power was learnedly and boldly argued against by the Counfel for the Bishops, and demonstrated by invincible Arguments to be an open Violation of the Laws and Constitution of the Kingdom. So that, in one of the greatest Auditories that was ever seen in Westminster-Hall, and upon hearing one of the most Solemn Caufes that was ever Tryed at the King s. Bench Bar, King James had the Mortification to see his new assum'd Prerogative basfled, and its Illegality expos'd to the World. The other thing observable upon this Tryal was, That the Tables were so far turn'd, that fome that had largely contributed to the Enflaving their Countrey with P 4 with false Notions of Law, were now of another Opinion: While at the fame time, others that had stood up for the Liberty of their Countrey in two fuccessive Parliaments, and had suffer'd upon that account, did now as much endeavour to stretch the Prerogative beyond its just Limits, as they had opposd it before. So hard it is for Mankind to be in all times, and upon all turns constant to themselves.

215

The News of the Bifhops being acquitted, was receiv'd with the higheft Expressions of Joy throughout the whole Kingdom : Nor could the King's own Presence prevent his Army, that was then encamp'd at Hounslow Heath, from mixing their loud Acclamations with the rest. This last Mortification might have prevented his Fate, if his Ears had been open to any but a Hot Party, that were positively resolv'd to push for all, cost what it would : And it was easily seen by the Soldiers Behaviour upon this occasion, How impossible it is to debauch an English Army from their Love to their Countrey and their Religion.

While the Bifbops were in the Tower, the Roman-Catholicks had their Hopes crown'd with the Birth of a pretended Prince Prince of Wales. The fears of a Prote- The Birth Rant Successfor, had been the only Allay of a pre-rended that render'd their Prosperity less perfect : Prince of Now the happiness of having an Heir to Wales. the Crown to be bred up in their own Religion, quash'd all those Fears, and aton'd for the uncertainty of the King's Life. It was fo much their Interest to have one, and there was fo many Circumftances that feem'd to render his Birth fuspicious, that the Nation in general were inclinable to believe that this was the last Effort of the Party, to accomplifh our Ruin.

All things feem'd now to confpire towards it. There was only a Parliament A new Parliawanting, to ratify and approve all the men de-Illegal Steps that had been made; which figu'd and was to be done effectually by taking off Bud. the Penal Laws and Test, the two chief Barriers of our Religion. To obtain . fuch a Parliament, no Stone was left unturn'd, and no Threats nor Promifes neglected. Regulators were fent down to every Corporation, to model them to this end ; though a great part of their Work had been done to their hand ; for in most of the New Charters there had been fuch Regulations made, and fuch fort of Men put in, as was thought would make all fure. But

Closetting

But to be yet furer, and to try the Inin fation clinations of People, Closetting came into fashion, and King James was at pains to found every Man's mind, how far he might depend upon him for his concurrence with those Designs : If they did not readily promife to ferve the King in his own way, which was the distinguishing word at that time, there was some Brand put upon them, and they were turn'd out of Place if they had any. Nor did King James think it below his Dignity, after the Priests had fail'd to bring in New Converts, to try himself how far his own Arguments might prevail; and he Clofetted Men for that purpose too. Some few of no Principles, and a great many others of desperate Fortunes, complimented him with their Religion, and were generally thereupon put into Employments : And fo fond was the King of making Proselytes at any rate, that there were of the Scum of the People that pretended to turn Papifts merely for the fake of a Weekly small Allowance, which was regularly paid them.

It's a question after all, whether the Parliament which K. James was thus labouring to model, would have answer'd his Expectation, had they come to fit; for Men's Men's Eyes were open'd more and more every day; and the Noble Principles of English Liberty began to kindle afresh in the Nation, notwithstanding all the endeavours had been us d of a long time to extinguish them. Though the Dissenters, who might be chosen into Parliament upon this new Model, would probably have made Terms for themfelves, to prevent their falling under any future Perfecution; yet being as averie to Popery as any others what sever, it is not to be imagin'd that they would upon that Confideration have unhindg'd the Constitution of England, to enable the Roman-Catholicks to break in upon the Establish'd National Church, which in the end must have inevitably. ruin'd both it and themfelves.

But there fell out a little before this time an Accident that help'd mightily to buoy up the finking Spirits of the Nation, and which was occasion'd by the forward Zeal of fome about the King, contrary to their Intentions. While the Project was going on to take off the Penal Laws and Test, and the Protestants were in amaze what to expect, the good Genius of England, and King James's ill Fate, fet him on to make a Tryal of the Inclinations of the Prince and Princess of Orange, Orange, in that matter. The Prince and Princess had look'd on with a filent Regret upon all the unlucky Steps that were making in England, and were unwilling to publish their Opinion of them, fince they knew it could not but be displeasing to K. James. To know their Highness mind in the business of the Penal Laws, and Test, was a thing the most defir'd by the Protestants; but there was no possible way to come to this knowledge, if King, James himself had not help'd them to it.

The Prince and Princefs of Orange's Opinion about the Penal Laws and Teft, declar'd in Penfionary Fagel's Letter.

Mr. Stuart, fince Sir James Stuart, had been pardon'd by King James, and receiv'd into Favour, after a long Banishment : He had been acquainted in Holland with the late Penfionary Fagel, and perfuaded himfelf of a more than ordinary Friendship with that Wife Mimister. The King forefaw it was his Intereft to find out, some one way or other, the Prince and Princess's Thoughts of these matters; which if they agreed with his own, were to be made publick ; if otherwise, were to be conceal d : And Mr. Stuart took that Task upon himfelf. Penfionary Fagel was in a great Post in Halland, and in a near Intimacy with the Prince; one that was intirely trufted by him. and ever firm to his Interest.

MEMOIR5, C.

tereft. To know the Penfionary's Opinion was thought to be the fame with knowing the Prince's, fince it was to be fuppos'd that he would not venture to write of any thing that concern'd England, especially fuch a nice Point as was then in question, without the Prince's Approbation at least, if not his positive Direction.

Upon these Confiderations, and upon a Miltake that Mr. Stuart was in, about the Conftitution of Holland, as if the Roman-Catholicks were not there excluded from Employments and Places of Trust, he writ a Letter to Pensionary Fagel. It's needless to give any account of the Letter it felf, fince Fagel's Answer, together with what has been already faid, do give a sufficient Hint of the Design and Scope of it.

So averse were the Prince and Princess of Orange to meddle, and so unwilling to allow Pensionary Fagel to return to this Letter an Answer which they knew would not be pleasing, that Mr. Stuart writ by the King's Direction five or fix more before it was thought fit to answer them. But at length their Highnesses were in a manner forc'd to it; by the Reports that were industriously spread abroad in England by the Emissaries of the the Court, as if the Penfionary in an Anfwer to Mr. Stuart, had acquainted him, That the Prince and Princels agreed with the King in the Delign of taking off the Penal Laws and Teft. This was not all; for the Marquels de Albeville, the English Envoy at the Hague, was put upon writing over to feveral Perfons, That the Prince of Orange had told him the very fame thing; which Letter of Albeville's was likewife made publick. Such reports were enough to shake the Constancy of all those that design'd to stand firm to the Interests of the Establish'd Church in the ensuing Parliament, and to make them give all up for lost.

The Prince and Princess of Orange to do themselves Justice, and to disabuse a Nation they had so near an Interest in, directed Pensionary Fagel to write one Answer to all Mr. Stuart's Letters, to this purpose; That being desired by Mr. Stuart to let him know the Prince and Princess of Orange's Thoughts concerning the Repeal of the Penal Laws, and more particularly concerning the Test, be told him, That he would write without Referve, fince Mr. Stuart bad faid in bis Letters, that they were writ by the King's Knowledge and Allowance. That it was the Prince and Princes's Opinion, nion, That no Christian ought to be persecuted for his Conscience, or be ill us'd, because be differs from the Publick and Establish'd Religion : And therefore, that they can consent, That the Papists in England, Scotland, and Ireland, be suffer'd to continue in their Religion, with as much Liberty as is allow'd them by the States of Holland; in which it cannot be denied but they enjoy a full Liberty of Conscience. And as to the Dissenters, their Highnesses did not only confent, but did heartily approve of their baving an entire Liberty for the full Exetcife of their Religion; and that their Highneffes were ready to concur to the fet ling and confirming this Liberty, and proteit and defend it, and likewise confirm it with their Guarrantee, which Mr. Stuart had mention'd.

MEMOIRS, Crc.

And if bis Majesty (continues the Pensionary) desires their Concurrence in Repealing the Penal Laws, their Highness were ready to give it, provided these Laws remain still in their sall force, by which the Roman Catholicks are shut out of both Houses of Parliament, and out of all Publick Employments Ecclesiastical, Civil, and Military; as likewise those other Laws which confirm the Protestant Religion, and which secure it against all the Astempts of the the Roman-Catholicks. But their Highneffes cannot agree to the Repeal of the Teft, and those other Penal Laws last mention'd, that tend to the security of the Protestant Religion; since the Roman-Catholicks receive no other Prejudices from these, than the being excluded from Parliament, and Pablick Employments.

More than this (adds Penfionary Fagel) their Highneffes do think ought not to be ask'd , or expected ; and they wondred how any that profess'd themselves Christians, and that man enjoy their Religion freely and without diftarbance, can judge it lawfal for them to diftarb the Quiet of any Kingdom or State, or oversurn Constitutions, that so they themselves may be admitted to Employments, and that these Laws in which the Security and Quiet of the Establish'd Religion confifts, foould be fbaken. And as to what Mr Stuart had writ, That the Roman-Catholicks in Holland were not (but out from Employments and Places of Truft, he tells him, He was grofly mistaken. The Pensionary concludes, That their High. nesses could not concur with his Majefty in thefe matters ; for they believ'd they floorld have much to answer to God for, if the confideration of any prefent Advantage (bould carry the n to confen: to things which 1hey they believe would not only be dangerous, but michievous to the Protestant Religion.

MEMOIRS, OG.

Thus far Pensionary Fagel. And I would not have dwelt fo long upon this Letter of his, if it were not for the Noble Scheme of a just Liberty in matters of Conscience, that's therein contain'd. Notwithstanding, it was still given out at Court, and that even after it came to Mr Stuart's hands, That he had writ the quite contrary; though it's but Charity to suppose that Mr. Stuart was a Man of more Honour than to contribute to the Report. At last there was a necessity of making publick the Pensionary's Letter in feveral Languages, which had wonderful Influence upon the Minds of the Protestants of England, and was highly refented by King James.

However, King James had more than one Method in his View, how to accomplish his Design; for what a Parliament it may be would not do, he was refolv d that an Army should; and therefore Care was taken to model his Troops as much to that end, as the shortness of time would allow.

Ireland was the inexhaustible Source delling of when se England was to be furnish'd with the Army. Q a Romish a Romifb Army; and an Irifb Roman-Catholick was the most welcome Guest at Whitehall. They came over in Shoals to take possession of the promis'd Land; and had already fwallow'd up in their Hopes the best Estates of the Hereticks in England. Over and above compleat Regiments of them, there was scarce a Troop or Company wherein fome of them were not placed by express Order from Court. Several Protestants that had ferv'd well and long, were turn'd out to make room for them ; and Seven confiderable Officers were cashier'd in one day, merely for refufing to admit them. The chief Forts, and particularly Portfmonth and Hull, the two Keys of England, were put into Popish Hands, and the Garifons fo modell'd, that the Majority were Papifts.

The Mo

225

To over-awe the Nation, and to make Slavery familiar, this Army was encamp'd Yearly near London; where the only Publick Chappel in the Camp was appointed for the Service of the Romifh Church, and strict Orders given out, That the Soldiers of that Religion should not fail every Sunday and Holiday to repair thither to Mass.

Digitized by Google

As

MEMOIRS, OG

As Ireland was remarkable for having The Me-furnish'd King James with Romish Troops thods us'd in ireland: fent into England, fo was it much more for the bare-fac d and open Invations that were made there, upon the Liberties and Rights of the Protestants. That Kingdom was the most proper Field to riper their Projects in, confidering that the Protestants were much out-number'd by the Papists, and had been for some Ages. the constant Object of their Rancour and Envy, which had been more than once express'd in Letters of Blood.

King James did recall the Earl of Clarendon, from the Government of Ireland, Tyrconnel foon after he was fent thither, and ap-Lieutepointed the Earl of Tyrconnel, to fucceed tenant of him, who was a Gentleman had figna- Ireland. liz'd himself for his Bigotry to the Church of Rome, and his Hatred to the Protestants. The Roman-Catholick Clergy had recommended him to King James for that Post, in a Letter mention'd at. length in the Appendix, As one that did Appendix, first espouse, and chiefly maintain the Cause Numb.22. of the Catholick Clergy, against their many P. 396. and powerful Enemies, for the last Five and twenty Tears; and was then the only Person under whose Fortitude and Popularity in that Kingdom, they durst with chearfulness, and Qz and affurance own their Loyalty, and affert his Majefty's Intereft. Making it therefore their humble Requeft, That his Majefty, would be pleas'd to lodge his Authority in his hands, to the Terror of the Factious, and Encouragement of his Majefty's faithful Subjects in Iteland; promifing to receive him with fuch Acclamations as the longcaptiv'd Jews did their Redeemer Mordecai. Which Letter fhew'd they were no lefs mistaken in their History of the Bible, than in their Advice to the King, for it does not appear by the Story of Mordecai in the Scripture, that he was ever fent to the Jews, or remov'd from the City of Sufa, after he came into Favour with Ahafuerus.

127

However, Tyrconnel fully answer'd the hopes and expectations of the Papifts, and the fears of the Protestants of Ireland; for by the Ministry of this Rigid Man was the Ruin of the Protestant Englifb Interest in that Kingdom in a great measure compleated.

At King James's Accession to the Crown, the Army of Ireland confisted of above Seven Thousand Men, all Protestants, and zealous to the Service: These were in a little time all turn'd out, and the whole Army made up of Papists, most of them them the Sons or Descendants, or near Relations of those that were Attainted for the Rebellion in 1641; or others that had distinguish'd themselves fince that time, by their notorious Villanies, and implacable Hatred to the English and Proteftant Intereft.

Though in King Charles's time, by The Man. the Influence of the Duke of York, there ner of filhad been grounds of Complaint against ling up the Bench fome of the Judges in Ireland, upon the es in Ireaccount of their Partiality to the Papists ; land. yet when King James came to the Crown, these very Judges were not thought fit enough for the Work that was defignd. It was judg'd necessary to employ the most zealous of the Party, those that from Interest and Inclination were the most deeply engag'd to destroy the Proteftant Interest; and accordingly such were pick d out to fit in every Court of Iustice.

The Cuftody of the King's Confcience and Great Seal, was given to Sir Alexander Fitton, a Person convicted of Forgery, not only at Westminster Hall, and at Chefter, but Fin'd for it by the Lords in Parliament. This Man was taken out of Goal, to discharge the Truft of Lord High Chance lor, and had Q_3 no no other Qualities to recommend him befides his being a Convert to the Romifk Church, and a Renegado to his Religion and Countrey. To him were added as Masters of Chancery, one Stafford a Popiss Priest, and O Neal, the Son of one of the most notorious Murtherers in the Massacre, 1641.

Digitized by Google

229

In the King's-Bench care was taken to place one Nugent, whole Father had loft his Honour and Eftate, for being a principal Actor in the fame Rebellian. This Man, who had never made any Figure at the Bar, was pitch'd upon to judge whether the Outlawries against his Father and Fellow-Rebels, ought to be revers'd; and whether the Settlements that were made in Ireland upon these Outlawries, ought to stand good.

The next Court is that of Exchequer, from which only, of all the Courts in Ireland, there lies no Appeal, or Writ of Error in England. It was thought fit, that one Rice, a profligate Fellow, and noted for nothing but Gaming, and a mortal Inveteracy against the Protestants, should fill the place of Lord Chief Baron. This Man was often heard to fay, before he came to be a Judge, That he would drive a Coach and Six Horses through the Alt

Act of Settlement : And before that Law was actually repeal'd in King James's Parliament, he declar'd upon the Bench, That it was against Natural Equity, and did not oblige. It was before him, that all the Charters in the Kingdom were damn'd in the space of a Term or two; fo much was he for difpatch. A Learned Prelate, from whofe Book all the things Dr. King that here relate to that Countrey are ta- Bilhop of ken, does observe, That if this Judge derry, his had been left alone, it was believ'd in a State of few Years he would by fome Contrivance Ireland under or other have given away most of the K James, Frotestants Estates in Ireland, without troubling a Parliament to Attaint them.

In the Court of Common-Pleas it was thought advisable, That a Protestant Chief Justice should continue; yet so, as to pinion him with Two of their own fort, that might out-vote him upon occasion.

The Administration of Justice and the Laws being in fuch Hands, it was no wonder that the poor Protestants in Ireland wish'd rather to have had no Laws at all, and be left to their Natural Defence, than be cheated into the necessity of fubmitting to Laws, that were executed only to punish, and not to protect them. Under such Judges the Roman-Catholicks Q 4

Catholicks had a glorious time; and be their Cause never so unjust, they were sure to carry it: When the Lord Chancellor did not stick on all occasions, and sections upon the Bench, to declare, That the Protestants were all Rogues, and that among Forty Thousand of them, there was not one that was not a Traytor, a Rebel, and a Villain.

The Supreme Courts being thus fill'd up, it was but reasonable all other Courts should keep pace with them. In the Year 1687. there was not a Protestant Sheriff in the whole Kingdom, except one, and he put in by militake for another of the fame Name, that was a Roman-Catholick. Some few Protestants were continued in the Commission of the Peace; but they were render'd useless and infignificant, being over-power'd in every thing by the great Number of Papifts join'd in Commission with them, and those, for the most part, of the very Scum of the People; and a great many, whose Fathers had been executed for Thest, Robbery, or Murther.

The Frivy Council of Ireland is a great part of the Constitution, and has confiderable Privileges and Powers annex'd to it: This was likewife fo modell'd, that the the Papists made the Majority; and those few that were Protestants, chose for the most part to decline appearing at the Board, fince they could do those of their Religion no fervice.

The great Barrier of the People's Li- The Reberties both in England and Ireland being the Cortheir Right to chuse their own Repre- porations fentatives in Parliament, which being in treland. once taken away, they become Slaves to the Will of their Prince; The Protestants in Ireland finding a necessity of fecuring this Right in their own Hands, had procur'd many Corporations to be founded, and had built many Corporate Towns at their own Charges; from all which the Roman Catholicks were by their Charters excluded. This Barrier was broken through at one ftroke, by diffolving all the Corporations in the Kingdom, upon Quo Warranto's brought into the Exchequer-Court, and that without fo much as the least shadow of Law. Hereupon New Charters were granted, and fill'd up chiefly with Papifts, and men of desperate or no Fortunes : And a Claufe was inferted in every one of them, which fubjected them to the Absolute Will of the King, by which it was put in the Power of the chief Governor to turn out and

gularing

and put in whom he pleas'd, without fhewing a Reason, or any formal Tryal at Law.

rities 2gainft the Proceflant Clergy.

The Protestant Clergy felt upon all The Seve- occasions the weight of Tyrconnel's Wrath. The Priefts began to declare openly, That the Tythes belong'd to them, and forbad their People, under the pain of Damnation, to pay them to the Protestant This past afterwards into Incumbents. an Att of Parliament, by which not only all Tythes payable by Papists, were given to their own Priests, but likewise a way was found out to make the Popifh Clergy capable of enjoying the Protestants Tythes : Which was thus: If a Protestant happen'd to be posses'd of a Bishoprick, a Dignity, or other Living, he might not by this new Act demand any Tythes or Ecclefiastical Dues from any Roman-Catholick; and as foon as his Preferment became void by Death, Ceffion, or Absence, a Popish Bishop or Clergyman was put into his Place. And the Act was to express, that there needed no more to oblige all Men to repute and deem a Man to be a Roman-Catholick Bishop or Dean of any place, but the King's fignifying him to be fo, under his Privy Signet, or Sign Manual. As foon as any one one came to be thus entitled to a Bishoprick, Deanry, or Living, immediately all the Tythes, as well of Prorestants as Papists, became due to him, with all the Glebes and Ecclessiastical Dues.

The only great Nursery of Learning Again ft in Ireland, is the University of Dublin, versity of confisting of a Provost, Seven Senior, and Dublin. Nine Junior Fellows, and Seventy Scholars, who are partly maintain d by a Yearly Salary out of the Exchequer. This Salary the Earl of Tyrconnel ftopt, merely for their not admitting into a vacant Fellowship, contrary to their Sta-tutes and Oaths, a Vicious Ignorant Perfon, who was a New Convert. Nor could he be prevail d with by any Interceffion or Intreaty, to remove the Stop ; by which in effect he diffolv'd the Foundation, and shut up the Fountain of Learning and Religion. This appear'd more plainly afterwards to have been his Defign; for it was not thought enough upon King James's Arrival, to take away their Maintenance, but they were further proceeded against, and the Vice-president, Fellows, and Scholars all turn'd out, their Furniture, Library, and Communion-Plate seiz'd, and every thing that belong'd belong'd to the Colledge, and to the private Fellows and Scholars, taken away. All this was done, notwithstanding that when they waited upon King James at his first Arrival at Dublin, he was pleas'd to promise them, That he would preferve them in their Liberties and Properties, and rather augment than diminish the Privileges and Immunities that had been granted them by his Predecessors. In the House they plac'd a Garison, and turn'd the Chappel into a Magazine, and the Chambers into Prifons for the Protestants. One More, a Popish Priest, was made Provoft, and one Mackarty, also a Priest, was made Library keeper, and the whole defign d. for them and their Fraternity.

235

One Archbishoprick, and feveral Bishipricks, and a great many other Dignities and Livings of the Church, were defignedly kept vacant, and the Revenues first paid into the Exchequer, and afterwards disposid of to Titular Bishops and Priests, while in the mean time the Cures lay neglected; fo that it appearid plainly that the Design was to destroy the Succession of Protestant Clergymen. At length things came to that height after King James was in Ireland, that most of the Churches in and about Dublin, were feizid feiz'd upon by the Government ; and at last Lutterell, Governor of Dublin, iffued out his Order, mention'd in the Appendix, Forbidding more than Five Protestants to meet together, under pain of Death. Being Numb 22. ask'd whether this was defign'd to hinder P. 399. meeting in Churches? He answer'd, It was defign'd to hinder their meeting there, as well as in other places. And accordingly all the Churches were shut up, and all Religious Assemblies through the whole Kingdom forbidden, under the pain of Death.

2.5

MEMOIRS, GC.

It were endless to enumerate all the The Act Miferies that Reverend Author mentions, of Attainwhich the Protestants of Ireland suffer'd der in Irein the Reign of King James : -But to give a decifive Blow, there was an At of Attainder past in Parliament, in order to which every Member of the Houle of Commons return'd the Names of all fuch Protestant Gentlemen as liv'd near them, or in the County or Borough for which he ferv'd; and if he was a Stranger to any of them, he fent to the Countrey for Information about them. When this Bill was prefented to the King for his Affent, the Speaker of the House of Commons told him, That many were attainted in in that All upon fuch Evidence as fatisfied the Honse, and the reft upon common Fame.

In this Ad there were no fewer Attainted, than Two Archbifbops, One Duke, Seventeen Earls, Seven Counteffes, Iwenty eight Viscounts, Iwo Viscounteffes, Seven Bishops, Eighteen Barons, Thirty three Baronets, Fifty one Knights, Eighty three Clergymen, Two thousand One bundred eighty two Elquires and Gentlemen : And all of them unheard, declar'd and adjudg'd Traytors, convicted and attainted of High Treason, and adjudg d to suffer the Pains of Death and Forfeiture. The famous Proscription of Rome during the last Triumvirate, came not up in some respects to the Horror of this ; for there were condemn'd in this little Kingdom more than double the number that were pro-fcrib'd through the vaft Bounds of the Roman Empire. And to make this of Ireland yet the more terrible, and to put the Persons attainted out of a possibility of escaping, the AH it felf was conceal'd, and no Protestant allow'd a Copy of it, till Four Months after it was past. Whereas in that of Rome, the Names of the Persons proscrib'd, were affix'd upon all the Publick Places of the City, the very day the Profeription was concerted ant and thereby opportunity was given to mány of the Noblest Families in Rome, to preferve themfelves by a fpeedy flight, for better times.

MEMOIRS, Crc.

There remain'd but one Kingdom more for the Romish Party to act their Defigns in, and that was Scotland; where they reap'd a full Harvest of their Hopes, and there were scarce left the least Remains of Ancient Liberty in that Nation. Their Miseries were fumm'd up in one new-coin'd Word, which was us'd in all the King's Declarations, and ferv'd to exprefs to the full their Abfolute Slavery; which was this, That his Subjects were oblig'd to obey him without Referve. A Word that the Princes of the Eaft, how Abfolute foever they be, did never yet pretend to in their Stile, whatever they might in their Actions. But I leave the Detail of the Encroachments that were made upon the Laws and Liberties of that Kingdom, to others that may be thought more impartial, as having fuffer'd lefs in their Ruins.

While King James was thus push'd on by a headstrong Party, to enflave his The Inte-Subjects, the other Princes and States of Foreign Europe look'd on with quite different Sen- Princes timents, according as their own Interefts and States and England.

239

and Safety mov'd them. The greater part did commiserate the Fate of these Three Kingdoms, and wish'd for their Deliverance. The Protestants faw with Regret, that they themfelves were within an immediate Prospect of losing the most considerable Support of their Religion; and both they and the Roman-Catholicks were equally convinc'd, that it was their common Interest to have England continue in a condition to be the Arbiter of Christendom, especially at a time when they faw they most needed it. On the other hand, it was the Interest of another Prince, that not only the King of England should be his Friend, but the Kingdom of England should become inconfiderable abroad, which it could not fail to be when enflav'd at home.

King James had been again and again follicited, not only by Protestant Princes but those of his own Religion, to enter into other Measures for the common Safety of Furope; at least, not to contribute to its Ruin, by espousing an Interest which they judg'd was opposite to it. The Emperor, among others, had by his Ambassfador made repeated Instances to him to this purpose, but with no better Success than the rest; as appears by a Letter

Letter he writ to him after his Abdication; The Emperor's which has been Printed in feveral Languages, and was conceiv'd in Elegant K. James Latin, as all the Publick Difpatches of in Latin, that Court are. But all these Remonat London; ftrances had no weight with King James; 1689. though they had this good effect in the end, as to put those Princes and States upon fuch Measures as fecur'd to them the Friendship of England in another way.

The Power of France was by this time become the Terror and Envy of the reit of Europe; and that Crown had upon all fides extended its Conquests. The Empire, Spain, and Holland ieem'd to enjoy a precarious Peace, while the common Enemy of the Christian Name was making War with the Emperor, and the State of Venice, and was once very near being Master of the Imperial Seat, whereby h : might have carried the War into the Bowels of Germany. The main ftrength of the Empire being turn'd against the Turks, and that with various Success, there was another War declar'd against the Emperor by France; fo that it came to be abiolutely necessary for Spain and HIMand to interpose, not as Mediarors; for that they were not to hope for, but R 23 as Allies and Partners in the War. These last, as well as the other Princes and States that lay nearest the Rhine, were expos'd to the Mercy of a Prince whom they were not able to refut, if England fhould look on as Neuters, or take part against them; the last of which they had reason to fear.

Thus it happen'd that the Fortune of England, and that of the greatest part of Christendom came to be link'd together. and their common Liberties must of neceffity have undergone one and the fame The latter, from a Natural Prin-Fate. ciple of Self-Prefervation were refolv'd to make their last Effort to break the Fetters which they faw were ready to be impos'd upon them; And the other, animated by the Example of their Anceftors, and the Constitution of their Countrey, which is diametrically oppofite to Tyranny, were refolv'd to venture All, to retrieve themselves and their Posterity from the Chains that were already put upon them.

The Intereft the Orsnee had in England.

Both the one and the other might have struggled in vain to this Day with Prince of the Ruin that threatend them, if Heaven in pity to their Condition had not provided, in the Perfon of the Prince of Dranze, Orange, the only Sanctuary that was left them to theiter their finking State. This Prince by his Mother was a Nephew of England, and in Right of the Princess his Wife, the Prefumptive Heir of the Crown. By his Father's fide he was Heir of an Illustrious Family, that had eterniz'd their Name, by delivering their Countrey from Slavery, and laying the Foundation of a mighty Commonwealth, which has fince prov'd the greatest Bulwark of the Protestant Religion, and the chief Support of the Liberty of Christendom. A Family born for the good of Mankind, to be the Scourge of Tyrants, and Deliverers of the Opprefs'd.

The Father of this Prince died young, The ill poffets'd of Hereditary Dignities he de-fit nees of the United Provinces, which had plac'd of Orange them upon a Level with most Princes of Birth. Europe, and had given them a Figure in the World equal to fome Crown'd Heads, He had married a Princels of England, the Eldest Daughter of King Charles I. and left her with Child of this only Son, at a Time when the Royal Family of England was not only bereft of their Rev gal Power at Home, but forc'd to seek Refuge Abroad. The Father was scarce R 2 dead.

dead, and the Son yet unborn, when a Party in Holland that always oppos'd the House of Orange, took hold of that unhappy Juncture, to divest the Family by a Publick Decree, of all the Dignities and Offices they had enjoy'd fince the first Foundation of that Commonwealth, and which they had so justly acquir'd as the Rewards of so many glorious Services they had done their Countrey.

Under these dismal Circumstances was the Prince of Orange, now King of England Born, and in Apartments hung with Mourning, for the Untimely Death of a Father, and the Murther of a Royal Grandfather, he first faw Light.

He was about ten Years of Age, when his Uncle King Charles the Second was reftor'd; and whether it proceeded from want of Power or of Will in the one, the Condition of the other was little better'd by that Change. It s true, King Charles in his Wars with Holland did always mention the Injury done to his Nephew, as one of the Motives of his breaking with the States > Yet neither in the Treaty of Breda in 1667, nor in the Alliance made at the Hague in 1668. nor that of the Peace concluded at London in 167¹/₄, was there any notice taken of the Frince

MEMOIRS, Cr.

Prince of Orange's Interest. In this last it's confess'd it was needless, feeing some little time before, he was reftor'd to all his Hereditary Offices and Dignities upon the following Occasion.

King Charles, the French King, and The man-ner how the Bishop of Munster, had enter'd into he was rea mutual League, against the Hollanders in flor'd to the Year 1672. While in pursuance of the Dignithat League, King Charles, without any Family. previous Declaration of War, did fend out a strong Squadron of Ships to intercept their Smyrna Fleet, and ruin their Trade at Sea; and while the Bishop of Munster did invade the Provinces that lay next to him, the French King, at the Head of a Royal Army of at least 118000 Foot, and 26000 Horfe, broke in upon them on the other fide. Like an Impetuous Torrent he carried all before him, without any remarkable opposition, making himfelf Mafter in a few Weeks, of above Forty Towns and places of Strength, fome without firing a Gun, and the relt with little or no Refistance. This Army was compos'd of the best Troops that had been feen together for fome Ages before, Memoirs and was made up of feveral Nations. Over Politiq de Monfieur and above the French themselves, there du Mont. were 3000 English, 3000 Catalans 3000 R 3 · ' Genoese,

Digitized by Google

245

Genoefe, and other Italians, 6000 Savoyards, 1200 German Horfe, 10000 Swiffers, without reckoning into the Number the Antient Regiments of that Nation in the French Service; and which was altogether new and extraordinary, there was a Regiment of Swifs Horfe. Under the King in Perfon, this Army was commanded by Two of the greatest Generals of the Age, the late Prince of Conde, and the Marefchal Turenme.

The defperate Condition of Holland, An. 1672.

١

Never was any State nearer its Ruin, than that of Holland was upon this Irruption; and in the Opinion of all the World, the end of that flourishing Republick was then at hand. The French pierc'd into the Bowels of Holland as far as Utrecht, where the King kept a fplendid Court. and receiv'd Embassies from all Parts. He was already Master of Three of the Seven Provinces, and a Fourth was in the hands of the Bishop of Munster his Ally. The Confternation was fo great in the reft, that it's faid it was debated at Amsterdam, whither they should fend the Keys of that Town to the French King at Utrecht, or hold out a Siege.

Scarce any thing can paint out in livelier Colours the low Ebb the Commonmealth of Holland was brought to at that time; time, than the Declaration which the French King publish'd at Arnheim, plac'd at length in the Appendix. In this the Appendix, French King declar'd that all the Inhabi- Numb 23. tants of the Towns in Holland that fhould Pig. 402. render themfelves willingly his Subjects, and receive his Troops, should not only be treated favourably, but likewife be maintain'd in their Liberties and Privileges, and enjoy the free Exercise of their Religion: But on the contrary, who. ever of them did not fubmit themselves. of what degree or condition foever they be, or should endeavour to resist his: Arms, by opening their Sluces, or any: other way, they fhould be punish'd with the utmost Rigor ; his Majesty being refolv'd to give no Quarter to the Inhabi-tants of those Towns that shall resist his Arms, but an Order to pillage their Goods, and burn their Houles.

Digitized by Google

246

MEMOIRS, GC.

Among the more immediate Caufes of The Cauthis furprizing Defolation of Holland; Defolatiupon the Irruption of the French Army; on. there were chiefly thefe two: 1. The fue pine Security, or rather profound Lethargy they were of late fallen into. And 2. Their Intefline Divisions.

As to the first, A vast Opulent Trade through most parts of the World, had R 4 won wonderfully enrich'd them, and brought them to neglect and forget the Art of War. A Peace that had continued without any remarkable Interruption for about T wenty Years at Land, lull'd them fo fast asleep with fasse Notions of their own Strength, that they had neglected their Fortifications and Martial Discipline, and were brought to believe, that their Neighbour's Garifons and Strong Places were fufficient to cover them from all Infults.

As to the fecond, Their Ancestors at the first founding their State, taking into their Confideration, that they were toraise a Commonwealth out of a great many distinct Governments Independent originally of one another, and govern'd by Cuftoms and Laws peculiar to every Town and Province, and how difficult it was to prevent Intestine Divisions in a Body thus aggregated, did wifely provide against such a destructive Inconvenience, by constituting an Hereditary Stadtholder and Captain General, whole Office and Power was to be the Center in which all the various Lines of their Constitution should meet, and the Cement that should keep the whole Frame toge-This High and Important Dignity ther. was was lodg'd in the Family of Orange; and it was to the Aufpicious Conduct of the Princes of that House, that the States of Holland ow'd their first Settlement, and the Figure they have made ever fince in the World.

What their Ancestors foresaw, and had thus wifely provided against, came to pass: For no sooner was this Office and Dignity abolish'd, upon the Death of the last Prince of Orange, through the Interest of a prevailing Faction, but they fell into Intestine Divisions and Animosities at Home, and sunk in their Reputation Abroad: Insomuch that it was justly faid, That instead of being the United, they were become the Disfunited Provinces.

There may be a Third Reason given for this Chain of Missfortunes that overwhelm'd the Hollanders the first Year of this War. From a false, though plausible Notion of faving Money, they thought fit to reduce their Army to 25000 Men, and rejected the repeated Propositions of Spain to enter into a Treaty with them for a mutual Supply of Money Yearly to England and Sueden, by which these two Crowns might be enabled and encourag d to maintain and continue the Triple League. And which was yet worfe, the few Troops they had, were in a bad Condition, and funk to a very low degree both in Difcipline and Courage. Their Fortifications were every where fallen into decay, and their Magazines ill provided. To compleat all their Misfortunes, they wanted a Head to command them, at leaft one of Weight and Authority enough to fupport fo great a Trust.

It were in vain to attempt to express the deplorable Condition of the Hollan-ders at that time. It's enough to fay, The approach of a Triumphant King flesh'd with Victories, put them into so deep a Confernation, that a great many of their Richeft Families abandon'd their Countrey, and retir'd to Hamburgh, Antwerp, and other places of Security; while the States General were upon giving Orders for removing the Courts and Archives from the Hagae, for fear they should fall into the Enemy's hands. This horrid Fright, which ipread it felf every where, and grew every day greater, was fuffici-ent of it felf to occasion the entire Ruin of their State, though it had not been accompanied as it was, with Seditions, Divifions, and Tumults in every Town and Province, and they had no Enemy within their

Digitized by Google

250

jitized by Google

MEMOIRS, GC.

their Bowels. Those alone did naturally tend to the Diffolution of the *Belgick Uni*on, without any other concurring Circumstances to hurry it on.

Matters standing thus with the United Provinces, they came to fee, when it was almost too late, their former Errors, and more particularly that of abolishing the Office of Stadtholder. And now, as the last Cast for their Liberty, they applied to the Prince of Orange, young though he was, as the only Perfon capable to fupport their Tottering State, and to put a ftop to the Miseries that overwhelm'd their Countrey. With the Universal Confent and Approbation of the People, and the Publick Sanction of the States, he was declar'd Stadtholder, Captain and Admiral General, and restor'd to all the Dignities of his Family.

It's hard to determine whether the Misfortunes of his Countrey, or the Universal Love the People bore him, contributed most to his Restoration. However, he was restor'd in spite of the Barnevelt Faction; and had the pleasure to see De Wit, the greatest Opposer of his House, among the other Deputies that waited upon him with the Resolutions of the States General, and deliver'd him his first Commission. The The Hiftory of the Marefchal Turenne, by Monfieur de Brfin, render'd out of French by Ferrand Spince, 1686.

The Difficulties this Young Prince had to struggle with in supporting his finking Countrey, would have pall'd any Courage but his own; and may in the main be gathered from what has been already faid. What these were, upon his first heading the Army, arc in part fo well express'd by a French Author, who was a confiderable Actor in that War on the French fide, and has Writ the Account of it with an Impartiality not over-frequent among the Historians of his Countrey, that it may not be amifs to Transcribe some few Passages relating to this matter, as they lie together in the Eng. · lifb Translation.

The diffi culties the P. of Orange had to grapple with for ratrieving his Countrey from Ruin. "Nothing but the Seafon of the Year, "fays be, hinder d the French from at-"tempting new Conquefts, or rather the "Waters which cover'd the Surface of "the Earth. The Duke of Luxemburgh "being ftill at Utretcht, hop'd however, "that if once it came to freeze, he might "by means of the Ice furprize feveral "Pofts that were otherwife inacceffible. "As the Enemy (meaning the Holland-"ers) were not unacquainted with his "Defign, they had ever the Shovel and "Pick-axe in their hands, to precaution "them-

MEMOIRS, Cr.

"themfelves against this Misfortune, "upon the first Frost that should come. "They broke the least piece of Ice, "hoping by taking such strict care, they "should render all his Measures abor-"tive. But it happening to freeze all of "a fudden, it was impossible for them to "repair in feveral days what fell out in "one Night. This cass fo great an "Alarm into the Places that were the "most exposed, that People's minds were "wholly set upon removing thence what "they had most precious.

"The Confternation spread it felf to " the very Hague ; which being deftitute " of Walls and Defence, could not other-" wife expect but a strange Desolation, if " the Posts that cover'd it came to be " forc'd. However, the Prince of Orange, " who laid the Publick Mileries as much to " beart, as if they had only regarded him-" felf, had not for all this been under any "Apprehensions, if his Troops, by be-" ing fo often beaten, had not utterly " loft their Courage; for though the "Ice feem'd to give a great Advantage " to the French, they would however " run a great Rifque, in coming to at-" tack him in places well intrench'd, and "where his Highness might oppose against

The D of of Luxemburgh's Cruelties at Swammerdam.

" against them as many Men as they " could have. He was bufied Day and " Night either in adding new Fortifica-" tions to those that were already made, " or in encouraging his Captains and "Soldiers. But whatever care he rook, "Colonel Penvil, abandon'd his Paft, "upon the Request of the Inhabitants of Dergan, who fent for him to main-tain their Walls. The Duke of Luxem-" burgh trufting rather to the Terror than * the Strength of his Troops, marching " in the mean while towards Bodegrave se and Swammerdam, won both, Sword in "hand. And, as if this Action had not " been fufficiently glorious by reason of " the little Opposition he met with, he " would render it the more remarkable, " not only by the Slaughter that he made " of those that were found in Arms, but " of all forts of Persons, even Women " and Children. He was often heard, " amidst the pitcous Cries that every one " made to move him to Compation, to " bid his Soldiers give no Quarter, but " Plunder, Ravilh, and Kill. He him-" felf did what he faid ; and his Men, " after his Example, having delug'd the " Streets with Rivers of Blood, entred " the Hoafes, where they committed in-" conceivable

MEMOIRS, Cr.

" conceivable Cruelties. Several Wo-"men were violated in their Husbands "Arms, feveral Maidens in their Fa-"thers; and whoever went about to "oppofe fuch Griminal Exceffes, was pi-"tioufly maffacred by thefe Furies, who "fuffer d themfelves to be no longer go-"vern'd, but by their diforderly Paffion, "and by their Cruelty. Thus far my Author.

Norwithstanding these Difficulties and Discouragements that seem'd insuperable, wonderful and furprizing were the Confequences of the Prince of Orange's Restoration. As if that Family alone were defign'd of Heaven to be the Founder and Restorer of Holland : It fell out, that immediately upon his being call'd to the Helm, the whole Scene of their Af-fairs chang'd to the better. At the Head of a fmall ill-disciplin'd Army, discou-rag'd by continual Loss, he not only put a stop to the French Conquests, but by taking first Naërden in spite of an Army near four times greater than his own, and carrying afterwards the War out of his own Countrey, he oblig'd the Enemy to abandon their Conquests in Holland as fast as they had gain'd them, and be con-contented to retire to the Defence of their own Frontiers.

This War was attended with various Succefles on all fides; and most of the Princes of Europe came to be fome way or other engag d in it; till at last it ended in the Treaty of Nimeguen. The part King Charles acted in all these Transactions, contributed but little to his Glory; for he had been unsuccessful while he was engag'd in the War; and when he came to be a Mediator for the Peace, all Parties grew jealous of him, and neglected him.

It was during the Courfe of this War, as has been faid before, that King Charles aton'd for all the Errors of his Reign, by marrying his Niece, the Lady Mary, to the Prince of Orange : And whatever were the Motives that induc'd him to comply in this with the Universal Wishes of his People, it has been found fince that not only England, but the greatest part of Europe do thare at this day in the Bleffings that have attended it.

By this Match the Prince of Orange had a double Interest in England, both as a Prince of the Blood himself, and in Right of his Princes, the next Presumptive Heir. He liv'd with King Charles in as much Friendship as was possible, for one that would would not enter into an Interest separate from that of his Countrey, or of England. Infomuch that in all the Endeavours that were made to exclude the Duke of. Tork from the Crown, he look'd on, without espousing any of the Parties that struggled for or against the Bill of Exclusion; though he knew it was design'd that He and the Princess should succeed upon the Death of King Charles.

MEMOIRS, Cr.

When King James came to the Throne, the Prince of Orange tried all possible means to cultivate a fincere Friendship with him, and to perfuade him to enter into fuch Measures as might tend to the Common fafety of Europe, and the Hap-pinels of England; which if King James had given Ear to, would have preferv d the Crown upon his Head. And to cautious was he of giving him any reasonable ground of Complaint, that though in King Charles's time he had given a Generous Welcome to the Duke of Monmouth, at the request of that King, upon his retiring to Holland; yet as foon as he knew that that unhappy Geneleman delign'd to invade England upon King James's Accelfion to the Throne, he offer'd to come over in Person to his Affistance, and feat him with all Expedition the English and Scotch S

Scotch Troops that were in the Service of the States.

It had been happy for King James if he had complied with the Advice of the Prince of Orange, or had not by his Succels against Monmouth been push'd on to make the Steps that have been mention'd, together with a great many more, for Brevity's fake here omitted, towardshis own Ruin, and that of the Constitution of England. But being flatter'd with the gaudy Charms of Absolute Power, and the empty Merit of Restoring the Romish Religion, he drove on without Controul, till at last he forc'd the People of England upon an inevitable necessity of ralling in the Prince of Orange to retrieve the expiring Liberties of their Countrey.

At the fame time an indificiuble Friend/bip and Alliance, which King James had enter'd into when Duke of Tork, and had cultivated afterwards when he came to the Crown, was a matter of that valt Confequence to the Neighbouring Princes and States, as would not permit them to stand by as unconcern'd Spectators of the Scene that was acting in England; but oblig'd them likewife to

258

MEMOIRS, Crc.

to have recourse to the Prince of Orange for breaking off their own Fetters, by breaking first those of England.

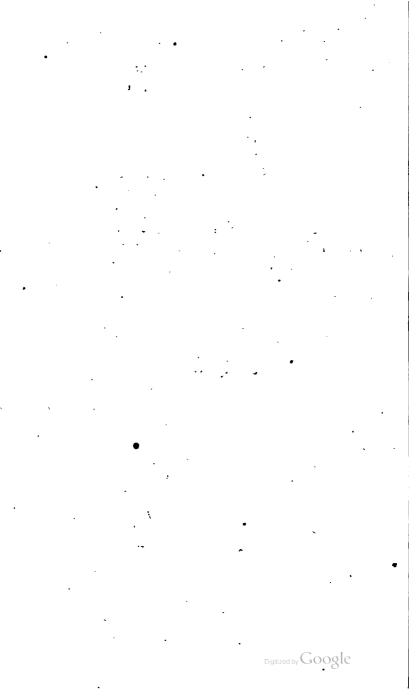

But by what Steps and concurring Accidents, and with what furprizing Circumftances this Mighty Defign came about, may fome time or other, though perhaps not fo properly in this Age, be the Subject of a Second Part, when it meets with one of more Leifure and Capacity to write it.

FINIS

.

Digitized by Google

S 2 APPEN-

Memoire?

APPENDIX;

Containing a Collection of Instruments and Original Papers, referr'd to in the former Memoirs.

NUMB. I.

The Character of the Members of the House Niunton's of Commons in Queen Elizabeth's Time; Fragmania and how differing from those in the Reign, p. 13 14. of King James.

W E must ascribe fome part of the Commendation to the Wisdom' of the Times, and the Choice of Parliament-men: For I find not that they were at any time given to any violent of pertinacious dispute; Elections being made of grave and discreet Persons, not factious and Ambitious of Fame; such as came not to the House with a malevolent Spirit of Contention, but with a preparation to confult on the publick good; rather to comply than contest with her Majefty. Neither do I find that the House was at any time weaken'd and pefter'd with the admission of too many Young Heads, as it hath been of later times : Which remembers me of Recorder Martin's Speech, about the Tenth of our late Sovereign Lord King James, when there were accounts taken of Forty Gentlemen not above Twenty, and fome not exceeding Sixteen; which moved him to fay, That it was the ancient Custom for Old Men to make Laws for Young ones; but that then he faw the Cafe alter'd, and that there were Children elected unto the Great Council of the Kingdom, which .came to invade and invert Nature, and to enact Laws to govern their Fathers. Sure we are, the Houfe always took the Common Caufe into their Confideration, and they faw the Queen had just occafion, and need enough to use their affiltance: Neither do I remember that the House did ever capitulate, or prefer their. private to the publick, the Queen's Neceffities, Gc. but waited their times, and in the first place gave their Supply, and according to the Exigency of her Affairs; yet failed not at last to obtain what they defired ; fo that the Queen and her Parliaments liaments had ever the good fortune to depart in Love, and on reciprocal Terms; which are Gonfiderations which have not been to exactly observ'd in our last Affemblies as they might, and I would to God they had been : For confidering the great Debt left on the King, and in 4 48. what Incumbrances the Houfe it felf had then drawn him, his Majefty was not well used ; though I lay not the blame on the whole Suffrage of the House, where he had many good Friends; for I dare avouch, had the House been freed. of half a dozen of popular and difcontented Perfors, fuch as (with the Fellow that burnt the Temple at Ephefus) would be talked of, tho' but for doing of Mif-chief, I am confident the King had obtained that which in reason, and at his first Accession he ought to have received freely, and without any condition.

S 3

APPENDIX

262

NUMB:

A.P.P.E.N.D.I.X.

NUMB. II.

Memoirs, p. 13.

Nounton, Ibid p. 80, 81,82, 83.

The Character of Cecil Earl of Salisbury; with his Letter to the Lord Mountjoy, about the Spaniards Invading Ireland.

ND fo again to this great Malter of State, and the Staff of the Queen's declining Age ; who though his little crooked Person could not promise any great fupportation, yet it carried thereon a Head and a Head-piece of a valt content ; and therein it feems Nature was fo diligent to compleat one and the best part about him, as that to the perfection of his Memory and Intellectuals, the took care also of his Senses; and to put him in Linceos Oculos, or to pleafure him the more, borrowed of Argos, fo to give unto him a Prospective Sight. And for the reft of his Senfitive Virtues, his Predeceffor Walfingham had left him a Receit to fmoll out what was done in the Conclave; and his good old Father was fo well feen in the Mathematicks, as that he could tell you through all Spain, every part, every Ship, with the Burthens, whither bound, what preparation, what Impe-

APPENDIX

Impediments for diversion, of Enterprizes, Counfels, and Refolutions. And that we may see (as in a little Map) how docible this little Man was, I will prefent a Tafte of his Abilities.

My Lord of Devonshire, (upon the cer- Mounting. tainty the Spaniard would invade Ireland with a ftrong Army) had written very earneftly to the Queen and the Council, for such supplies to be sent over, that might enable him to march up to the spaniard, if he did land, and follow on his Profecution against the Rebels. Sir Robert Cecil (besides the general Dif- Earl of patch of the Council, as he often did) Salisbury. wrote this in private; for these two began then to love dearly.

My Lord, Out of the abundance of my Affection, and the care I have of your welldoing, I must in private put you out of doubt, (for of Fear I know you cannot be otherwife Senfible, than in the way of Honour) that the Spaniard will not come unto you this Tear; for I have it from my own, what Preparations are in all his Parts, and what he can do; for be confident, he beareth np a Reputation by seeming to embrace more than he can gripe; but the next Tear be affured he will caft over unto you some Forlorn Hopes,

265

Hopes, which how they may be reinforced beyond his prefent Ability, and his first Intention, I cannot as yet make any certain Judgment; but I believe out of my Intelligence, that you may expect their landing in Munster; and, the more to distract you, in several places, as at Kingsale, Beerhaven, Baltimore, where you may be fure (coming from Sea) they will first fortify, and learn the Strength of the Rebels, before they dare take the Field; howsoever (as I know you will not) lessen not your Care, neither your Defences; and whatsoever lies within my power to do you and the Publick service, rest therefore assured.

Note, All came exactly to pais, as this Letter infinuates.

ŃUMB.

Digitized by Google

266

APPENDIX.

NUMB. III.

Memoirs,

267

Queen Elizabeth's Speech to the House of Commons, in Answer to their Address cambdon's about her Marriage. Hift. of Q Eliz.

P. 26, 27. N a matter most unpleasing, most pleafing to me, is the apparent Good-Will of you and my People, as proceeding from a very good mind towards me and the Commonwealth. Concerning Marriage, which ye fo earneftly move me to, Ishave been long fince perfuaded, that I was fent into this World by God to think and do those things chiefly, which may tend to his Glory. Hereupon have I chosen that kind of life which is most free from the troublefome Cares of this World, that I might attend the Service of God alone. From which, if either the tendred Marriages of most Potent Princes, or the danger of Death intended against me, could have removed me, I had long agone enjoyed the Honour of an Husband. And these things have I thought upon when I was a private Perfon. But now that the publick Care of governing the Kingdom is laid upon me to to draw upon me also the Cares of Marriage, may seem a point of inconsiderate Folly. Yea, to farisfy you, I have al-ready joined my felf in Marriage to an Husband, namely the Kingdom of England : And behold (faid fbe, which I marvel ye have forgotten) the Pledge of this my Wedlock and Marriage with my Kingdom. (And therewith fbe drew the Ring from her Finger, and shewed it, wherewith at her Coronation fee had in a set form of words selemnly given ber sets in Marriage to ber Kingdom.) Here having made a pause: And do not (saith she) upbraid me with miserable lack of Children; for every one of you, and as many as are Englishmen, are Children and Kinfmen to me; of whom, if God deprive me nor, (which God forbid) I cannot without injury be accounted Barren. But I commend you that ye have not appointed me an Husband, for that were most unworthy the Majesty of an Absolute Princess, and unbeseeming your Wildom, which are Subjects born. Nevertheless, if it please God that I enter into another course of life, I promife you I will do nothing which may be prejudicial to the Commonwealth, but will take fuch an Husband as near as may be ŻS as will have as great a care of the Commonwealth as my felf. But if I continue in this kind of life I have begun, I doubt 10 a 31 not but God will fo direct mine, own and your Counfels, that ye shall not need to a bid doubt of a Succeffor which may be more beneficial to the Commonwealth than he which may be born of me, confidering that the lifue of the best Princes many times degenerateth. And to me it shall be a full farisfaction, both for the Memorial of my Name, and for my Glory alfo, if when I shall let my last Breath, it be engraven upon my Marble Tomb, Here lieth ELIZABETH, which Reigned a Virgin, and Died a Virgin.

APPENDIX

f

'260

.41 g

1 T. N.

NUMB.

APPENDIX.

NUMB. IV.

Memoirs, p 14.

Ibid p. 475. Queen Elizabeth's Letter to King Henry the Fourth of France, upon his changing his Religion.

A Las ! what deep Sorrow, what ve-hement Grief, what Sighs have I felt at my Heart, for the things which Morlante hath told me of ? Alas ! is the World come to this pass ? Was it possible that any Worldly matter should make you quit the fear of God ? Can we expect any happy Islue of fuch a Fact ? Or could you think that he who hath hitherto with his own Right Hand upholden and preferved you, would now forfake you? It is a very dangerous thing to do Evil that Good may come of ir. Yet I hope a fober Spirit will put you into a better Mind. In the mean time I will not omit to make it a principal part of my Prayers, the recommending you to Gode befeeching him that the Hands of Efau may not lofe you the Bleffing of Jacob. Whereas you do re-ligioufly and folemnly offer me your Friendship, I know to my great Cost I havç have well deferved it; neither fhould I repent that, had you not changed your Father. Verily, from henceforth I cannot be your Sifter by the Father; for the truth is, I fhall ever more dearly love and honour mine own Father, than a falfe and counterfeit one: which God knoweth very well, who (I befeech him) bring you back again to a better Mind.

Subscribed,

Tour Sifter, if it be after the old manner; as for the new I have nothing to do with it.

Elizabeth R.

NUMB.

Memoirs, p. 24. NUMB, V.

An Account of what was Remarkable upon opening the Body of Prince Henry.

Truth brought to Light, or the first 14 Years of K. James, P. 33.

F Inft, we found his Liver paler than ordinary, in certain places fomewhat wan, his Gall without any Choler in it, and diffended with Wind.

Secondly, his Spleen was in divers, places more than ordinarily black.

Thirdly, his Stomach was in no part offended.

Fourthly, his Midriff was in divers places black.

Fifthly, his Lungs were very black, and in divers places fpotted, and full of a thin watery Blood.

Lastly, the Veins in the hinder part of his Head were fuller than ordinary, but the Ventricles and hollowness of the Brain were full of clear Water.

In witness whereof, with our own Hands we have Subscribed this present Relation, the 7th day of November, 1612.

Mayerne, Palmer, Atkins, Gifford, Hammond, Butler.

NUMB.

APPENDIX.

273

NUMB. VI.

Memoirs, p. 58.

Digitized by Google

Mr. Secretary Vane's Notes about the Earl Wathak's of Strafford's Advice to King Charles Memoirs, to bring over an Army from Ircland; to fubdue England.

Note, This was the most dabient, and yes the most supterial Article against him, which contributed most to his Ruin.

The Title of them was,

No danger of a War with Scotland: . If Offensive, not Defensive.

K. Charles. HOW can we undertake Offentive War, if we have no more Money ?

Lord Strafford. Borrow of the City 100000 l. Go on vigoroully to levy Shipmoney: Your Majelty having tried the Affection of your People, you are abfolv'd and loole from all Rule of Government, and to do what Power will admit. Your Majelty having tried all ways, and being refus'd, shall be acquitted before God and Man. And you have an Army in Ireland that you may employ to reduce T this this Kingdom to Obedience; for I am confident the Scots cannot hold out Five Months.

APPENDIX.

ABp. Laud. You have tried all ways, and have always been denied; it is now lawful to take it by Force.

Lord Cortington. Levies abroad there may be made for Defence of the Kingdom. The Lower Houfe are weary of the King and Church. All ways shall be just to raise Money by, in this inevitable Necessity, and are to be us'd, being lawful.

ABp. Laud. For an Offensive, not a Defensive' War.

Lord Strafford. The Town is full of Lords; put the Commission of Array on foot; and if any of them ftir, we will make them smart.

VER CAN BE MONT C. Mo. A support to ÷. • •6357 · T. I. mars . Sig .ni r'. with Leint Constant View Lusper TEL SUPERSTRATES OF THE STATE O Linacyon, in round of a rounded 2. 5

APPENDIX

275

Memoirs,

NUMB. VII.

The Theatrical Manner of Archbishop Russieverthe Laud's Confectating Katherine Creed Part. 24 Church, in London. P.77.

S T. Katherine Creed-Church being lately repaired, was fufpended from all Divine Service, Sermons, and Sacraments, till it were Confecrated. Wherefore Dr. Laud, Lord Bishop of London, on the 16th of January, being the Lord's Day, came thither in the Morning to Confecrate the fame. Now because great Exceptions were taken at the Formality thereof, we will briefly relate the manner of the Confecration.

At the Bishop's approach to the Westdoor of the Church, some that were prepared for it, cried with a loud Voice, Open, open, ye everlasting Doors, that the King of Glory may enter in ! and presently the Doors were Opened: And the Bishop, with some Doctors, and many other principal Men, went in, and immediately falling down upon his Knees, with his Eyes lifted up, and his Arms T 2 some fpread abroad, uttered these Words, This Place is Holy, this Ground is Holy; In the Name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, I pronounce it Holy.

Then he took up fome of the Duft, and threw it up into the Air, feveral times in his going up towards the Charcel; when they approached near to the Rail and Communion-Table, the Bifhop bowed towards it feveral times, and returning, they went round the Church in Proceffion, faying the Hundredth Pfalm; after that, the 19th Pfalm, and then faid a Form of Prayer, Lord Jefus Chrift, &c. and concluding, We Confecrate this Church, and feparate it unto thee, as holy Ground, not to be prophaned any more to common ufe.

After this, the Bishop being near the Communion Table, and taking a written Book in his Hand, pronounced Curfes upon those that should afterwards prophane that Holy Place, by Musters of Soldiers, or keeping prophane Law-Courts, or carrying Burdens through it; and at the end of every Curse, he bowed towards the East, and said, Let all the People fay, Amen.

When the Curfes were ended, he pronounced a number of Bleffings upon all those

APPENDIX.

those that had any hand in Framing and Building of that Sacred and Beautiful Church, and those that had given; and should hereafter give any Chalices, Plate, Ornaments, or Utenfils: And at the end of every Blessing, he bowed towards the East, saying, Let all the People fay, Amen.

After this followed the Sermon; which being ended, the Bishop confectated and administred the Sacrament, in manner following:

As he approached the Communion-Table he made many feveral lowly Bowings; and coming up to the fide of the Table where the Bread and Wine were covered, he bowed feven times, and then after the reading of many Prayers, he came near the Bread, and gently lifted up the corner of the Napkin wherein the Bread, was laid; and when he beheld the Bread, he laid it down again, flew back a ftep or two, bowed three feveral times towards it, then he drew near again, and opened the Napkin, and bowed as before.

Then he laid his Hand on the Cup, which was full of Wine, with a Cover upon it, which he let go again, went back, and bowed thrice towards it, then he came near again; and lifting up the Cover of the Cup, looked into it, and feeing the Wine, he let fall the Cover again, retired back, and bowed as before; then he received the Sacrament, and gave it to fome principal Men; after which, many Prayers being faid, the Solemnity of the Confecration ended.

T 3

NUMB. VIII.

Memoirs,

p. 63.

The Order of Council against Archibald the King's Fool, for affronting Archbishop Laud.

Rufbwerth, Part 2. Vol. 1. P.471.

T is this Day ordered by his Majefty, with the advice of the Board, That Archibald Armstrong the King's Fool, for certain scandalous Words of a high nature, spoken by him against the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury his Grace, and proved to be uttered by him by two Witnesses, shall have his Coat pull'd over his Head, and be discharged of the King's Service, and banished the Court; for which the Lord Chamberlain of the King's Houshold is prayed and required to give Order to be executed. And immediately the same was put in Execution. N U M B

APPENDIX

NUMB. IX.

Memoirs, p. 67.

The Petition of the Houfe of Commons, Hubband's and their Remonstrance of the State of 4to, from the Nation, prefented to K. Charles I. p. 1. to p. at his Return from Scotland in 1641.²⁹ Together with the King's Answer, and the Declaration he afterwards publish'd to the same purpose.

Note, That the Matters contain'd in these Four Papers, were the Grounds of the Civil War, and afterwards came to be decided by the Sword.

The Petition of the House of Commons, which accompanied the Declaration of the State of the Kingdom, when it was prefented to his Majesty at Hampton Court.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

Y Our Majesty's most humble and faithful Subjects the Commoners in this present Parliament Allembled, do with much thankfulness and Joy, acknowledge the great mercy and favour of God, in giving your Majesty a fase and peaceable return out of Scotland into your Kingdom of England, where the pressing dan-T 4 gers gers and diftempers of the State have caufed us with much earnestness to defire the comfort of your gracious Prefence, and likewife the Unity and Justice of your Royal Authority to give more life and power to the dutiful and loyal Counfels and Endeavours of your Parliament, for the prevention of that eminent ruin and destruction wherein your Kingdoms of England and Scotland are threatned. The duty which we owe to your Majesty and our Countrey, cannot but make us very fenfible and apprehenfive, that the mul-tiplicity, sharpness and malignity of those Evils under which we have now many Years suffered, are fomented and cherished by a corrupt and ill-affected Party, who amongst other their mischievous devices for the alteration of Religion and Government, have thought by many false scandals and imputations cunningly infinuated, and difperfed amongst the People, to blemifh and difgrace our pro-ceedings in this Parliament, and to get themselves a party and faction amongst your Subjects; for the better ftrengthning of themfelves in their wicked courses, and hindring those Provisions and Re-medies which might by the wildom of your Majesty, and Counfel of your your Parliament be opposed against them.

For preventing whereof, and the better information of your Majefty, your Peers, and 'all other your loyal Subjects, we have been neceflitated to make a Declaration of the flate of the Kingdom, both before and fince the Affembly of this Parliament unto this time, which we do humbly prefent to your Majefty without the leaft intention to lay any blemifh upon your Royal Perfon, but only to reprefent how your Royal Authority and Truft have been abufed, to the great prejudice and danger of your Majefty, and of all your good Subjects.

And becaufe we have reafon to believe that those malignant parties whose proceedings evidently appear to be mainly for the advantage and encrease of Popery, is composed, set up, and acted by the subtil practice of the Jesuits, and other Engineers and Factors for Rome, and to the great danger of this Kingdom, and most grievous affliction of your loyal Subjects, have so far prevailed, as to corrupt divers of your Bishops, and others in prime places of the Church, and alto to bring divers of these Instruments to be of your Privy Council, and other employments of trust and nearness abour Your Majesty, the Prince, and the rest Your Royal Children.

And by this means hath had fuch an operation in Your Council, and the moft important, affairs and proceedings of Your Government, that a moft dangerous divifion and chargeable preparation for War betwixt Your Kingdom of England and Scotland, the increase of Jealoufies betwixt Your Majefty and Your moft obedient Subjects, the violent diffraction and interruption of this Parliament, the infurrection of the Papifts in Your Kingdom of Ireland, and bloody Massace of Your people, have been not only endeayoured and attempted, but in a great measure compassed and effected.

For preventing the final accomplifhment whereof, Your poor Subjects are enforced to engage their perfons and effates to the maintaining of a very expenceful and dangerous War, notwithftanding they have already fince the beginning of this Parliament undergone the charge of 150000 pounds sterling, or thereabouts, for the necessary support and supply of Your Majesty in these present and perillous Designs. And because all our most faithful endeavours and engagements will will be ineffectual for the peace, fafery, and prefervation of Your Majefty, and Your people, if fome prefent, real and effectual course be not taken for supprefsing this wicked and malignant Party,

We Your most humble and obedient Subjects do with all faithfulness and humility beseech Your Majesty,

1. That You will be gracioufly pleafed to concur with the humble defires of Your People in a Parliamentary way, for the preferving the peace and fafety of the Kingdom from the malicious Defigns of the Popifh Party.

For depriving the Bishops of their Votes in Parliament, and abridging rheir immoderate power usurped over the Clergy, and other Your good Subjects, which they have most perniciously abufed, to the hazard of Religion, and great prejudice and oppression of the Laws of the Kingdom, and just liberty of Your People.

For the taking away fuch oppressions in Religion, Church-Government, and Discipline, as have been brought in and fomented by them.

For uniting all fuch Your loyal Subjects together, as join in the fame fundamental mental truths against the Papist, by removing some oppressions and unnecessary Ceremonies, by which divers weak Consciences have been scrupled, and seem to be divided from the rest: For the due execution of those good Laws which have been made for securing the liberty of your Subjects.

2. That Your Majesty will likewise be pleased to remove from Your Council all such as persist to favour, and promote any of those pressures and corruptions wherewith Your people have been grieved; and that for the sure Your Majesty will vouchast to employ such persons in Your great and publick Affairs, and to take such to be near You in places of trust, as Your Parliament may have cause to confide in; that in Your Princely goodness to Your People, You will reject and refuse all mediation and folicitation to the contrary, how powerful and near soever.

3. That You would be pleafed to forbear to alienate any of the forfeited and efcheated Lands in Ireland, which fhall accrue to Your Grown by reafon of this Rebellion, that out of them the Crown may be the better fupported, and fome fatisfaction made to Your Subjects of this Kingdom, for the great expences they aro like to undergo this War. Which

ΑΡΡΕΝDΙΧ.

Which humble defires of ours being gracioufly fulfilled by Your Majefty, we will by the bleffing and favour of God most chearfully undergo the hazard and expences of this War, and apply our felves to such other courses and counfels as may fupport Your Royal Estate with honour and plenty at home, with power and reputation abroad; and by our loyal affections, obedience, and service, lay a fure and lasting foundation of the greatness and prosperity of Your Majesty, and Your Royal Posterity in future times.

A Remonstrance of the State of the Kingdom.

Die Mercurii, 15 Decemb. 1642.

T HE Commons in this prefent Parliament affembled, having with much earnestness, and faithfulness of affection, and zeal to the publick good of this Kingdom, and his Majesty's honour and fervice, for the space of twelve Months, wrestled with the great dangers and fears, the pressing Miseries and Calamities, the various distempers and diforders, which had not only assured, but even even overwhelmed and extinguisht the liberty, peace, and prosperity of this Kingdom, the comfort and hopes of all his Majesty's good Subjects, and exceedingly weakned and undermined the foundation and strength of his own Royal Throne; Do yet find an abounding Malignity and Opposition in those parties and factions, who have been the caufe of those evils, and do still labour to cast af. perfions upon that which hath been done, and to raife many difficulties for the hindrance of that which remains yet undone, and to foment Jealousies betwixt the King and the Parliament; that fo they may deprive him and his people of the fruit of his own gracious intentions, and their humble defires of procuring the publick peace, fafety, and happiness of this For the preventing of those mi-Realm. ferable effects, which fuch malicious endeavours may produce, We have thought good to declare,

I. The Root and the Growth of thefe mif-

2. The Maturity and Ripenels, to which they have attained before the beginning of the Parliament.

3. The effectual means which hath been used used for the extirpation of those dangerous evils, and the Progress which bath therein been made by his Majesty's goodness, and the Wisdom of the Parliament.

ΑΡΡΕΝDΙΧ

4. The ways of obstruction and opposition by which that Progress hath been interrupted.

5. The courses to be taken for the removing those Obstacles, and for the accomplishing of our most dutiful and faithful intentions and endeavours of restoring and establishing the Antient Honour, Greatness, and Security of this Crown and Nation. The Root of all this mischief, We find to be a malignant, and pernicious design, of subverting the Fundamental Laws and Principles of Government; upon which the Religion and Justice of this Kingdom are firmly establisht. The Actors and Promoters hereof have been,

1. The Jesuited Papists who hate the Laws, as the Obstacles of that Ghange and Subversion of Religion which they so much long for.

2. The Bishops, and the corrupt part of the Clergy, who cherish formality and superstition, as the natural effects, and more probable supports of their own Ecclesiastical Tyranny and Usurpation.

3. Such Counfellors and Courtiers às for private APPENDİX private ends have engaged themselves to further the interests of some foreign Princes or States, to the prejudice of his Majesty, and the State at home.

The common Principles, by which they moulded and governed all their particular Counfels and Actions were these:

First, to maintain continual differences and discontents betwixt the King and the People, upon Questions of Prerogative and Liberty, that so they might have the advantage of fiding with him, and under the notions of Men addicted to his service, gain to themselves and their parties the places of greatest trust and power in the Kingdom.

A fecond, to fuppress the purity and power of Religion, and such as were best affected to it; as being contrary to their own ends, and the greatest impediment to that Change which they thought to introduce.

A third, To conjoin those parties of the Kingdom, which were most propitious to their own ends, and to divide those who were most opposite, which consisted in many particular Observations; to cherist the Arminian part in those points, wherein they agree with the Papists; to multiply and enlarge the difference between the common Protestants and APPENDIX.

and those whom they call Puritans, to introduce and countenance such Opinions and Ceremonies, as are fittest for accommodation with Popery, to increase and maintain ignorance, looseness and prophaneness in the people: That of those three Parties, Papists, Arminians, and Libertities, they might compose a body fit to act such counsels and resolutions, as were most conducible to their own ends.

A fourth, To difaffect the King to Parliaments, by flanders and false imputations, and by putting him upon other ways of supply, which in shew and appearance were fuller of advantage than the ordinary course of Subsidies, though in truth they brought more loss than gain both to the King and People, and have caused the distractions under which we both suffer.

As in all compounded Bodies, the Operations are qualified according to the predominant Element; fo in this mixt party, the Jefuited Counfels being most active and prevailing, may easily be difcovered to have had the greatest fiway in all their determinations; and if they be not prevented, are like to devour the rest, or to turn them into their own nature.

In the beginning of his Majesty's Reign, the party begun to revive and flourish again, having been somewhat dampt U by 289

by the breach with Spain in the last Year of King James, and by his Majesty's Marriage with France; the Interests and Councils of that State, being not so contrary to the good of Religion, and the prosperity of this Kingdom, as those of Spain; and the Papists of England having been ever more addicted to Spain than France; yet they still retained a purpose' and resolution to weaken the Protestant Parties in all parts, and even in France, whereby to make way for the change of Religion, which they intended at home.

The first effect and evidence of their recovery and strength was the disfolution of the Parliament at Oxford, after there had been given two Subsidies to his Majesty; and before they received relief in any one Grievance, many other more miserable effects followed.

The loss of the Rochel Fleet, by the help of our Shipping fet forth and delivered over to the French, in opposition to the advice of Parliament, which left that Town without defence by Sea, and made way not only to the loss of that important place, but likewife to the loss of all the strength and security of the Protestant Religion in France.

The diverting of his Majesty's course of Wars

Wars from the West-Indies, which was the most facile and hopeful way for this Kingdom to prevail against the Spaniard; to an expenceful and successless attempt upon Cales, which was so ordered, as if it had rather been intended to make us weary of War than to prosper in it.

The precipitate breach with France, by taking their Ships to a great value; without making recompence to the English, whose Goods were thereupon imbarr'd and confiscate in that Kingdom.

The Peace with Spain without confent of Parliament, contrary to the promife of K. James to both Houfes; whereby the Palatine Caufe was deferted, and left to chargeable and hopelefs Treaties, which for the most part, were managed by those who might justly be suspected to be no Friends to that Caufe.

The charging of the Kingdom with Billetted Soldiers in all parts of it, and that concomitant defign of German Horfe; that the Land might either fubmit with fear, or be enforced with rigor to fuch Arbitrary Contributions as should be required of them.

The diffolving of the Parliament in the fecond Year of his Majesty's Reign, after a Declaration of their intent to g ant five Subsidies. U 2 The

The exacting of the like proportion of five Subfidies after the Parliament diffolved, by Commission of Loan; and divers Gentlemen and others imprifoned for not yielding to pay that Loan, whereby many of them contracted fuch ficknefles as cost them their Lives. Great fums of Money required and raifed by Privy Seals. An unjust and pernicious attempt to extort great payments from the Subject, by way of Excile; and a Commission issued under Seal to that purpole. The Petition of Right, which was granted in full Parliament, blafted with an illegal Declaration, to make it deftructive to it felf, to the Power of Parliament, to the Liberty of the Subject, and to that purpose printed with it; and the Petition made of no use, but to shew the bold and prefumptuous injustice of fuch Ministers as durit break the Laws, and suppress the Liberties of the Kingdom, after they had been to folemnly and evidently declared.

Another Parliament disfolved, 4 Car. The privilege of Parliament broken by imprisoning divers Members of the House, detaining them close Prisoners for many Months together, without the Liberty of using Books, Pen, Ink, or Paper, denying ing them all the comforts of life, all means of prefervation of health, not permitting their Wives to come unto them, even in time of their fickness. And for the compleating of that cruelty, after Years spent in fuch miserable durance, depriving them of the necessary means of Spiritual confolation, not fuffering them to go abroad to enjoy God's Ordinances in God's Houfe, or God's Ministers to come to them, to administer comfort unto them in their private Chambers; and to keep them still in this oppressed condition, not admitting them to be bailed according to Law, yet vexing them with Informations in inferior Courts, fentencing and fining fome of them for matters done in Parliament, and extorting the payments of those Fines from them, enforcing others to put in fecurity of good behaviour before they could be released.

The Impriforment of the reft which. refused to be bound, still continued; which might have been perpetual, if neceffity had not the last Year brought another Parliament to relieve them; of whom one died, by the cruelty and harshnefs of his Imprifonment, which would admit of no relaxation, notwithstanding the imminent danger of his life did fuffi-U 2 ciently ciently appear by the Declaration of his Phyfician : And his Releafe, or at leaft, his Refreshment, was fought by many humble Petitions, and his Blood still cries either for Vengeance, or Repentance of those Ministers of State, who have at once obstructed the course both of his Majesty's Justice and Mercy.

Upon the Diflolution of both these Parliaments, untrue and fcandalous Declarations published, to asperse their Proceedings and some of their Members, unjustly to make them odious, and colour the Violence which was used against them. Proclamations set out to the same purpose; and to the great dejecting of the hearts of the People, forbidding them even to speak of Parliaments.

After the Breach of Parliament, in the Fourth Year of his Majefty, Injuftice, Oppression, and Violence broke in upon us, without any Restraint or Moderation; and yet the first Project was the great Sums exacted through the whole Kingdom, for default of Knighthood, which seemed to have some colour and shadow of a Law; yet if it be rightly examined by that obsolete Law which was pretended for it, it would be found to be against all the Rules of Justice, both both in respect of the Persons charged the Proportion of the Fines demanded, and the abiurd and unreasonable Manner of their Proceedings. Tunnage and Poundage hath been received without colour or pretence of Law; many other heavy Impositions continued against Law; and fome fo unreasonable, that the Sum of the charge exceeds the Value of the Goods. The Book of Rates lately inhaunced to a high proportion; and fuch Merchants as would not fubmit to their illegal and unreasonable Payments, were vexed and oppreffed above measure ; and the ordinary course of Juflice, the common Birth-right of the Subject of England, wholly obstructed unto them. And although all this was taken upon pretence of guarding the Sea; yet a new and unheard-of Tax of Ship-money was devifed, upon the fame pretence. By both which there was charged upon the Subject near 700000 Pounds fome Years; and yet the Merchants have been left fo naked to the violence of the Turkish • Pyrates, that many great Ships of Value, and thousands of his Majesty's Subjects have been taken by them, and do still remain in miserable Slavery.

U 4

Digitized by Google .

The

The enlargement of Forests, contrary to Charta de Foresta, and the Composition thereupon. The exactions of Coat and Conduct-money, and divers other Mili-tary Charges. The taking away the Arms of the Trained-Bands of divers Counties. The defperate defign of engroffing all the Gunpowder into one hand, keeping it in the Tower of London, and fetting fo high a Rate upon it, that the poorer fort were not able to buy it, nor could any have it without Licenfe ; thereby to leave the feveral parts of the Kingdom destitute of their necessary defence; and by felling fo dear that which was fold, to make an unlawful advantage of it, to the great charge and detri-ment of the Subject. The general de-ftruction of the King's Timber, especially that in the Forest of Dean, fold to Papifts, which was the best Store-house of this Kingdom, for the maintenance of our Shipping. The taking away of Men's Right, under colour of the King's Title to Land between high and low Water Marks. The Monopolies of Soap, Salt, Wine, Leather, Sea-Coal, and in a manner, of all things of most common and necessary use. The restraint of the Liberties of the Subjects in their Habitation, on, Trades, and other Interest. Their vexation and oppression by Purveyors, Clerks of the Market, and Salt-Petremen. The fale of pretended Nufances, as Buildings in and about London, Conversion of Arable into Pasture, continuance of Pasture, under the Name of Depopulation, have drawn many Millions out of the Subjects Purfes, without any confiderable Profit to his Majesty. Large quantities of Common, and feveral Grounds, have been taken from the Subject, by colour of the Statute of Improvement, and by abuse of the Commission of Sewers, without their confent, and against it. And not only pri-vate Interest, but also publick Faith have been broken, in seizing of the Money and Bullion in the Mint; and the whole Kingdom like to be robb'd at once, in that abominable Project of Brass Money. Great numbers of his Majefty's Subjects, for refusing those unlawful Charges, have been vex'd with long and expensive Suits; fome fined and cenfured, others committed to long and hard Imprifonments and Confinements, to the loss of Health of many, of life in some ; and others have had their Houses broken up, their Goods feized ; fome have been re-Arained strained from their lawful Callings : Ships have been interrupted in their Voyages, furprized at Sea in an Hoftile manner by Projectors, as by a common Enemy : Merchants prohibited to unlade their Goods in fuch Ports as were for their own advantage, and forced to bring them to those places which were most for the advantages of the Monopolizers and Projectors. The Court of Star-Chamber hath abounded in extravagant Cenfures, not only for the maintenance and improvement of Monopolies, and other unlawful Taxes, but for divers other Caufes, where there had been no offence, or very fmall; whereby his Majefty's Subjects have been oppressed by grievous Fines, Imprisonments, Stigmatizings, Mutilations, Whippings, Pillories, Gags, Confinements, Banishments; after fo rigid a manner, as hath not only deprived Men of the fociety of their Friends, exercise of their Professions, comfort of Books, use of Paper or Ink, but even violated that near Union which God hath establish'd betwixt Men and their Wives, by forced and constrained Separation; whereby they have been bereaved of the comfort and conversation one of another for many Years together, without hope of relief :

Λ Ψ ℙ Ε N D I X.

relief; if God had not by his over-ruling Providence, given fome interruption to the prevailing Power and Counfel of those who were the Authors and Promoters of fuch peremptory and heady Courses.

Judges have been put out of their Pla-ces, for refuling to do against their Oaths and Confciences : Others have been fo awed, that they durft not do their duries; and the better to hold a Rod over them. the Clause quam din se bene gesserint was left out of their Patents, and a new Clause, durante bene placito, inserted. Lawyers have been check'd for being faithful to their Clients; Søllicitors and Attornies have been threatened, and fome punished for following lawful Suirs. And by this means all the approaches to Justice were interrupted and forecluded. New Oaths have been forced upon the Subject against Law; new Judicatories erected without Law : The Council-Table have, by their Orders, offered to bind the Subjects in their Freeholds, Eftates, Suits, and Actions. The pretended Court of the Earl Marshal was Arbitrary and Illegal in its Being and Proceedings. The Chancery, Exchequer-Chamber, Court of Wards, and other English

English Courts have been grievous in exceeding their Jurisdiction. The Estate of many Families weaken'd, and fome ruin'd by excellive Fines, exacted from them for Composition of Wardships. All Leases of above a hundred Years, made to draw on Wardship contrary to Law. Undue proceedings used in the finding of Offices, to make the Jury find for the King. The Common-Law Courts feeing all Men more inclin'd to feek Juflice there, where it may be fitted to their own defire, are known frequently to forfake the Rules of the Common-Law, and straining beyond their bounds, under pretence of Equity to do Injustice. Titles of Honour, Judicial Places, Serjeantships at Law, and other Offices, have been fold for great Sums of Money; whereby the common Justice of the Kingdom hath been much endanger'd, pot only by opening a way of Employ-ment in places of great Truft and Ad-vantage to Men of weak Parts, but also by giving occasion to Bribery, Extortion, Partiality : It feldom happening that Places ill-gotten are well used. Commiffions have been granted for examining the excess of Fees; and when great Exactions have been discovered, Compositions tions have been made with Delinquents, not only for the time paft, but likewife for Immunity and Security in offending for the time to come; which under colour of remedy, hath but confirmed and increafed the Grievance to the Subject. The ufual courfe of pricking Sheriffs, not obferved, but many times Sheriffs made in an extraordinary way; fometimes as a Punifhment and Charge unro them; fometimes fuch were prick'd out, as would be Inftruments to execute whatfoever they would have to be done.

The Bishops, and the reft of the Clergy did triumph in the Suspensions, Excommunications, Depravations, and Degradations of divers painful, learned and pious Ministers, in the vexation and grievous oppression of great numbers of his Majesty's good Subjects. The High Commission grew to such excess of sharpness and feverity, as was not much less than the Romiss Inquisition; and yet in many cases by the Archbission's Power was made much more heavy, being affissed and strengthen'd by Authority of the Council-Table.

The Bishops and their Courts were as eager in the Countrey; and although their Jurisdiction could not reach so high in in rigor and extremity of Punishment, yet were they no less grievous in respect of the generality and multiplicity of Vexations; which lighting upon the meaner fort of Tradesimen and Artificers, did impoverish many Thousands, and so afflict and trouble others, that great numbers, to avoid their miseries, departed out of the Kingdom, some into New-England, and other parts of America, others into Holland, where they have transported their Manufactures of Cloath, which is not only a lofs by diminishing the prefent Stock of the Kingdom, but a great Mischief, by impairing and endangering the loss of that peculiar Trade of Cloathing, which hath been a plentiful Fountain of Wealth and Honour to this Nation. Those were fittest for Ecclefiastical Preferment, and soonest obtained it, who were most officious in promoting Superstition, most virulent in railing against Godliness and Honesty.

The most publick and solemn Sermons before his Majesty, were either to advance Prerogative above Law, and decry the Property of the Subject; or full of such kind of Invectives, whereby they might make those odious who sought to maintain the Religion, Laws, and Liberties of

302

of the Kingdom; and fuch Men were fure to be weeded out of the Commission of the Peace, and out of all other Employments of Power in the Government of the Countrey. Many Noble Perfonages were Counfellors in Name, but the Power and Authority remained in a few of fuch as were most addicted to this Party; whofe Refolutions and Determinations were brought to the Table for countenance and execution, and 'not for debate and deliberation; and no Man could offer to oppose them, without difgrace and hazard to himfelf: Nay, all those that did not wholly concur, and actively contribute to the furtherance of their Defigns, though otherwife Perfons of never fo great Honour and Abilities, were fo far from being employed in any place of Trust and Power, that they were neglected, difcountenanced, and upon all occasions injured and oppressed. This Faction was grown to that height and entireness of Power, that now they began to think of finishing their Work, which confifted of these Three parts.

1. The Government must be set free from all Restraint of Laws concerning our Persons and States.

2. There

2. There must be a Conjunction betwixt Papists and Protestants in Doctrine; Discipline, and Ceremonies; only it must not yet be called Popery.

3. The Puritans, under which Name they include all those that defire to preferve the Laws, and Liberties of the Kingdom, and to maintain Religion in the Power of it, must be either rooted out of the Kingdom with force, or driven out with fear. For the effecting of this; it was thought necessary to reduce Scotland to such Popish Superstitions and Innovations as might make them apt to join with England in the great Change which was intended. Whereupon new Canons, and a new Liturgy were prest upon them; and when they refused to admit of them, an Army was raifed to force them to it; towards which the Clergy and the Papifts were very forward in their. Contribution. The Scots likewife raifed an Army for their defence : And when both Armies were come together, and ready for a bloody Encounter, his Majesty's own gracious Disposition, and the Counsel of the English Nobility, and dutiful Submission of the Scots, did fo far prevail against the evil Counsel of others, that a Pacification was made, and his Ma-jesty returned with Peace, and much Honour to London.

The

The unexpected Reconciliation was most acceptable to all the Kingdom, except to the Malignant Party, whereof the Archbishop and the Earl of Strafford being Heads, they and their Faction begun to inveigh against the Peace, and to aggravate the Proceedings of the States; which fo incenfed his Majefty, that he forthwith prepared again for War. And fuch was their Confidence, that having corrupted and diftempered the whole Frame and Government of the Kingdom, they did now hope to corrupt that which was the only means to reftore all to a right frame and temper again; to which end they perfuaded his Majefty to call a Parliament; not to feek Counfel and Advice of them; but to draw Countenance and Supply from them, and engage the whole Kingdom in their Quarrel; and in the mean time continued all their unjust Levies of Money; refolving either to make the Parliament pliant to their Will, and to establish mischief by a Law, or elfe to break it. And with more colour to go on by violence to take what they could not obtain by Confent, the Ground alledged for the Justification of this War, was this;

X

Digitized by Google

That

That the undutiful Demands of the Parliament of Scotland, was a sufficient Reason for his Majesty to take Arms against them, without hearing the Reason of those Demands: And thereupon a new Army was prepared against them; their Ships were feized in all Ports both of England and Ireland, and at Sea ; their Petitioners rejected, their Commissioners refused Audience; This whole Kingdom most miserably distemper'd with Levies of Men and Money, and Imprifonments of those who denied to submit to those Levies. The Earl of Strafford pass'd · into Ireland, caufed the Parliament there to declare against the Scots, to give four Subfidies towards that War; and to engage themfelves, their Lives and Fortunes, for the profecution of it; and gave directions for an Army of Eight thoufand Foot, and One thousand Horse, ro be levied there, which were for the most part Papifts. The Parliament met upon the 13th of April, 1640. The Earl of Strafford, and Archbishop of Canterbury, with their Party, fo prevailed with his Majesty, that the House of Commons was preft to yield to a Supply for maintenance of the War with Sootland, before they had provided any Relief for the

the great and prefling Grievances of the People; which being against the Fundamental Privilege and proceeding of Par-liament, was yet in humble Respect to his Majesty for far admitted, as that they agreed to take the matter of Supply into Confideration; and two feveral days it was debated. Twelve Sublidies were demanded for the Release of Ship-money alone; a third day was appointed for conclusion; when the Heads of that Party begun to fear the People might close with the King in fatisfying his defire of Money; but that withal they were like to blaft their malicious defigns against Scotland, finding them very much indifposed to give any countenance to that War:

Thereupon they wickedly advised the King to break off the Parliament, and to return to the ways of Confusion, in which their own evil Intentions were most like to prosper and fucceed.

After the Parliament ended the fifth of May, 1640. this Party grew to bold; as to counfel the King to fupply himfelf out of his Subjects Eftates by his own Power, at his own Will, without their Confent. The very next day fome Members of both How (es had their Studies and Cabinets, X 2 Vez yea their Pockets searched : Another of them, not long after, was committed close Prisoner, for not delivering some Petitions which he received by Authority of that House: And if harther courfes were intended (as was reported) it is very probable that the fickness of the Earl of Strafford, and the Tumultuous Rifing in Southwark, and about Lambeth, were the Caufes that fuch violent Intentions were not brought to execution. A false and scandalous Declaration against the House of Commons, was published in his Majesty's Name, which yet wrought little effect with the People, but only to manifest the Impudence of those who were Authors of it.

A forced Loan of Money was attempted in the City of London.

The Lord Mayor and Aldermen in their feveral Wards enjoined to bring in a Lift of the Names of fuch Perfons as they judged fit to lend, and of the Sum they fhould lend. And fuch Aldermen as refused fo to do, were committed to Prifon.

The Archbifbop and the other Bifbops and Clergy continued the Convocation, and by a new Commission turned it to a Provincial Synod; in which, by an unheard.

heard-of prefumption, they made Canons that contain in them many matters contrary to the King's Prerogative, to the Fundamental Laws and Statutes of the Realm, to the Right of Parliaments, to the Property and Liberty of the Subject, and matters tending to Sedition, and of dangerous confequence, thereby eftablishing their own Usurpations, juftifying their Altar Worship, and those other Superstitious Innovations, which they formerly introduced without warrant of Law.

They imposed a new Oath upon divers of his Majesty's Subjects, both Ecclesiafical and Lay, for maintenance of their own Tyranny; and laid a great Tax upon the Clergy for Supply of his Majefty; and generally they shewed themfelves very affectionate to the War with Scotland which was by fome of them ftiled Bellum Episcopale; and a Prayer composed, and enjoined to be read in all Churches, calling the Scots Rebels, to put the two Nations into Blood, and make them irreconcilable. All those pretended Canons and Constitutions were armed with the feveral Cenfures of Suspension, Excommunication, Deprivation, by which they would have thrust out all the good Mi-X 2

309

Ministers and most of the well-affected People of the Kingdom, and left an easy Passage to their own Design of Reconciliation with Rome. The Popifb Party enjoy'd fuch exemptions from the Penal Laws, as amounted to a Toleration, befides many other Encouragements and Court Favours: They had a Secretary of State, Sir Francis Windebank, a powerful Agent for the speeding of all their defires; a Pope's Nuncio reliding here to act and govern them according to fuch influences as he received from Rome, and to intercede for them with the most powerful concurrence of the Foreign Princes of that Religion : By his Authority the Papists of all forts, Nobility, Gentry, and Clergy, were convocated after the manner of a Parliament; new Jurifdictions were crected of Romifb Arch-Taxes levied, another State bilbops. moulded within this State, independent in Government, contrary in Interest and Affection, fecretly corrupting the Igno-rant or negligent Professions of our Religion, and clofely uniting and combining themfelves against fuch as were found, in this posture waiting for an opportunity by force to destroy those whom they could not hope to feduce. For the effecting whereof, $A \mathbf{P} \mathbf{P} E N \mathcal{D} I X.$

whereof, they were ftrengthen'd with Arms and Munition, encouraged by fuperstitious Prayers, enjoined by the Nuncio to be Weekly made, for the prosperity of fome great delign. And fuch power had they at Court, that fecretly a Commission was issued out, intended to be isfued to fome Great Men of that Profesfion, for the levying of Soldiers, and to command and employ them according to private Instructions, which we doubt were framed for the Advantage of those who were the Contrivers of them : His Majefty's Treafure was confumed. his Revenue anticipated; his Servants and Officers compelled to lend great Sums of Money: Multitudes were called to the Council-Table, who were tired with long attendances there, for refusing illegal Payments. The Prifons were filled with their Commitments; many of the Sheriffs fummoned into the Star Chamber, and fome imprisoned, for not being quick enough in levying the Ship money; the People languished under grief and fear, no visible hope being left, but in desperation. The Nobility began to be weary of their filence, and patience, and fensible of the Duty and Trust which belongs to them; and thereupon fome of X 4 the

1

APPENDIX.

the most eminent of them did petition his Majesty at such a time when Evil Counfels were fo ftrong, that they had reason to expect more hazard to themfelves, than redrefs of those publick Evils for which they interceded. Whilft the Kingdom was in this agitation and diftemper, the Scots, restrained in their Trades, impoverish d by the loss of many of their Ships, bereaved of all poffibility of fatisfying his Majefty by any naked Supplication, entred with a powerful Army into the Kingdom ; and without any hoftile A& or Spoil in the Countrey as they passed, more than forcing a Pasfage over the Tyne at Newborne, near Newcastle, possessed themselves of Newcastle; and had a fair opportunity to press on further upon the King's Army, but Duty and Reverence to his Majefty, and Brotherly Love to the English Nation, made them flay there; whereby the King had leifure to entertain better Counfels; wherein God fo bleffed and directed him, that he fummoned the Great Council of Peers to meet at York upon the 24th of September, and there declared a Parliament to begin the Third of November then following. The Scots the first day of the great Council, prelented finted an humble Petition to his Majesty, whereupon the Treaty was appointed at . Rippon; a present Ceffation of Arms agreed upon; and the full Conclusion of all Differences referred to the Wildom and Care of the Parliament. At our first meeting all Oppositions feemed to vanifh; the mischiefs were fo evident which those Evil Counsellors produced, that no man durst stand up to defend them Yet the Work it felf afforded Difficulty enough. The multiplied Evils and Corruption of Sixteen Years, strengthen'd by Cuftom and Authority, and the concurrent Interests of 'many powerful Delinquents, were now to be brought to Judgment and Reformation. The King's Houshold, was to be provided for ; they had brought him to that Want, that he could not fupply his ordinary and neceffary Expences, without the affiftance of his People. Two Armies were to be paid, which amounted very near to Eighty thousand Pounds a Month; the People were to be tenderly charged, having been formerly exhausted with many burthenfome Projects.

The difficulties feemed to be infuperable, which by the Divine Providence we have overcome. The Contrarieties incompatible, compatible, which yet in a great meafure we have reconciled. Six Sublidies have been granted, and a Bill of Pollmoney; which if it be duly levied, may equal Six Sublidies more, in all Six hundred thousand Pounds. Besides, we have contracted a Debt to the Scots, of Two hundred and twenty thouland Pounds: and yet God hath to bleffed the Endeavours of this Parliament, that the Kingdom is a great Gainer by all thefe Charges. The Ship money is abolifhed, which coft the Kingdom above T wo hundred thousand Pounds a Year. The Coat and Conduct money, and other Military Charges, are taken away, which in many Counties amounted to little lefs than the Ship money. The Monopolies are all fuppreft, whereof fome few did prejudice the Subject above a Million Yearly. The Soap an Hundred thousand Pounds; the Wine Three hundred thousand Pounds ; the Leather must needs exceed both ; and Salt could be no lefs than that; befides the inferior Monopolies, which if they could be exactly computed, would make up a great Sum. That which is more beneficial than all this, That the Root of these Evils is taken away, which was, The

313

The Arbitrary Power pretended to be in his Majefty, of taxing the Subject, or charging their Estates without Confent in Parliament, which is now declared to be against Law, by the Judgment of both Houles, and likewife by an Act of Parliament. Another Step of great advantage is this; The living Grievances, the Evil Counfellors and Actors of thefe Mischiefs have been to quell'd by the Juffice done upon the Earl of Strafford, the Flight of the Lord Finch and Secre. tary Windebank; the Accufation and Imprisonment of the Archbishop of Canterbury, of Judge Bartlet, and the Impeachment of divers other Bifhops and Judges, that it is like not only to be an ease to the present Times, but a preservation to the future. The difcontinuance of Parliaments is prevented by the Bill for a Triennial Parliament, and the abrupt Diffolution of this Parliament by another Bill, by which it is provided it shall not be diffolved or adjourned, withour the Confent of both Houfes.

Which two Laws well confidered, may be thought moreadvantageous than all the former, becaufe they fecure a full operation of the prefent Remedy, and afford a perpetual Spring of Remedies for the future.

future. The Star-chamber, the High-Commission, the Courts of the President, and Council in the North, were fo many forges of mifery, oppression, and violence and are all taken away, whereby men are more ficured in their perfons, liberties and estates, than they could be by any Law or Example for the Regulation of those Courts, or terror of the Judges; The immoderate power of the Council-Table, and the excellive abuse of that power, is fo ordered and restrained, that we may well hope that no fuch things as were frequently done by them, to the prejudice of the publick liberty, will appear in future times but only in stories, to give us and our posterity more occasion to praise God for his Majesty's goodness, and the faithful endeavours of the Parlisment. The Canons and the power of Canon making, are blafted by the Vote of both Houses. The exorbitant power of Bi-(bops and their Courts are much abated, by fome provisions in the Bill against the High Commillion Court. The Authors of the many Innovations in Doctrine and Ceremonies: The Ministers that have been scandalous in their lives, have been fo terrified in just complaints and accusations, that we may well hope they will be

be more modest for the time to come; either inwardly convicted by the fight of their own folly, or outwardly restrained by the fear of punishment. The Forefts are by a good Law reduced to their right bounds; the encroachments and oppreffions of the Stannery-Courts; The Extortions of the Clerk of the Market, and the compulsion of the Subject to receive the Order of Knighthood against his will, paying of Fines for not receiving it, and the vexatious proceedings thereupon for levying of those Fines, are by other beneficial Laws reformed and prevented. Many excellent Laws and provisions are in preparation for removing the inordinate power, vexation, and ulurpation of . Bishops, for reforming the pride and idlenels of many of the Clergy, for ealing the people of unnecessary Ceremonies in Religion, for cenfuring and removing unworthy and unprofitable Minifters; and for maintaining godly and diligent Preachers through the Kingdom ; Other things of main importance for the good of this Kingdom are in propolition, though little could hitherto be done, in regard of the many other more preffing bufinesies, which yet before the end of this Seffion, we hope may receive fome progrefs gress and perfection. The establishing and ordering the King's Revenue, that fo the abuse of Officers, and Superfluity of expences may be cut off, and the ne ceffary disbursements for his Majefty's Honour, the defence and government of the Kingdom, may be more certainly provided for. The regulating of Courts of Justice, and abridging both the delays and charges of Law-Suits; The fetling of fome good courses for preventing the exportation of Gold and Silver, and theinequality of exchanges betwixt Us and other Nations, for the advancing of native Commodities, increase of our Manufactures, and well ballancing of Trade, whereby the Stock of the Kingdom may be increased or at least kept from impairing; as through neglect hereof it hath done for many years last past; For improving the Herring-Fishing upon our own Coafts, which will be of mighty use in the Employment of the Poor, and a plentiful Nurfery of Mariners for enabling the Kingdom in any great Action. The oppolitions, obstructions, and other Difficulties where with we have been encountred and which still lye in our way with some ftrength and much obflinacy are thefe: The malignant Party whom we have formerly merly defcribed to be the Actors and Promoters of all our Milery, they have taken heart again; They have been able to prefer some of their own Factors and Agents to degrees of Honour, to Places of Trust and Employment, even during the Parliament. They have endeavoured to work in his Majesty ill inprefions and opinions of our Proceedings, as if we had altogether done our own work, and not his; and had obtained from him many things very prejudicial to the Crown, both in respect of Prerogative and Profit. To wipe out this Slander, we think good only to fay thus much; That all that we have done, is for his Majefty, his Greatness, Honour, and Support. When we yielded to give Twenty five thousand Pounds a Month for the Relief of the Northern Counties, this was given to the King, for he was bound to protect his Subjects : They were his Majesty's Evil Counsellors, and their ill Instruments that were Actors in those Grievances which brought in the Scots. And if his Majesty please to force those who were the Authors of this War, to make fatisfaction, as he might juftly and eafily do, it feems very reasonable that the People might well be excufed from from taking upon them this burthen, be⁴ ing altogether innocent and free from being any Caufes of it.

319

A.P.PENDIX.

When we undertook the Charge of the Army, which cost above 50,000 l. a Month, Was not this given to the King? Was it not his Majesty's Army? Were not all the Commanders under Contract with his Majefty at higher Rates and greater Wages than ordinary? And have not we taken upon us to discharge all the Brotherly affistance of Three hundred thousand Pounds which we gave the Scots? Was it not toward repair of those Damages and Loffes which they received from the King's Ships, and from his Minifters? These three Particulars amount to above Eleven hundred thousand Pounds: Besides, his Majesty hath received by Impoficions upon Merchandife, at least Four hundred thousand Pounds; fo that his Majesty hath had out of the Subjects Purfe fince the Parliament began, one Million and an half; and yet these men can be so impudent, as to tell his Majefty that we have done nothing for him. As to the fecond Branch of this Slander, we acknowledge with much Thankfulness, that his Majesty hath paffed more good Bills to the advantage tage of the Subjects, that have been in many Ages ; but withal we cannot forget that these venemous Counsels did manifest themselves in some endeavours to hinder these good Acts; and for both Houses of Parliament we may with truth and modefty fay thus much. That we have ever been careful not to defire any thing that fould weaken the Crown either in just profit or useful power. The triennial Parliament, for the matter of it, doth not extend to fo much as by Law we ought to have required ; there being two Statutes still in force for a Parliament to be once a Year; and for the manner of it, it is in the King's power, that it shall never take effect, if he by a timely fummons shall prevent any other way of affembling. In the Bill for continuance of this present Parliament, there. feems to be fome reftraint of the Royal Power in diffolving of Parliaments, not to take it out of the Crown, but to fufpend the execution of it for this time and occasion only; which was to necessary for the King's own fecurity, and the publick Peace, that without it we could not have undertaken any of these great charges, but must have left both the Armies to diforder and confusion, and the whole Kingdom

321

Kingdom to blood and rapine. The Starchamber was much more fruitful in oppreffion than in profit, the great fines being for the most part given away, and the rest stalled at long times. The fines of the High Commission were in themselves unjust, and feldom or never came into the King's Purfe. These four Bills are particularly and more fpecially inftanced; in the reft there will not be found fo much as a shadow of prejudice to the Crown. They have fought to diminish our reputation with the people, and to bring them out of love with Parliaments; the afperfions which they have attempt. ed this way, have been fuch as thefe, That we have fpent much time and done little, efpecially in those grievances which concern Religion. That the Parliament is a burthen to the Kingdom by the abundance of Protections, which hinder Juffice and Trade; and by many Subfidies granted, much more heavy than any they former ly endured. To which there is a ready Answer, if the time spent in this Parliament be confidered in relation backward to the long growth and deep root of those grievances, which we have removed, to the powerful Supports of those Delinquents which we have purfued, to the

the great necefficies and other charges of the Commonwealth for which we have provided : or if it be confidered in relation forward, to many advantages which not only the prefent, but future Ages are like to reap by the good Laws and. other proceedings in this Parliament, we doubt not but it will be thought by all indifferent Judgments, that our time hath been much better imployed than in a far greater proportion of time in many former Parliaments put together; and the charges which have been laid upon the. Subject, and the other inconveniences which they have born, will feem very light in respect of the benefit they have. and may receive. And for the matter of Protections, the Parliament is fo fenfible of it, that therein they intend to give them whatfoever eafe may fland with, Honour and Juffice; and are in a way of passing a Bill to give them facisfaction. They have fought by many fubtle practices, to cause jealousies and divisions be twixt us and our brethron of Scatland ; by flandering their proceedings and intentions towards us, and by forret endeavours to inftigate and incenfe them and us one against another. They have had fuch a party of Bilhops and Popilit Lords Yź łd

323

in the Houfe of Peers as hath caufed much opposition and delay in the profecution of Delinquents, hindred the proceeding of divers good Bills passed in the Commons house, concerning the reformation of fundry great abuses and corruptions both in Church and State. They have laboured to feduce and corrupt fome of the Commons house, to draw them into confpiracies and combinations against the liberty of the Parliament : And by their instruments and agents they have attempted to difaffect and discontent his Majefty's Army, and to engage it for the maintenance of their wicked and traiterous defigns, the keeping up of Bishops in votes and functions, and by force to compel the Parliament to order, limit and dispose their proceedings in such manner as might best concur with the intentions of this dangerous and potent faction: And when one mifchievous defign and attempt of theirs to bring on the Army against the Parliament, and the City of London, had been discovered and prevented, they prefently undertook another of the fame damnable nature, with this addition to it, to endeavour to make the Scotifb Army neutral, whilft the English Army which they had laboured to cor. rupt

324

rupt and invenome against us by their falle and flanderous fuggestions, should execute their malice to the fubversion of our Religion, and the diffolution of our Government. Thus they have been continually practifing to difturb the peace, and plotting the destruction even of all the King's Dominions, and have employed their Emissaries and Agents in them all for the promoting of their devillish Defigns, which the vigilancy of those who were well affected hath still discovered and defeated before they were ripe for execution in England and Scotland; only in Ireland which was farther off, they have had time and opportunity to mould and prepare their work, and had brought it to that perfection that they had poffeffed themfelves of that whole Kingdom, totally fubverted the Government of it, rooted out Religion, and destroyed all the Protestants whom the confcience of their duty to God, their King and Countrey would not have permitted to join with them, if by God's wonderful providence their main enterprife upon the City and Caffle of Dublin, had not been detected and prevented upon the very Eve before it should have been executed. Notwithstanding, they have in other parts Y ? of

325

of that Kingdom broken out into open Rebellion, furprized Towns and Caffles, committed Murthers, Rapes and other Villanies, and shaken off all bonds of obedience to his Majesty, and the Laws of the Realm; and in general have kindled fuch a fire, as nothing but God's infinite bleffing upon the Wifdom and endeavours of this State will be able to quench it : And certainly had not God in his great mercy unto this Land discovered and confounded their former defigns, we had been the Prologue to this Tragedy in Ireland, and had by this time been made the lamentable spectacle of mifery and confusion. And now what hope have we but in God? When as the only means of our fublistence, and power of Reformation is under him, in the Parliament : but what can we the Commons without the conjunction of the Houfe of Lords, and what conjunction can we expect there, when the Bishops and Recufant Lords are fo numerous and prevalent, that they are able to crofs and interrupt our best endeavours for Reformation. and by that means give advantage to this malignant party to traduce our proceedings? They infuse into the People, that we mean to abolifh all Church government ment, and leave every man to his own fancy for the fervice and worth p of God, absolving him of that obedience which he owes under God unto his Majesty, whom we know to be intrusted with the Ecclefiaftical Law as well as with the Temporal, to regulate all the Members of the Church of England, by fuch rules of Order and Discipline as are established by Parliament, which is his great Councel . in all Affairs both in Church and State. We confess our intention is, and our endeavours have been to reduce within bounds that exorbitant power which the Prelates have affumed unto themfelves for contrary both to the Word of God and to the Laws of the Land ; to which end we paft the Bill for the removing them from their temporal power and employments, that fo the better they might with Meeknefs apply themfelves to the difcharge of their Functions; which Bill themselves opposed, and were the principal Instruments of croffing it.

And we do here declare, That it is far from our purpole or defire to let loofe the Golden Reins of Difcipline, and Government in the Church, to leave private perfons or particular Congregations to take up what form of Divine Service they Y 4 pleafe; 22-please, for we hold it requisite that there should be throughout the whole Realma. conformity to that Order which the Laws enjoyn, according to the Word of God : and we defire to unburthen the confciences of men, of needless and foperfitious Ceremonies, fupprefs innovations, and take away the monuments of Idolatry. And the better to effect the intended Reformation, we defire there may be a general Synod of the most grave, pious, learned, and judicious Divines of this Illand, affisted with some from foreign parts professing the fame Religion with us, who may confider of all things necessary for the peace and good government of the Church, and represent the results of their confultations unto the Parliament, to be there allowed of and confirmed, and receive the ftamp of authority, thereby to find passage and obedience throughout the Kingdom. They have malicioufly charged us that we intend to deftroy and difcourage Learning; whereas it is our chiefest care and defire to advance it, and to provide a competent maintenance for confcionable and preaching Ministers throughout the Kingdom; which will be a great encouragement to Scholars, and çerțain means want, whereby the meanmeannels, and ignorance, to which a great. part of the Clergy is now fubject, will be prevented. And we intend likewife to reform, and purge the Fountains of. Learning, the two Universities, that the ftreams flowing from thence may be clear and pure, and an honour and comfort to the whole Land. They have strained to blast our proceedings in Parliament, by wrefting the Interpretations of our Orders from their genuine intention. They tell the people that our medling with the power of Episcopacy, hath caufed Sectaries and Conventicles; when Idolatry and Popifh Ceremonies introduced into the Church by the command of the Bishops, have not only debarred the people from thence, but expelled them from the Kingdom. Thus with Elijah we are called by this malignant party the troublers of the State; and still while we endeavour to reform their abuses, they make us the Authors of those mischiefs we fludy to prevent. For the perfecting of the work begun, and removing all future impediments, we conceive these courses will be very effectual, seeing the Religion of the Papists hath fuch Principles as do certainly tend to the deftruction and extirpation of all Protestants when they

328

3·2-9-

they shall have opportunity to effect it.

It is neceffary in the first place to keep them in fuch condition, as that they may not be able to do us any hurt, and for avoiding of fuch connivance and favour as hath heretofore been shewed unto them. That his Majesty be pleased to grant a standing Commission to some choice Men named in Parliament, who may take notice of their increase, their councils and proceedings; and use aff due means by execution of the Laws, to prevent any mischievous defigns against the peace and fafety of this Kingdom. That fome good courfe be taken to discover the counterfeit and falle conformity of Papifts to the Church; by colour whereof Persons very much disaffected to the true Religion have been admitted intoplaces of greatest authority and trust in the Kingdom.

For the better prefervation of the Eaws and Liberties of the Kingdom, that all illegal grievances and exactions be prefented and punished at the Seffions; and Affizes; and that Judges and Juffices be careful to give this in charge to the Grand Jury, and both the Sheriff and Juffices to be sworn to the due execution of the Peti-

Petition of Right and other Laws: That his Majesty be humbly Petitioned by both Houses to employ such Counsellors, Ambassadors, and other Ministers, in managing his bufiness at home and abroad, as the Parliament may have caufe to confide in; without which we cannot give his Majefty fuch fupplies for fupport of his own effate, nor fuch affiftance to the Protestant Party beyond the Sea, as is defired. It may often fall out that the Commons may have just cause to take exceptions at fome men for being Counfellors, and yet not charge those men with Crimes, for there be grounds of diffidence which lie not in proof; there are others which tho they may be proved, yet are not legally criminal. To be a known favourer of Papifts, or to have been very forward in defending or countenancing fome great offenders questioned in Parliament; or to speak contemptuoufly of either Houfes of Parliament, or Parliamentary proceedings; or fuch as are Factors or Agents for any Foreign Prince of another Religion; fuch as are juftly fuspected to get Counsellors places or any other of truft concerning publick employments, for Money : For all these and divers others we may have great reaſon fon to be earnest with his Majesty not to put his great Affairs into fuch hands, though we may be unwilling to proceed against them in any legal way of charge That all Counfellors or impeachment. of State may be fworn to observe those Laws which concern the Subject in his liberty; that they may likewife take an Oath not to receive or give Reward or Penfion from any Foreign Prince, but fuch as they within fome reasonable time 'discover to the Lords of his Majesty's Council: And although they fhould wickedly forfwear themfelves, yet it may herein do good to make them known to be falle and perjur'd to those who employ them, and thereby bring them into as little credit with them as with us. That his Majefty may have cause to be in love with good Counfel and good men, by fhewing him in an humble and dutiful manner, how full of advantage it would be to himfelf, to fee his own Estate setled in a plentiful condition to support his honour, to see his People united in ways of duty to him, and endeavours of the publick good; to see Happiness, Wealth, Peace and Safety derived to his own Kingdom, and procured to his Allies by the influence of his own power and government.

331

332

vernment. That all good courfes may be taken to unite the two Kingdoms of England and Scotland, to be mutually aiding and affifting one another for the common good of the Island and honour To take away all differenof both. ces amongst our selves for matters indifferent in their own nature concerning Religion, and to unite our felves against the common enemies, which are the better enabled by our divisions to deftroy us all, as they hope and have often en-: deavoured. To labour by all offices of friendship to unite the Foreign Churches with us in the fame caufe, and to feek their liberty, fafety, and profperity, as bound thereunto both by charity to them, and by wifdom for our own good. For. by this means our own ftrength fhall be encreased, and by a mutual concurrence to the fame common end, we shall be enabled to procure the good of the whole body of the Protestant Profession. If thefe things may be observed, we doubt not but God will crown this Parliament with fuch fuccefs as shall be the beginning and foundation of more honour and happiness to his Majesty, than ever yet was enjoyed by any of his Royal Predeceffors. Hia

333

His Majesty's Answer to the Petition which accompanied the Declaration presented to him at Hampton Court, Dec. 1. 1641.

E having received from you foon after our return out of Scotland, a long Petition, confifting of many defires of great moment; together with a Declaration of a very unufual nature annexed thereunto ; We had taken fome time to confider of it, as befitted Us in a matter of that configuence; being confident, that your own reason and regard to Us, as well as our express intimation by our Comptroller to that purpole, would have reftrained you from the publishing of it, till fuch time as you should have received our Answer to it : But. much against our expectation, finding the contrary, that the faid Declaration is already abroad in Print, by directions from your Houle, as appears by the printed Copy : We must let you know, that we are very fensible of the difrespect. Notwithstanding, it is our intention, that no failing on your part, shall make us fail in ours, of giving all due satisfaction to the defires of our People in a Parliamentary way; And therefore we fend you you this Answer to your Petition, referving our felf in point of the Declaration, which we think unparliamentary, and shall take a course to do that which we shall think fit in prudence and honour.

To the Petition we fay, that altho there are divers things in the Preamble of ic, which we are fo far from admitting, that we profess we cannot at all understand them, as, Of a wicked and malignant party prevalent in the Government; Of fome of that party admitted to our Privy Conneil, and to other Employments of truft, and neareft to Us and our Children; Of Endeavours to fow among the People false scandals and im. putations, to blemifb and difgrase the proceedings of the Parliament : All, or any of which, did we know of, we should be as ready to remedy and punish, as you to complain of. That the Prayers of your Petition are grounded upon fuch premisses as we must in no wile admir. vet notwithstanding we are pleased to give this Answer to you.

To the first, concerning Religion, confishing of several branches. We fay, That for the preferving the peace and fafety of this Kingdom from the designs of the Popish party, we have, and will still con-

Digitized by Google

cur

cur with all the just defires of our people in a Parliamentary way. That for the depriving of the Bishops of their Votes in Parliament, We would have you confider, that their right is grounded upon the fundamental Law of the Kingdom, and conftitution of Parliament. This we would have you confider; but fince you defire our concurrence herein in a Parliamentary way, we will give no further answer at this time.

As for the abridging of the inordinate power of the Clergy, we conceive that the taking away of the High-Commission Court hath well moderated that; but if there continue any Usurpations, or Excession their Jurisdictions, we therein neither have nor will protect them.

Unto that Claufe which concerneth Corruptions (as you ftile them) in Religion, in Church Government, and in Difcipline, and the removing of fuch unneceffary Ceremonies as weak Confciences might cheque at; That for any illegal Innovations, which may have crept in, we fhall willingly concur in the removal of them. That if our Parliament fhall advife us to call a National Synod, which may duly examine fuch Ceremonies as give just caufe of offence to any, we shall take it into confideration, and apply our felf to give due fatisfaction therein : But we are very forry to hear in fuch general terms, Corruption in Religion objected, fince we are perfwaded in our Confeience that no Chu ch can be found upon the earth that professeth the true Religion with more purity of Do-ctrine than the Church of England doth, nor where the Government and Discipline are joyntly more beautified, and free from Superstition, than as they are here eltablish'd by Law; which (by the grace of God) we will with conftancy maintain (while we live) in their Parity and Glory, not only against all Invalions of Popery, but also from the irreverence of thole many Schilmaticks and Separatifis. wherewith of late this Kingdom and this City abounds, to the great diffeonour and hazard both of Church and State; for the suppression of whom we require your timely aid and active affistance.

To the fecond prayer of the Petition, concerning the removal and choice of Counfellors, we know not any of our Council to whom the Character fet forth in the Petition can belong. That by thole whom we had exposed to tryal, we have already given you fufficient teltimony, Z inat that there is no man fo near unto us in place or affection, whom we will not leave to the Juftice of the Law, if you fhall bring a particular charge, and fufficient proofs against him; and of this we do again affure you: but in the mean time we wish you to forbear fuch general aspersions as may reflect upon all our Council, fince you name none in particular.

That for the choice of our Counfellors and Ministers of State, it were to debar us that natural liberty all Freemen have; and as it is the undoubted right of the Crown of England, to call fuch perfons to our Secret Councils, to publick employment, and our particular fervice, as we shall think fit, fo we are, and ever shall be very careful to make election of such perfons in those places of trust, as shall have given good testimonies of their abilities and integrity, and against whom there can be no just cause of exception, whereon reasonably to ground a diffidence; and to choices of this nature, we assure you that the mediation of the nearess thereof, to proceed from your much care and love; And likewife that it may be a Refolution very fit for us to take; but whether it be reasonable to declare Refolutions of that nature before the events of a War be feen, that we much doubt of. Howfoever, we cannot but thank you for this care, and your chearful engagement for the suppression of that Rebellion; upon the speedy effecting whereof, the glory of God in the Protestant Profession, the fastery of the British there, our honour, and that of the Nation fo much depends; all the Interests of this Kingdom being fo involved in that bufinels, we cannot but quicken your affections therein, and shall defire you to frame your Councils, and to give fuch expedition to the Work, as the nature thereof. and the preffures in point of time require, and whereof you are put in mind by the daily infolence and encrease of those Rebels.

To the third Prayer of your Petition, concerning Ireland, we understand your defire of nor alienating the forfested Lands thereof.

For Conclusion, your promife to apply your felves to fuch courfes as may fupport our Royal Effate with Honour and Plenty at home, and with Power and Reputation abroad, is that which we have ever promifed our felf, both from your Loyalties and Affections, and alfo Z 2 for for what we have already done, and fhall daily go adding unto for the comfort and happiness of our People.

His Majefty's Declaration to all his lovin Subjects. Publified with the adviced His Privy Council.

Lthough we do not believe that ou • House of Commons intended, b their Remonstrance of the State the Kingdom, to put us to any Apolo gy either for our past or present Actions Notwithstanding, fince thev thought it fo very neceffary (upon the Observation of the prefent Distemper) publish the fame, for the farisfaction all our loving Subjects, We have thoug it very fuitable to the Duty of our pla (with which God hath trusted us) to our part to fo good a work ; in which a shall not think it below our Kingly di nity to descend to any particular, whi may compose and settle the Affections our meanest Subjects; fince we are confcious to our felf of fuch upright I rentions and Endeavours, and only fuch (for which we give God thanks) the peace and happiness of our Kingdo in which the profperity of our Subjects must be included, that we wilh from our heart, that even our most fecret thoughts were published to their view and examination. Though we must confess we cannot but be very forry in this conjuncture of time (when the unhappiness of this Kingdom is so generally understood abroad) there should be such a necessify of publishing so many particulars, from which, we pray, no inconveniences may ensure that were not intended.

ΑΡΡΕΝDΙΧ

We shall in few words pass over that part of the Narrative, wherein the Milfortunes of this Kingdom from our first entring to the Crown, to the beginning of this Parliament, are remembred in fo fensible expressions; And that other which acknowledgeth the many good Laws passed by our Grace and Favour this Parliament for the Security of our people; Of which we shall only fay thus much, That as we have not refused to pals any Bill prefented to us by our Parliament, for redrefs of those Grievances mentioned in the Remonstrance, fo we have not had a greater Motive for the passing of those Laws than our own Refolution (grounded upon our Observation, and understanding the State of our King-Ζı dom)

341

dom) to have free'd our Subjects for the future, from those Pressures which were grievous to them, if those Laws had not been propounded; which therefore we shall as inviolably maintain, as we look to have our own Rights preferved; not doubting but all our loving subjects will look on those Remedies. with that full gratitude and affection, that even the memory of what they had formerly undergone by the Accidents and Neceffities of those times, will not be unpleasant to them : And poffibly in a pious fence of God's bleffing upon this Nation (how little share soever we shall have of the acknowledgement) they will confess they have enjoyed a great measure of happiness (even the last sixteen Years) both in peace and plenty not only comparatively in refpect of their Neighbours, but even of those times which were justly accounted Fortunate.

The Fears and Jealoufies which may make fome imprefion in the minds of our People, we will fuppole may be of two forts; either for Religion, or Liberty, and their Civil Interests. The fears for Religion may haply be, not only as ours here established may be invaded by the Romifb party, but as it is accompan ie d ed with fome Ceremonies, at which fome tender Confciences really are, or pretend to be fcandalized; for of any other which have been ufed without any legal Warrant or Injunction, and already are, or fpeedily may be abolished, 'we shall not fpeak.

Concerning Religion, as there may be any fuspicion of favour or Inclination to the Papists, we are willing to declare to all the World, That as we have been from our Childhood brought up in, and practifed the Religion now established in this Kingdom, fo it is well known, we have (not contented fimply with the Principles of our Education) given a good proportion of our time and pains, to the examination of the grounds of this Religion, as it is different from that of Rome; and are from our Soul fo fully fatisfied and affured, that it is the most pure and agreeable to the Sacred Word of God, of any Religion now practifed in the Christian World; that as we believe we can maintain the fame by unanfwerable Reasons, so we hope we should readily feal to it by the effusion of our Blood, if it pleas'd God to call us to that facrifice. And therefore nothing can be fo acceptable unto us, as any proposition which may Z 4 contricontribute to the advancement of it here, or the propagation of it abroad; being the only means to draw down a bleffing from God upon our felves, and this Nation. And we have been extremely unfortunate, if this profeffion of ours be wanting to our People : our conftant practice in our own Perfon, having always been (without oftentation) as much to the evidence of our care and duty herein, as we could poffibly tell how to express.

For differences amongst our selves, for matters indifferent in their own nature. concerning Religion, we shall, in tendernefs to any number of our loving Subjects, very willingly comply with the advice of our Parliament; that fome Law may be made for the exemptions of tender Consciences from punishment, or profecution for fuch Ceremonies, and in fuch cafes which by the judgment of most men, are held to be matters indifferent, and of fome to be abfolutely unlawful. Provided that this eafe be attempted, and purfued with that modefty, temper and submission, that in the mean time the peace and quiet of the Kingdom be pot disturbed, the decency, and comelinels of God's Service discountenanced, nor the pious, faber, and devout actions of

Digitized by Google

344

of those Reverend Persons, who were the first favourers in the bleffed Reformation, or of that time, be scandal'd and defamed. For we cannot without grief of heart, and without fome tax upon our Self, and our Ministers for the not execution of our Laws, look upon the bold. Licenfe of fome men, in Printing of Pamphlets, in Preaching and Printing of Sermons, so full of bitterness and malice against the present Government, against the Laws effablished ; fo full of Sedition against our Self, and the peace of the Kingdom; that we are many times amazed to confider by what Eyes thefe things are feen, and by what Ears they are heard : And therefore we have good cause to command, as we have done, and hereby do, all our Judges and Minifters of Juffice, Our Attorney and Solicitor General, and the reft of our learned Council, to proceed with all fpeed against fuch, and their Abettors, who either by writing, or words, have so boldly and malicioully violated the Laws, difturbed the peace of the Common-wealth; and as much as in them lies, fhaken the very foundation upon which the Peace and Happiness is founded and conftituted. And we doubt not but all our our loving Subjects, will be very fenfible that this bufy, virulent demeanour is a fit Prologue to nothing but confution; and if not very feafonably punished and prevented will not only be a blemiss to that wholefome accommodation we intend, but an unspeakable feandal and imputation, even upon the profession and Religion of this our Kingdom of England.

Concerning the Civil Liberties and Interefts of our Subjects, we fhall need to fay the lefs, having erected fo many lafting Monuments of our Princely and Fatherly care of our People, in those many excellent Laws paffed by us this Parliament, which in truth (with very much content to our Self) we conceive to be fo large and ample, that very many fober Men have very little left to with for.

We understood well the Right, and pretences of Right, we departed from in the confenting to the Bills of the Trienni al Parliament, for the continuance of this prefent Parliament, and in the preamble to the Bill of Tunnage and Poundage; the matter of which having begot fo many disturbances in late Parliaments, we are willing to remove, that no interest of ours might hereafter break that corre-

correspondence; abundantly contenting our Self with an Affurance (which we ftill have) that we should be repaired and fupplied by a just proportion of confidence, bounty and obedience of our people. In the Bills for the taking away the High-Commission, and Star-Chamber Courts, we believed we had given that real Satisfaction, that all jealousies and apprehensions of Arbitrary preffures under the Civil or Ecclesiastical State, would easily have been abandoned, especially when they faw all possible doubts secured by the Visitation of a triennial Parliament.

Thefe, and others of no mean confideration, we had rather should be valued in the hearts and affections of our people, than in any mention of our own; not doubting, but as we have taken all these occasions to render their condition most comfortable and happy, fo they will always in a grateful and dutiful relation, . be ready with equal tenderness and alacrity, to advance our Rights, and preferve our Honour, upon which their own fecurity and fubfiftence fo much depends. And we will be fo careful, that no particular shall be presented unto us for the compleating and effablishing that fecurity, to which we will not with the fame fame readinels contribute our best affistance.

348

If these resolutions be the effects of our prefent Councils, (and we take God to witnefs that they are fuch, and that all our loving Subjects may confidently expect the benefit of them from us) certainly no ill defign upon the Publick can accompany such Resolutions; neither will there be greater caule of fulpicion of any Persons preferred by us to degrees of Honour, and Places of trust and employment fince this Parliament. And we must confess, that among our misfortunes, we reckon it not the least, that having not retained in our Service, nor protected any one perfon, against whom our Parliament hath excepted during the whole fitting of it, and having in all that time scarce vouchfafed to any man an instance of our Grace and Favour, but to fach . who were under fuch eminent characters of Estimation amongst our People, there should to foon be any mil-understanding or jealoufy of their fidelity and uprightnels; especially in a time when we take all occasions to declare, That we conceive our felf only capable of being ferved by honeft Men, and in honeft ways. However, if in truth we have been mistaken in fuch fuch our election, the particular shall be no fooner discovered to us, either by our own observation, or other certain information, than we will leave them to publick Justice under the marks of our displeasure.

If notwithstanding this, any malignant party shall take heart, and be willing to facrifice the Peace and Happinefs of their Countrey to their own finister ends and ambitions, under what pretence of Religion and Confcience foever. If they shall endeavour to leffen our Reputation and Interest, and to weaken our lawful Power and Authority with our good Subjects; if they shall go about by discountenancing the present Laws to loofen the Bonds of Government, that all diforder and confusion may break in upon us, we doubt not but God in his good time will discover them unto us, and the Wifdom and Courage of our High Court of Parliament join with us in their suppression and punishment.

Having now faid all that we can to exprefs the clearnefs and uprightnefs of our Intentions to our People, and done all we can to manifeft those Intentions, we cannot but confidently believe all our good Subjects will acknowledge our part to be fully fully performed, both in deeds past, and present Refolutions, to do whatsoever with Justice may be required of us; and that their quiet and prosperity depends now wholly upon themselves, and is in their own power, by yielding all obedience and due reverence to the Law, which is the inheritance of every Subject, and the only (ecurity he can have for his Life, Liberty, or Estate; and the which being neglected or dif-esteemed (under what specious (bews soever) a very great measure of infelicity, if not irreparable confusion must without doubt fall upon them. And we doubt not it will be the most acceptable Declaration a King can make to his Subjects, That for our part we are refolved not only duly to observe the Laws our Self, but to maintain them against what opposition foever, though with the hazard of our Being.

And our hope is, that not only the Loyalty and good Affections of all our loving Subjects, will concur with us in the conftant preferving a good underftanding between us and our people, but at this time their own and our intereft, and compassion of the lamentable condition of our poor Protestant Subjects in Ireland, will invite them to a fair intelligence gence and unity amongst themselves, that fo we may with one heart intend the relieving and recovering that unhappy Kingdom, where those barbarous Re-bels practice such inhuman and unheardof Outrages upon our miserable people, that no Christian Ear can hear without horror, nor story parallel. And as we look upon this as the greatest affliction it hath pleased God to lay upon us, fo our unhappinels is encreafed, in that by the diftempers at home, fo early remedies have not been applied to those growing evils, as the expectation and neceffity there requires; though for our part, as we did upon the first notice acquaint our Parliament of Scotland, (where we then were) with that Rebellion, requiring their aid and affistance, and gave like speedy intimation and recommendation to our Parliament here ; fo fince our return hither, we have been forward to do all things which have been proposed to us towards that work, and have lately our Self offered (by a Meffage to our House of Peers, and communicated to our House of Commons) to take upon us the care to raise speedily 10,000 English Voluntiers for that fervice, if the House of Commons shall declare that they will pay them; which which particulars we are (in a manner) necefficated to publifh, fince we are informed that the malice of fome perfons hath whifpered it abroad, That the no fpeedier advancing of this bufinefs hath proceeded from fome want of alacrity in us to this great work; whereas we acknowledge it a high crime againft Almighty God, and inexcufable to our good Subjects of our three Kingdoms, if we did not to the utmoft employ all our powers and faculties to the fpeedieft and moft effectual affiftance and protection of that diftreffed people.

And we fhall now conjure all our good Subjects of what degree foever, by all the Bonds of Love, Duty, or Obedience that are precious to good men, to join with us for the Recovery of the peace of that Kingdom, and the prefervation of the peace of this; to remove all their doubts and fears, which may interrupt their affection to us, and all their jealousies and apprehensions which may lessen their charity to each other; and then (if the fins of this Nation have not prepared an inevitable Judgment for us all) God will yet make us a great and glorious King, over a free and happy people.

NUMB.

NUMB.X.

Memoirs, p. 78.

A Fatal letter of the Marquiss of Montrofs to King Charles I; deliver'd during the Treaty of Uxbrist es

An ORIGINAL.

May it pleak your Sacred Majefty, HE last Dispatch I fint your Majesty, was by my wartby Friend, and your Majesty's brave Servant Sir William Rollock, from Kintore, near Aberdeen, dated the 14th of September last; wherein I acquainted your Majefty with the good Success of your Arms in this Kingdom, and of the Battels the Justice of your Cause has won over your obdur'd Rebel Subjects. Since Sir William Rollock went, I have travers'd all the North of Sco land, up to Argy A's Countrey; who durft not stay my coming, or I bould have given your Majesty a good account of him ere now. But at last I have met with him yesterday to his Coft: Of which your gracious Majesty be pleas'd to receive the following Particu-LATS :

After

A.P.P.E.N.D.I.X.

After 1 had laid waste the whole Countrey of Argyle, and brought off Provisions for my Army of what could be found, I receiv d information, That Argyle was got tozether with a confiderable Army, maile up chiefly of bis own Clan [Family], and Vallals, and Tenants, with others of the Rebels that join d hims; and that he was at Innerlochy, where he expected the Earl of Seaforth, and the Sept [the Family] of the Fraziers, to come up to him with all the Forces they could get together. Upon this Intelligence I departed out of Argyleshire, and march'd through Lorn, Glencow, and Aber, till I came to Lochnels; my defign being to fall upon Argyle, before Scaforth and the Fraziers could join bim. My March was through inacceffible Mountains. where I could have no Guides but Cow berds, and they scarce acquainted with a place but Six Miles from their own babitations. If I had been attack'd but wish one hundred men in some of these Passes, I must have certrainly return'd back, for it would have been impossible to force my way, most of the Passes being fo freight, that Three Men could not march a breaft. I was willing to let the World (ee that Argyle was not the Man bis High land Men believed him to be; and that it was pollible to beat him in his own High-Lands lands. The difficultoft March of all was over the Lochaber Monntains, which we at last for mounted, and came upon the batk of the Bnemy when they least expected sis, having cat of fome Sconts we met about four Miles from Innerlochy. Our Van came within view of them about five a Clock in the Afternoon, and we made a Halt till our Rear was got up, which could not be done till Eight at Night: The Refels took the Alarm, and flood to their Arms as well as we, all Night, which was Moon light, and very clear. There were fome few Skirmifbes between the Rebels and Us all the Night, and with no lofs on our fide, but one Man. By break of day I order'd my Men to be ready to fall on upon the fits Signal; and I understand fince by the Pri fomers, the Rebels did the fame. A little after the Sun was up, both Armies met, and the Rebels fought for some time with great Bravery; the Prime of the Campbells giving the first Onfer, as Men that deferv'a to fight in a better Caufe. Our Men having a Nobler Caufe, did wonders, and came immediately to pulb of Pike, and dint of Sword, after their first firing. The Rebels could not fand it, but after some Refistance at first, began to run; whom we pars ned for Nine Miles together, making a great Raughter ; Aa 2 flanghter; which I would have hindred, if poffible, that I might fave your Majefty's missified Subjects; for well I know your Majesty does not delight in their Blood, but in their returning to their Du'y. There were at least Fifteen bundred kill'd in the Battel, and the Pursuit; among whom there are a great many of the most considerable Gentlemen of the Name of Campbell, and some of them nearly related to the Earl. I have Sav'd and taken Prisoners several of them, that have acknowledg'd to me their fault, and lay all the blame on their Chief. Some Gentlemen of the Low-lands, that had bebav'd them (elves bravely in the Battel, when they faw all lost, fled into the Old Cafle, and upon their Surrender I have treated them honourably, and taken their Parole never to bear Arms against your Majesty. [Here are Six or Seven Lines, that for the Honour of some Families, are better left out than mention'd.] We have of your Majesty's Army about Two hundred - wonnded, but I hope few of them dangerously. I can bear but of four kill'd, and one whom I cannot name to your Majesty, but with grief of Mind, Sir Thomas Ogilvy, & Son of the Earl of Arly's, of whom I writ to your Majesty in my last. He is not yet dead, but they fay he cannot poffibly lve; live; and we give him over for dead. Iour Majesty had never a truer Servant, nor there never was a braver, honester Gentle man. For the rest of the Particulars of this Action, I refer my self to the Bearer, Mr. Hay, whom your Majesty knows already, and therefore I need not recommend him.

359

٩,

Now, Sacred Sir, let me humby intreat your Majesty's Pardon if I presume to write you my poor Thoughts and Opinion about what I heard by a Letter I receiv d from my Friends in the South last Week, as if your Majesty was entring into a Treaty with your Rebel Parliament in England. The Success of your Arms in Scotland does not more rejoice my heart, as that News from England is like to break it. And whatever come of me, I will speak my mind freely to your Majesty; for it's not mine, but your Majesty's Interest I seek. When I had the honour of waiting upon your Ma-jesty last, I told you at full length what I fully understood of the Designs of your Rebel Subjects in both Kingdoms, which I had occasion to know, as much as any one whatforver, being at that time, as they thought, entirely in their Interest. Your Majesty may remember how much you faid you were convinced I was in the right in my opinion Aaz.

of them. I am fure there is nothing fallem out fince, to make your Majesty change your Judgment in all those things I laid before your Majesty at that time. The more your Majesty grants, the more will be ask'd; and I have too much reason to know that they will not reft fatisfied with lefs than making your Majesty a King of Straw. I hope the News I have receiv'd about a Treaty, may be a Mistake; and the rather, that the Letter wherewith the Queen was pleas'd to honour me, dated the 30th of December, mentions no fuch thing. Tet I know not what to make of the Intelligence I received, fince is comes from Sir Robert Spotswood, who writes it with a great Regret ; and it's so wonder, confidering no man living is a more true Subject to your Majesty, than be. Forgive me, Sacred Soveraign, to tell your Majesty, That in my poor Opinion it is unworthy of a King, to treat with Rebel Subjests while they have the Sword in their hands. And though God forbid I should ftint your Majesty's Mercy, yet I must declare the Horror I am in, when I think of a Treaty, while your Majesty and they are in the Field with two Armies; unlefs they disband, and fubmit themfolves entirely to your Majesty's Goodness and Pardon. As to the State of Affairs in this Kingdom. the the bearer will fully inform your Majesty in every particular. And give me leave with all humility to affure your Majesty, That through God's Bleffing I am in the faireft haves of reducing this Kingdom to your Majesty's Obedience. And if the Measures I bave concerted with your other Loyal Subjects, fail me not, which they hardly can, I doubt not but before the End of this Sum mer I shall be able to come to your Majesty's Affistance with a brave Army ; which, back'd with the Justice of your Majesty's Cause, will make the Rebels in England as well as in Scotland, feel the just Rewards of Rebellion. Only give me leave, after I have reduc'd this Countrey to your Majesty's Obedience, and conquer'd from Dan to Beersheba, to fay to your Majesty then, as David's General did to his Master, Come thou thy felf left this Countrey be call'd by my Name : For in all my Actions I aim only at your Majesty's Honour and Interest, as becomes one that is to his last Breath.

358

May it pleafe your Sacred Majefty,

Innerlachy in Lochaber, Feb. 3. 1645. Your Mijefty's moft Humble moft Faithful, and moft Qbedient Subject and Servent, MONTROSS.

A a

NUMB.

NUMB, XI.

Memoirs, P 123.

> The Address of General Monk and bis Officers from Scotland, to the Parliament of England, against Monarchy, upon Richard Cromwell's Abdication.

Right Honourable,

Whitlock's Memoirs, p 679, 680.

H A T a Nation may be born in a day, is a truth which this day's experience witneffeth unto us againft all the dictates of human Reason; and that a glorious Caufe whofe Intereft was laid low (even in the duft) fhould be in one day reftored to its life and luftre, when almost all the Afferters of it had fo manifettly declined it by a defection of many years, cannot be imputed to lefs than the greatest and most powerful manifestation of the Arm of God, that ever this, or former Generations faw, or heard of.

In the fenfe of this (the greatest of our Temporal Mercies) we now come to addrefs to your Honours, as those whose prefence we have so long wanted, that had you staid but a little longer, it might have been left to be enquired what Eng-

England was; we mean, what was become of that People, by whom God for fo many years filled the World with fo much admiration and terror. But though this great Work be (as most justly it ought to be) wonderful in our eyes, yet when we confider its Author, who calls things that are not, as if they were, bringeth down to the Pit, and raifeth up again; we fee that nothing is difficult to Faith, and the Promifes of God are fure and stable, even then, when in the eye of Man no lefs than impossible.

We cannot but acknowledge to our exceeding great forrow and fhame, that our felves (though we hope moft of us, through weakness and frailty, not out of defign) have very much contributed to those Provocations, which have caufed God to depart from our I/rael; and we could heartily with that even amongft those that help to make up your own number, there had not been an helping hand to this fad and deplorable work: But we fee when God's hour is come, and the time of his people's deliverance (even the fet time is at hand) he cometh skipping over all the Mountains of Sin and Unworthiness that we daily cast in the way.

361

We

We are not willing to detain your Honours too long upon this Subject; and therefore befeeching the God of all our Mercies, to heal the backflidings of his people, and not to charge unto their account in this his day of their deliverance, their Miscarriages, whilst they were wandring in dark and llippery places, after the imaginations of their own hearts : we with all humility and affection in the first place congratulate you in this your happy Restoration to the Government of these Nations, which God was pleafed once fo to own in your hands, as to make you both the praise and wonder of the Earth, the glory and rejoycing of his People, and the terror of your Adverfaries; and we acknowledge it a fingular condescension in you, in this day of lo great difficulties, to take upon you fo heavy a burthen. And feeing his late Highnels hath been pleased to manifest fo much felf-denial and love to his Countrey in appearing for the Interest thereof against his own; we humbly intreat that fome speedy care may be raken for him and his family, (together with her Highnels Dowager) that there may be fuch an honourable Provision settled upon them, and fuch other Dignities as are fuitable to the

Richard

Crempell.

the former great Services of that Family to these Nations.

And in the next place we cannot but hambly befeech you, now you have an opportunity, than which a fitter your hearts did never pray for, to finish the work of Reformation that hath been fo long upon the wheel, and met with fo great Obstructions; that you would not heal the wound of the daughter of God's people flightly, but make to fure and lafting provision for both their Christian and Civil Rights, as that both this and future Generations may have caule to rile up, and call you Bleffed, and the blackeft of Defigns may never be able to caft dirt in your faces any more. And as helpful to these two great Concernments, Religion and Liberty, we humbly propose unto vour mature confiderations thele two Defires :

First, that you would be pleased to countenance Godliness and all the fincere professors thereof, encourage an able and laborious Ministry, and fuffer no other Yoak to be imposed upon the Consciences of God's people, than what may be agreeable to the Word of God : and that you would be a terror to all impious, prophane, and licentious people whatfoever. • Second-

Secondly that you would fo vindicate and affert the Native Rights and Liberties of these Nations, in and by the Government of a Free State, that there may not be the voice of an opprefied one in our Land, but that all may enjoy the bleffed fruits of your righteous and peaceable Government. And for the prevention of all poffibility for ambitious Spirits ever to work their ends against you; we humbly defire you to be very careful, as well what perfons you entruft with the management of the Armies and Navies of this Commonwealth, as of the measure of that Power and Authority you depart with to them, or fubstitute in them. Touching the qualifications of the Perfons, we defire they may be truly godly Touching the meaand confcientious. fure of their Authority, that it may be adequate to the nature and being of a Commonwealth. And whilft you are thus pleading, and afferting the Interest of God and his People, you may reft affured with greatest confidence, that we shall appear in your defence, and the vindication of your Authority, against the oppolition of all Arbitrary Powers whatloever.

And to that bleffed and All-powerful God

God, who is able to fpirit you for this great work; you are, and fhall daily be recommended in the prayers of,

Your most loyal and most Obedient Servants,

George Monk. Thomas Read. Ralph Cobbet. Tim. Wilks. Robert Read John Cloberry. Abra. Holmes. Henr. Dorney. Dan. Davifon. Rich Heath. Mi. Richardfom. J. Hubbelthorn. Tho. Johnfon. P. Crifp. He. Brithman. Phil. Watfon. Tho. Dean. Jerem. Smith. Will. Davis. James Right. Jof. Wallinton. Will. Helling. Ethelb. Morgan. Rob. Winter. Jubn Paddon. Anthony Nowers.

The

Digitized by Google

The Form of the Declaration and Bogagement taken by General Monk and his Officers, againft Monarchy, and the Family of the Staarts, at his coming up from Scotland.

Whitlack's Memoirs, P. 684.

A. B. do hereby declave, Chat J do renomice the pretended Citle of Charles Swarr, and the whole Line of the late King James, and of every other perfort as a fingle perfort, pretueding to the Government of these Pations of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and the Dominisms and Cerritories thereunto belonging: And that J will by the grace and affiftance of Aintighty God, be true, faithful and conflant to this Commonwealth, against any King, fingle perfort, and Doule of Peers, and every of them : and hereunto J fubferibe my Pame.

NUMB.

267

King James the IId's promising Speech to the Parliament, May 30. 1685.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Thank you very heartily for the Bill you have prefented me this Day; and I affure you, the Readinefs and Chearfulnefs that hath attended the Difpatch of it, is as acceptable to me as the Bill it felf.

After to happy a beginning, you may believe I would not call upon you unneceffarily for an extraordinary Supply: But when I tell you the Stores of the Navy are extremely exhausted; That the Anticipations upon feveral Branches of the Revenue are great and burthenfome; and the Debts of the King my Brother, to his Servants and Family, are fuch as deferve Compassion; That the Rebellion in Scotland, without putting more Weight upon it than it really deserves, must oblige me to a considerable Expence extraordinary. I am fure fuch Confiderations will move you to give me an Aid to provide for those t hings, things, wherein the Security, the Eafe, and the Happiness of my Government are fo much concern^ad. But above all, I must recommend to you the Care of the Navy, the Strength and Glory of this Nation; That you will put it into fuch a Condition, as will make us confiderable and respected abroad. I cannot express my Concerns upon this occasion more fuitable to my own Thoughts of it, than by affuring you I have a true English Heart, as jealous of the Honour of the Nation as you can be: And I pleafe my felf with the hopes that by God's Blek fing and your Affiftance, I may carry its Reputation yet higher in the World, than ever it has been in the time of any of my Ancestors,

And as I will not call upon you for Supplies, but when they are of publick Use and Advantage, fo I promife you, That what you give me upon such Occasions, shall be managed, with good Husbandry: And I will take care it shall be employed to the Uses for which I ask them.

NUMB,

APPĖNDIX.

N U M B. XIII.

Memoirs p. 164.

Digitized by Google

Two remarkable Letters of a Foreign Minister to their Ambassador in England, relating to King James's preceeding Speech. Translated from the Originals.

Paris, June 29 1685.

Monfieur,

HE Copy of his B. M's Speech to the Parliament, inclos'd in yours of the 9th Instant, S. V. affords sufficient matter of thoughts here. It is of a strain that looks quite contrary to what we expected, or what you your felf in yours of the I ith of the last Month made us believe it would be. The King can scarce believe there is any Change in the Affections of that Printe towards him, and yet knows not what to make of that new manner of ex-preffing himsfelf on so publick an Occasion. If he and his Parliament come to a cordial Trust in one another, it may probably change all the Measures we have been so long concerting, for the Glory of our Monarch, and the Establishment of the Catholick Religion. For my own part, I hope the Accession of a Crown Kaś Bh has not leff: n'd the Zeal that on all occasions appear'd in him, when but Duke of York. Nor will the King's inviolable attachment to the Interest of the Duke in the most difficult Emergents, permit him now, when King, to forget his Obligations and Engagements to him. There is better things to be hop'd for, from one that has run so great bazards upon the account of his Religion, and who has so often express d his Resentments of the good turns the King did him in his Brothers's Life time.

Tet it's fit you take all possible care to fearch into the Motives and Advisers of this Speech: And I am commanded to tell yon, That this is one of the greatest pieces of Service you can do his Majesty in this Juncture. There are not wanting fome here that would attribute it to a Change in the King of England's Inclinations, and they pretend to have Hints of it from some about his Person; What trath is in this Suggestion, you are to spare nothing to find out. If the Parliament come once to fettle a Revenue upon bim. Juch as may put him out of our Reverence, your Business there will be the more difficult to manage ; for doubtless be must have ambition, and likewise a defire to please a Nation, who had but an ill opinion of him before: And nothing can be more more taking with them, than a breach with us. It will be strange indeed, if in the Death of King Charles, France has changed for the worse But whatever others sear, I must once more confess for my self. That I am of the same opinion I was always of, even that we must necessarily gain by the. Change. Your Bills are sent this Post. Nothing can be more carnestly recommended to you in his Majesty's Name, than a narrow Enquiry into this Affair, by

À P P È N D I X.

Monfieur,

Tour most humble Servant.

The other runs thus:

July 8. 1685.

Monsieur,

T's unlucky that bitherto you have not been able to find out what we are to expet from this Change in England. In yours of the 13th of the last Month, S. V. you seem to call in question that Kings' Inclinations to the Common Cause; and you surprize us with your Fears that he may tome to forget his Obligations to the King. Bb 2 With

With the same Post we receiv'd better News from a sure Hand, yet you are to watch as narrowly as if your Fears were well grounded. There is great matter in dependance, with relation to the Edict of Nants, which must not be declar'd, till that King's Inclinations be fully known. And yet there is nothing in the world the King defires more eagerly to see done than it, if once it might by done fafely. Receive inclos d an Answer to every one of your Queries, which make use of as occasion offers. Only the last is referr d to your own discretion, it depending entirely upon your own knowledge of the Person: If he can be brought in, it will be a notable piece of Service. Much may be known, by enquiring exactly how the Prince of Orange stands in the King's Affections, and how the Ministers are affected towards him. For the Hollanders in general, he seem'd on all occasions neither to love nor fear them; nothing has fallen out of late to alter his mind. On Friday, Monsteur Less. comes off, who is to fbew you his Dispatches, and yon are to act in concert with him. I am,

NUMB.

NUMB. XIV.

Some Paffages out of the Duke of Mon- P. 371. mouth's Pocket-Book, that was feiz⁹d about him in the Weft.

An ORIGINAL.

L Came to me at Eleven at Night from 29, Told me 29 could never Octob, be brought to believe I knew any thing of 13. that part of the Plot that concern'd Rye-Houle; but as things went, he must behave himself as if he did believe it, for some reasons that might be for my Advantage. L. desir'd me to write to 29, which I zefus'd; but asterwards told me 29 expected it: And I promis'd to write to morrow, if he could call for the Letter, at S. L. shew'd a great concern for me, and I believe him funcere; though 3 is of another mind.

L. came as he promis'd, and receiv'd the Letter from 3 seal'd, refusing to read it himself, though I had left it open with S. for that purpose.

L. came to me at S. with a Line or two from 29 very kind, a [suring me be believ'd every word in my Letter to be true; and advis d me to keep bid, till be bad an opportunity to express bis belief of it some other Bb 3 way,

Memoirs,

!4.

20.

, 374

way. L. told me that be was to go out of Town next day; and that 29 would fend 85 to me in a day or two, whom he affured me I might trust.

25.

L. came for me to —, where 29 was with 80. He receiv'd me pretty well; and faid 30 and 50 were the Causes of my Miffortunes, and would ruin me. After some hot words against them, and against S. went away in a good humour.

26.

I went to E....., and was in danger of being discover'd by some of Oglethorp's men, that met me accidentally at the backduor of the Garden.

Nov. 2.

3.

A Letter from 29 to be to morrow at feven at night at S and no body to know it but 80.

He came not, there being an extraordinary Council. But 80 brought me a Copy of 50's intercepted Letter, which made rather for me than against me. Bid me come to morrow at the fame hour, and to fay nothing of the Letter, except 29 spoke of it sirft.

I came and found 29 and L. there. He was very kind, and gave me directions bow to manage my business, and what words I should say to 39. He appointed 80 to come to me every Night till my business was ripe, and promised to send with him directions from time to time.

L. came from 29, and told me my Buffuels nefs should be done to my mind next Wcek; and that Q was my Friend, and had spoke to 39 and D in my behalf; which he said 29 took very kindly, and had expressed (o to her. At parsing he told me there should be nothing required of me but what was both safe and bonourable. But said there must be something done to blind 39.

L. came to me with the Copy of a Letter I was to fign, to pleafe 39. I defired to know in whofe hands it was to be deposited; for I would have it in no hands but 29. He told me it should be fo:, but if 39 ask'd a Copy, it could not well be refus'd. Ireferr'd my felf entirely to 2,'s pleafure.

L. came to me from 29, and order'd me to render my felf to morrow. Cantion'd me to play my part, to avoid Questions, as much as possible, and to seem absolutely converted to 39's Interest. Bad me bear with some words that might seem bars.

I render'd my self. At Night 29 could not dissemble his Satisfaction; press'd my hand; which I remember not he did before, except when I returned from the French Service. 29 acted his part well, and I too. 39 and D. seem'd not ill pleas'd.

29 took me afide, and falling upon the bufinefs of L. R. faid he inclined to have faved him, but was forced to it, otherwife he Bb 4 muft 15.

24.

25,

26.

must have broke with 39 Bid me think no more on t. Coming home, L told me be fear'd 39 began to smell out 29's Carriage. That-----faid to 39 that morning, that all that was done was but (bam.

27. Several told me of the Storm that was brewing. Rumley was with 39, and was feen to come out crying, That he must accuse a man he loved.

Dec. 19 heard further from bim.

- Jan. 5. I received a Letter from L. mark'd by 29 in the Margin to trust entirely in 10; and that in February I should certainly have leave to return. That matters were concerting towards it; and that 39 had no sufpicion, notwithstanding of my reception here.
- Feb. 3. A Letter from L that my business was almost as well as done; but must be so sudden as not to leave room for 39's Party to counterplot. That it is probable be would chuse Scotland rather than Flanders or this Countrey; which was all one to 29.
 - 16. The fad News of bis Death by L. O cruel Fate !

Note, That by 29 and 39, King Charles and the Duke of York feem to be meant. But I know not what to make of the other Numbers and Letters; and must leave the Reader to his own Conjectures.

NUMB.

NUMB XV.

ħ,

Ϊţ

k

12

拙

40

13

b.

1

ĸ

11

Ľ

ų

Memoirs, P. 174.

377

A Letter of the late Duke of Monmouth's ^P writ in his Retirement in Holland, a little before his attempt in the Weft.

An ORIGINAL.

Receiv'd both yours together this morning, and cannot delay you my Answer longer than this Post; though I am afraid it will not please you so much as I heartily wilb it may. I have weigh'd all your Rea-Sons, and every thing that you and my other Friends have writ me upon that Subject; and have done it with the greatest Inclinations to follow your Advice, and without prejudice. Tou may well believe I have had time enough to reflect (ufficiently upon our present state, especially since I came bither. But whatever way I turn my thoughts, I find insuperable difficulties. Pray do not think it an effect of Melancholy, for that was never my greatest fault, when I tell you, That in thefe Three Weeks Retirement in this Place, I have not only look'd back but forward; and the more I confider our present Circumstances, I think them still the more desperate, unless some unforesen Accident fallout, which I cannot divine nor hope for. [Here follow fixteen lines all in Cypher] Fudge

ΑΡΡΕΝDΙΧ

Judge then what we are to expect, in cafe we fould venture upon any fuch Attempt at this time. It's to me a vain Argument, that our Enemies are scarce yet well setled, when you confider, That fear in some. and Ambition in others, have brought them to comply; and that the Parliament being made up for the most part of Members that formerly run our Enemy down; they will be ready to make their Peace as foon as they can, rather than hazard them selves upon an uncertain Bostom. I give you but hints of what, If I had time, I would write you at more length: But that I may not feem obstinate in my own Judgment, or neglect the Advice of my Friends, I will meet you at the Time and Place appointed. But for God's fake, think in the mean time of the Improbabilities that lye naturally in our way; and let us not by ftrugling with our Chains make them streighter and heavier. For my part Ill run the hazard of being thought any thing, rather than a Rafb, Inconfiderate Man. And to sell you my thoughts without difguise, I am now fo much in love with a Retir'd Life, that I am never like to be fond of making a Buffle in the World again, I have much more to fay, but the Poff cannot stay; and I refer the reft till meeting; being entirely Yours. NUMB.

NUMB. XVI.

Memoire, p. 177.

379

King James the IId's Remarkable Speech to the Parliament, after the Duke of Monmouth's Defeat.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Fter the Storm that feem'd to be coming upon us when we parted laft, I am glad to meet you all again in fo great Peace and Quietness; God Al-mighty be praised, by whose Bleffing that Rebellion was supprest. But when I reflect what an Inconfiderable Number of Men began it, and now long they carried it on without any opposition, T hope every body will be convinc'd, That the Militia, which hath hitherto been fo much depended on, is not fufficient for fuch occasions; and that there is nothing but a good Force of well-disciplin'd Troops, in conftant Pay, that can defend us from fuch as either at home or abroad are difpos'd to difturb us. And in truth, my Concern for the Peace and Quiet of my Subjects, as well as for the Safety of the Government, made me think it neceffary to increase the Number to the Proportion portion I have done. This I ow'd as well to the Honour as to the Security of the Nation; whole Reputation was fo infinitely expos'd to all our Neighbours, by having lain open to this late wretched Attempt, that it is not to be repaired without keeping fuch a Body of Men on foot, that none may ever have the thought again, of finding us fo miferably unprovided. It is for the fupport of this great Charge, which is now more than double to what it was, that I ask your Affiftance in giving me a Supply answerable to the Expence it brings along with it. And I cannot doubt but what I have begun, fo much for the Honour and Defence of the Government, will be continued by you with all the Chearfulness and Readinels that is Requilite for a Work of fo great Importance.

Let no man take exceptions that there are fome Officers in the Army, not qualified, according to the late Tefts, for their Employments; The Gentlemen, I must tell you, are most of them well known to me; and having formerly ferv'd with me in feveral Occasions, and always approv'd the Loyalty of their Principles by their Practice, I think them fit now to be employed under me: And will deal plainly plainly with you, That after having had the benefit of their Services in fuch time of need and danger, I will neither expole them to Difgrace, nor my felf to the want of them, if there should be another Rebellion to make them necessary to me.

ΛΡΡΕΝΟΙΧ.

I am afraid fome men may be to wicked to hope and expect that a difference may happen between you and me upon this Occasion : But when you confider what Advaptages have arifen to us in a few Months, by the good understanding we have hitherto had; what wonderful Effects it hath already produced in the Change of the whole Scene of Affairs abroad, fo much more to the Honour of the Nation, and the Figure it ought to make in the World; and that nothing can hinder a further Progress in this way, to all our satisfaction, but Fears and Jealoufies amongst our felves; I will not apprehend that fuch a Misfortune can befal us, as a Division, or but a Coldness between me and you : Nor that any thing can shake you in your Steadiness and Loyalty to me, who by God's Bleffing will ever make you all Returns of Kindness and Protection; with a Refolution to venture even my own Life in the De-.fence of the true Interest of this Kingdom. NUMB

Memoirs, p. 180.

NUMB. XVII.

Some Passages of a Letter from a Foreign Minister to their Ambassador in England, upon the occasion of the King's Speech immediately preceeding; dated November 29. 1685.

Done from the ORIGINAL.

7 E are now out of pain about the King's Intentions. This laft Speech to the Parliament bath sufficiently clear'd all our Doubts, together with what ---- bas writ upon that Subject. It's no more than what I really expected; for I had always a better opinion of him, than to think he could bear tamely the Fetters which Hereticks would endeavour to impose upon him. For the time to come. I hope he will act en Maistre. Tour Conduct there pleases extreamly; and above all, your last Dispatch about what pass'dat your Audience All you have promis'd fball be made good to a Tittle; and it's bop'd that others will be as zealons to keep their Promises to us. The enclos'd you must deliver, but not till you fee the Person has deferv'd it ; for I am more and more persuaded, as well as you, that we cannot be too much upon the referve with him. &c.

NUMB.

383

NUMB. XVIII.

Memoirs, p 189.

The Harangue of the Rector of the Jesuits College at Rome, to the Earl of Voyage d Castlemain, upon his Embassy to the Italie, p. 259, 260.

N tanto ftrepitu Mundi plaudentis gratulantifque Tuo in Urbem adventui, hos eft, immortalibus JACOBI II. Magne Britannia Regis in Catholicam Ecclesiam meritis, Gregorianum hoc Paladis Athenaum, nec debuet tacere. nec potuit. Quamobrem, ego Literaria hujus Universitatis nomine, primo gratulor I N N O. C E N T XI. [elicitati, quod Ip[d regnante, Pontificio accesserit Diademati Augusta bac & Triumphalis Corona; unde i'lud cum Apostolo usurpare jure Meritò valeat, Gaudium meum, & Corona mea. Hunc lætissimum ferre Mortalibus Diem; longissimi ævi spatio distulerunt Superi, tum ut diuturnis Terrarum votis ingentia hæc Cæli dona responderent, tùm ut simul invenirent regnantem in Anglia Jacobum II. Roma Innocentium XI. Gratulor quoque Christiano Orbi, necnon Catholicis Regibus, quod tanto Dominatore Britannorum Seep-· tr A tragerente, tamgrande advenerit, & Ipforum Coronis adversus Christiani nominis bostes munimentum, & Orthodosse Fidei ornamentum. Imminent quippe ab invictiffimi Regis Classibus, tum Lybicis pradonibus, tum Afia & Palestina Littoribus, flammarum procella, magis metuenda quàm Maris. At Tibi, Oceani Regina Magna Britannia, que à nostro olim Orbe divisa, nunc gemini facis commercia Mundi; quid non liceat ominari faustitatis sub tanto Principe! Erige spes, erige vota; nec timeas si maxima, sed nisi maxima. Non libet in die has fauftiffima commemorare qu'am lugubres paffa fueris unius amplius saculi spatios, tote Orbe Terrarum admirante atque ingemiscente, catastrophas. Sed si hac una erat via, qui Jacobus II. Britannia solium ascenderet, propeest at exclamem, tanti fuisfe. Profetto invidebit Tibi Fosteritas non modo prafentium temporum felicitatem, sed & preseritorum Calamitates tam grandi mercede redemptas: eaque, quibus nunc frueris bona, etsi post ingens à Te pretium persilutum Tibi reddita fuerint non à Te coempta arbitrabitur, sed quadam Superum prodigentià dona data. Tibi demum gratulor, prestan. tissime Orator, quod tam faustum diem, & videris in Anglia, & detuleris in Urbem. Nam de Sapientià Tuâ qui per eruditissimos mos libros Harefim profligasti, nibil attinet dicere : nibil de Fortitudine, quâ Carceres ipfos pro Catholicâ Religione tuendâ, non tam pertulisti, guàm decorasti : nil de Prudentiâ, Nobilitate, caterisque dotibus Tuis. Hoc unum universa Tua decora comprehendit, quod ad maximum totius Regni negotium, hoc est ; ut splendidissimâ fungereris apud Innocentium P. M. legatione, Jacobus II. Magna Britannia Rex maximus, te unum elegit, quia unus dignus erat eligi, alter eligere.

384

The Speech of the Rector of the College of Jefuits, to his Excellency Roger Earl of Caftlemain.

SIR;

Y OU must not think this College alone can be mute; and if they could, their Silence must be a Crime, at a Time when this City is filled with Universal Joy, upon the News of your Excellency's Arrival; and all Places resound the Praises of James the Second, and the Obligations the Catholick Church has to that Illustrious Prince. I, in the Name of this Learned Body, do in the first place congratulate thee, Innocent, in whose Reign this flourishing Impe-C c ritt rial Crown is added to the Papal Diadem. It is now your Holiness can properly use that Apostolick Expression, My Joy and my Crown. Heaven bas deferr'd this bappy Day thus long, That so great a Bleffing might not be obtained, without long and anwearied Prayers; and at last effected, when Two such Princes as James and Innocent (bould concur to Reign, the one in England, and the other in Rome. What a support have all Catholick Kings gained by this Acceffion! What an Honour has the Orthodox Faith receiv'd, and what a Defence against the Enemies of the Name of Chrift! The Thunder of his Invincible Fleet will strike greater Terror into the Pyrates of Barbary and the Levant, than Storms and Waves can do. . How highly bleft art Thou, O Britain! Empress of the Ocean; once secluded from the Earth, now Mistress of the Commerce of the Eastern and Western World? What Prosperity may's thou not hope for, under the Reign of so Excellent a Prince ! Raife thy Hopes, Raife thy Courage; and banifb all unjust and unseasonable Fears. Ī have no Inclination at this time to recount those Disasters and Calamities which England has been the Theatre for above an Age , past, to the Grief and Astonishment of the rest of the World. But if Providence has made made these the Steps for James the Second to mount the Throne, I can hardly refrain declaring how cheaply thou hast purchased so great a Bleffing. It is certain, their prefent Happiness will create Envy in succeeding Times ; and however dear it has cost them, Posterity will esteem it more the Bounty and Profusion of Heaven, than a Recompence of their Sufferings In the last place, I must congratulate your Excellency, who has first feen this happy Day at home, and has next been the Messenger to bring it hither. I shall not bere presume to praise your Great Wildom, your Learned Writings against Herefy; that steady Courage you have sbewn in those many Prisons you have honour'd for your Zeal to the True Religion; your prudent Conduct, or your other extraordinary Qualities : All these are summ'd up in one; and your Character is in fine compleated, by the choice your Great Master has made of you, to suftain the most constderable Affair of his Kingdom, The present Glorious Embasy: In which all the World must own Him to be the most competent Judge, and You the fittest Person.

3.85

Ććź

NUMB.

NUMB. XIX.

. Memoirs, p. 208.

> The Anfwer of the Vice-President and Fellows of Magdalen College, Oxon, before the Ecclesiastical Commissioners; Why they could not in Conscience comply with the King's Mandate.

H E faid Vice Prefident, and other deputed Fellows answered and faid, That the faid College of St. Mary Magdalen in Oxon is a Body Corporate, governed by Local Statutes, granted and confirmed to them by his Majefty's Royal Predecessors, King Henry the 6th, for Him and His Heirs and Successors, under the Great Seal of England; which are also fince confirmed by feveral other Letters Patents of others of his Majefty's Royal Predeceffors, under the Great Seal of England. That by the faid Statutes of the College (to the observation of which each Fellow is fworn) it is ordered, That the Person elected President thereof, shall be a Man of good Life and Reputation, approved Understand. ing, and good Temper, Difcreet, Provident, and Circumspect, both in Spiritual and and Temporal Affairs. And at the time of Election of a President, the faid Fellows are bound by the faid Statutes, to take an Oath that they shall nominate none to that Office, but fuch as are, or have been Fellows of the faid College, or of New College in Oxon; or if they are not actually Fellows at that time of Eleation, that they be fuch as have left their Fellowfups in their refpective Colleges upon credible accounts. And when two qualified perfons shall be nominated at the time of Election, by the greater number of all the Fellows, to the faid Office of Prefident; the thirteen Seniors alfofwear that they will Elect one of them, whom in their Confeiences they think most proper and sufficient, most discreet, most useful, and best qualified for the Place ; without any regard to love, hatred, favour, or fear. And every Fellow when he is first admitted into his Fellowship in the faid College, fwears that he will inviolably keep and observe all the Statutes and Ordinances of the College, and every thing therein contained, fo far as does or may concern him, according to the plain, literal, and grammatical fense and meaning thereof, and as much as in him lies will caufe the Cc 3. fame fame to be kept and observed by others; and that he will not procure any Difpenfa-tion contrary to his aforefaid Oath, or any part thereof, nor contrary to the Statutes and Ordinances to which it relates, or any of them ; nor will he endeavour that such Dispensations shall be procured by any other, or others, publickly or privately, directly or indirectly. And if it shall happen that any Dispensa-tion of this fort, of whatsoever Authority it shall be, whether in general or particular, or under what form of Words foever it be granted, that he will neither make use of it, nor in any fort confent That upon Notice of the thereunto. Death of Dr. Clark, Late Prefident of the faid College, the Vice President called a Meeting of the faid Fellows, in order to the appointing a day for the Election of a new Prefident, and the 13th of April was the time prefix'd, with power to prorogue the fame as they should fee cause, till the 15th, beyond which time they could not statutably defer their Election; and in purfuance thereof a Citation, or Premonition, was fix'd upon the Chappel-door of the faid College, fignifying the fame, and by which the absent Fellows were Summoned to repair home, as the Sta-

389

Digitized by Google

Statute in the Cafe requires. And the faid Vice-President, and other deputed Fellows farther fay, That on the 11th of April aforefaid, they received his Majefty's Letters Mandatory, to elect and admit Mr. Anthony Farmer Prefident of the faid College: But forafmuch as the faid Vice-Prefident, and Fellows, apprehended the right of Election to be in them, and believed his Majesty never intended to disposses them of their Rights; And forafmuch as the faid Mr. Farmer had never been Fellow either of Magdalen, or New College in Oxon, and had not those Qualifications which in and by the faid Statutes of the College are required in the Character of a President, as they in their Consciences did, or do verily believe; and in regard that they could not comply with his Majesty's Letter, without the violation of their Oaths, and hazard of their legal Interest and Property, wherewith they are by the Statutes posseffed, and which by their Oaths they are bound to maintain; they reprefented the fame by their humble Petition to his Majesty; And having deferred their Election of a Prefident to the laft day limited by their Statutes, then they proceeded Cc4 to to Election, and having first received the Eucharist, and taken the faid Oaths, as the Statutes enjoyn, to chuse a Person so qualified as is before expressed, they did Elect the Reverend Mr. John Hough, B. D. and one of the Fellows of their College. a Person every way qualified to be President; who has been since confirmed by the Bisshop of Winton their Visitor, as the Statutes of the faid College direct.

And that they might not lye under His Majefty's Difpleafure by their Proceedings, they did on the 19th of April make an humble reprefentation thereof to His Majefty, by his Grace the Duke of Ormond, Chancellor of the Univerfity of Oxon, fetting forth their indifpenfable Obligations to obferve their Founders Statutes.

All which Matters the Vice Prefident and other deputed Fellows, do humbly offer to your Lordships, and pray to be disfinisfied with your Lordship's favour.

Digitized by Google

392

NUMB. XX.

Memoirs, p 210.

393 -

The Petition of the faid Vice President and Fellows, offer'd to King Jaines.

Humbly Sheweth,

Hat upon the 27th of August we receiv'd your Majefty's Letters Mandatory, Dated Angust 14th, requiring us to admit the Right Reverend Father in God Samuel Lord Bishop of Oxon to be our Prefident; and difpenfing with all Statutes and Constitutions to the contrary. It is an unexpreffible Affliction to us, to find our felves reduced to fuch an extremity that either we must disobey Your Majesty's Royal Command, contrary to our own Inclinations, and that constant course of Loyalty which we have shew'd in all instances hitherto upon all occasions whatfoever; or elfe break our Founder's Statutes, and deliberately perjure our felves.

For our Founder hath obliged us under Oath, when we came in Fellows, inviolably to obferve his Statutes; and one Claufe therein injoyns us never to admit, or make use of Dispensation granted granted by any Authority whatfoever, whereby we may be abfolved from the fame. In this Statute for the Election of a President, he commands us upon Oath to Elect fuch a Person into the place of President within 15 days after the vacancy, who either is, or has been Fellow of our own, or New College; Which we reprefented to your Majefty in our humble Petition, fign'd April 9th, wherein we offered our felves ready to Elect any Perfon capable of the fame, whom your Majesty should be pleased to recommend ; and having waited the utmost time limit. ed by our Statutes, and receiv'd no Anfwer to that effect, we did then according to the exigence of our Statutes (having first taken the holy Eucharist, and our feveral Oath to that purpose) nominate and Elect fuch a Person, as we in our Confciences did believe to be every way qualified for that Place: By which Act of ours, we have conveyed all that right to him, which our Founder hath intrufted with us; and it does not lie incour power to admit any other. Our Founder in another Statute obligeth us under the pain of Perjury, a dreadful Anathema, and eternal Damnation, not to fuffer any of his Statutes to be alter'd, infringed, 70 or difpenfed with, and commands us under the fame Sacred Obligations, not to execute any Orders or Decree whatfoever, contrary or repugnant to the faid Statutes; by which faid Statutes and Oaths, we are utterly incapacitated to admit the faid Reverend Father in God to be our Prefident.

May it pleafe your Sacred Majefty, to give us leave to lay this our Cafe, and our felves, with all fubmiffion, at Your Royal Feet, most earnestly befeeching Your Sacred Majesty, to extend to us Your humble Petitioners, the Grace and Tenderness which Your Majesty hath vouchfased to all your other Subjects; and not to believe us guilty of any obstinacy or undutifulness, Crimes which our Souls abhor; but to receive us into Your Majesty's Grace and Favour, the greatest temporal Blessing which our Hearts can wish.

And Your humble Petitioners shall always (as in Duty bound) pray to Almighty God, to bless Your Majesty with a long and happy Reign over us, and afterwards to receive You to an immortal Crown of Glory.

Digitized by Google

NUMB.

Memoirs, p. 227.

> A Copy of a Letter of the Irifh Clergy to King James, in favour of the Earl of Tyrconnel; found among Bishop Tyrrel's Papers in Dublin.

NUMB. XXI.

SIR.

The State of Ireland pr der K. James, by Dr. King, P. 294, 295.

Ince it has pleafed the Almighty Froui-J dence, by placing your Majesty in the Throne of your Ancestors, to give you both Authority and Oscafion of exercifing those Royal Virtues which alone do merit, and would acquire you the Crown to which you were born; We though comprehended in the general Clemency and Indulgence which you extend to the reft of our Fellow Subjects, are nevertheless so remote from your Majesty's Presence, that our Prayers can have no. access to you, but by a Mediator. And fince of all others the Earl of Tyrconnel did first espouse, and chiefly maintain, these Twenty five Years last past, the Cause of your poor oppressed Roman Catholick Clergy, against our many and powerful Adversaries, and is now the only Subject of your Majesty, under whose Fortitude and Popularity in this Kingdom, we dare chearfully fully and with affurance cwn our Loyalty, and affert your Majesty's Interest, Do make it our humble Suit to your Majesty, That you will be pleased to lodge your Authority over us in his Hands, to the Terror of the Factions, and Encouragement of your faithful Subjects here; fince his Dependance on your Majesty is so great, that we doubt not but that they will receive him with such Acclamations as the long captiv'd Israelites did their Redeemer Mordecai. And fince your Majesty in Glory and Power does equal the mighty Ahashuerus, and the Virtue and Beauty of your Queen is as true a Parallel to his ador'd Hefter, we humbly befeech she may be heard as our great Hatroness against that Haman, whose Pride and Ambition of being honoured as his Master, may have hitherto kept us in Slavery. And though we wish none the fate of so dreadful an Example. but rather a timely Penitence and Conversion; we yet humbly crave your Majesty's Protection against all such, if it may confift with your Royal Wildom and Pleasure, to which we with all humility fubmit, in the establishing of the faid Earl of Tyrconnel in Juch Authority here, as may secure us in the Exercise of our Function to the Honour of God, and offering up our Prayers and Sacri-£00

397

APPENDIX

fice for the continuation of your Majesty's long and prosperous Reign over us.

Dublin, the of July, 1685.

Your Majefty's moft Dutiful and Obedient Subjects.

APPENDIX

NUMB. XXII.

Memoirs, p. 137.

Colonel Luttrel's Order, forbidding above Five Protestants meeting any where, &c.

State of Ireland, &c.p. 430, 431.

Digitized by Google

By the Governor of Dublin, June 18.1690.

W Hereas feveral Difaffected Perfons of the Protestant Religion, are of late come to this City of Dublin, and some of them Arm'd with Swords, Pistols, and other Weapons, contrary to his Majesty's express Commands by his Royal Proclamation, bearing Date the 20th day of July, 1689.

I. These are therefore to Will and Require all Men what sever, of the Protestant Religion, now residing or being within the said City of Dublin. or within the Liberties of St. Sepulchre Donnor, or Thomas Court, who are not House-keepers, or have not followed some lawful Vocation therein these Three Months pass, to depart within Twenty four Hours after the Publication bereof out of the said City and Liberties, and repair to their respective Habitations, or usual places of Abode in the Countrey, upon pain of Death, or Imprifonment, and to be farther proceeded against as Contemners of his Majesty's Royal Commands, and as Persons designing the Disturbance of the Publick Peace.

II. And likewise, That all Protestants within the said City and Liberties, not being of his Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council, nor in his Army, or actual Service, shall within the time aforesaid deliver up all their Arms, both Offensive and Defensive, and all their Ammunition, into bis Majesty's Stores in the said City, upon pain of Death.

III. And that no Protestant what soever, do presume at his peril, to walk or go in the Streets, from Ten of the Clock at Night till Five in the Morning, nor at any time when there is an Atarm. In which case all such Persons are required for their Safety, and for the Security of the Publick, to keep within Doors till such an Alarm is over.

IV. And Lastly, For the prevention of Riots and unlawful Assemblies, These are therefore to Will and Require all the faid Protestants, that no greater number of them than Five shall Meet and Converse at any time either in any House within the said City or Liberties, over and above the Family

400

Family of the House; or in the Streets and Fields in and about the same, or elsewhere; Hereby declaring, That all Persons who shall offend against any Clause in this present Order, shall suffer Death, or such other Punishment, as a Court Martial shall think sit.

Dd. NUMB.

NUMB. XXIII.

Memoirs, p. 247.

Memoirs pour fervir

al Historie

de la Paix de Ryfwick par Du

Mont Tom. 2 9 66,67. The French King's Declaration, publish'd at his Camp at Arnheim, to oblige the Hollanders to furrender their Countrey to him, Anno 1672.

De par le Roy.

🗋 🗛 Majesté considerant combien il a plû à 🔊 Dieu de benir ses justes desseins, & faire prosperer les enterprises, qu'il a faites depuis son arrivée à la Campagne; Et voulant traiter avec la derniere douceur les Peuples des Provinces, où elle pourra etendre ses Victoires : & afin de leur faire scaveir ce qu ils auront à faire pour se rendre dignes de ses bontez, sa Majesté a fait declarer, & déclare par la presente, que tous les Habitans des Villes de Hollande, qui se rendront vount airement à son obeisance, & recevront les Troupes, quelle trouvers bon de leur envoyer pour leur sûreté & pour leur defense, seront non seulement traitez aussi favorablement quils pourroient desirer; mais aussi seront maintenus dans tous leurs Privileges & Franchifes, & auront tonte liberté de conscience avec le libre exercice de leur Religion. Mais

APPENDIX.

Mais, au coptraire, que cens qui ne se voudront pas soumettre, de quelque qualité on condition qu'ils soient, tâcheront de resister aux forces de sa Majesté par l'inondation de leurs Digues, ou autrement, seront punis de la derniere rigueur. Et cependant on exertera toutes sortes d'hostilitez contre tous ceux, qui vondront s'opposer aux dessiens de sa Majesté, & lors que les glaces ouvri ront le passe de tous cotez, sa Majesté né donnera aucun Quartier aux Habitans des Villes, mais donnera ordre que leurs biens soient pillez, & leurs maisons brûlées. Fait à l'Armée devant Aernbem ce 24 juin 1672.

Et plus bas,

Signe,

e Tellier

LOUIS

Dđ 3

The

The Declaration.

I IS Majesty confidering bow it has pleas'd God to blefs bis just Defigns, and prosper his Undertakings, fince his Arrival in the Army; and it being his Intention to treat the People over whom he fall extend his Victories, with the highest Clemency; to the intent therefore that they may deferve his great Goodness, his Majesty has caused to be declared, and does by these presents declare, That all the Inba-bitants of the Cities of Holland, who shall voluntarily submit to him, and receive the Troops he (ball fend for their Security and Defence, iball be treated as favourably as they can desire; and shall be maintained in all their Privileges and Immunities, and have Liberty of Conscience, and the Free Exercise of their Religion.

On the contrary, All of whatever Quality and Condition, who [ball refuse to comply with these Offers, and shall refuse to comjesty's Forces, either by the Immudation of their Digues, or otherwise, shall be punished with the utmost Rigor. At present, all Hostilities shall be used against those who oppose oppose his Majesty's Designs; and when the Ise shall open a Passage on all sides, his Majesty will not give any Quarter to the Inhabitants of such Cities, but give Order that their Goods be plundered, and their Houses burnt. Given at the Camp before Arnheim, this 24th of June, 1672.

APPENDIX

Sign'd,

LOUIS

And underneath,

La Telliet.

FINIS.

Books Printed for and Sold by Tim Goodwin.

HE History of Reme, from the Death of Antoninus Pius, to the Death of Severus Alexander. By William Wotten, B. D.

The Conflication and Laws of England confider'd. By W_____ P____y, Elq;

- Miscellanes, The Third Part. Containing, r. An Effay on Popular Difcontents. 2. An Effay upon Health and Long Life. 3. A Defence of the Effay upon Ancient and Modern Learning. With fome other Pieces. By the late Sir William Temple, Bar^c.
- The Compleat Horfeman, or perfect Farrier. Part i. Micovering the fureft Marks of the Beauty, Goodfiels, Faults, and Imperfections of Horfes. The beff Method of Breeding and Backing of Colts. The Art of Shooing with the feveral forts of Shooes, adapted to the various defects of bad Feet, and the prefervation of good. The Art of Riding and Managing the great Horfe, Se. Part 2. contains the Signs and Caules of their Difeafes; with the true Method of Curing them. Written by the Sieur de Selloyfell, Querry to the prefent Frenck King. Abridged from the Folio, done into English, by Sir William Hope. Il-Instrated with feveral Copper Plates.
- A New Voyage to the Leviant; containing an Account of the most remarkable Curiofities in Germany, France, Italy, Moltha, and Turky; with Historical Observations relating to the prefent and ancient State of those Countries By the Sieur du Mont. Done into English, and adorn'd with Figures. Third Edition.
- The Hiftory of the Revolution in Portugal in the Year 1640; or an Account of their Revolt from Spain, and ferting the Crown on the Head of Don John of Braganza, Father to Don Pedro the prefent King, and Katherine Queen Dowager of England: Written in French by the Excellent Pen of the Abbot Vertat; (Author of the Hiftory of the Revolutions in Sueden,) and done into English. Twelves.

Ľiż

Books Printed for T. Goodwin.

Les Parliamentaria; or a Treatife of the Law and Cuftom of the Parliaments of England, By G. P. Efg; 8vo. Memoirs of Denzil Lord Holles, Baron of Ifield in Suffex, from the Year 1641, to 1648. Offere.

- The Roman Hiltory, from the building of the City, to the perfect Settlement of the Empire by Anguffus Cafor; containing the Space of 727 Years; defign'd as well for the understanding of the Roman Authors; as the Roman Affairs. The Fourth Edition, carefully revis'd, and much improv'd: By Lamrence Echard, A. M. of Christ-College in Cambridge. Vol. I. Offavo.
- The Roman Hiftory, from the Settlement of the Empire by Augustus Cafar to the Removal of the Imperial Seat by Conflantine the Great, containing the Space of 355 Years. Vol.II.For the Use of his Highness the Duke of Glocefler. The 2d Edition. By Lawrence Echard, A. M. 8ve.
- Politica Sacra & Givilis : Or a model of Civil and Ecclefiaftical Government; wherein, befides the Pofitive Doctrine concerning State and Church in general, are debated the principal Controversies of the Times, concerning the Conflicution of the State and Church of England, tending to Righteousnels, Truth, and Peace. By George Lawfon, Rector of More in the County of Salop. The Second Edition. Offarue.
- An Account of Denmark, as it was in the Year 1692. The Third Edition. Offerve.
- An Account of Sueden : Together with an Extract Hiflory of that Kingdom. Offavo.
- Of Wifdom. Three Books. Written Originally in French by the Sieur de Charren. With an Account of the Author: Made English by George Stanhope, D. D. late Fellow of King's-College in Cambridge: From the best Edition, Corrected and Enlarged by the Author a little before his Death In two Volumes. Offavo.
- A new Voyage to Italy: With curious Observations on feveral other Countries; as Grimany, Switzerland, Sovoy, Geneve, Handers, and Helland. Together with ufeful Inftructions for these who shall travel chither. Done oue of French. The Second Edition, enlarged above one Third, and entriched with several New Figures. By Maximilian Mission, Gent. In Two Volumes Offere. A Compleat Body of Chirurgical Operations, containing the whole Practice of Surgery : With Observaticns and Remarks on each Cafe. Amongk which are inferted the feveral ways of delivering Women in Natural and Unnatural Labours. The whole illustrated with Copper Plates, explaining the feveral Bandages, Sutures, and divers uteful Inftruments. By M de la Vanguion, M. D. and Intendant of the Royal Hospitals about Paris. Faithfully done into English. Offeres.

ing

Books Printed for T. Goodwin,

A Relation of a Voyage made in the Years 1695, 1696, 1697, on the Goafts of Africs, Streights of Magellan, Brezil, Corenno, and the Antilles, by a Squadron of French Men of War, under the Command of M. de Gennes. By the Sieur Froger, Volunteer-Engineer, on Board the English Falcon Illustrated with divers ftrange Figures, drawn to the Life. Offsvo.

Travels into divers parts of Europe and Asia, undertaken by the French King's Order, to discover a new way by Land into China: Containing many curious Remarks in Natural Philosophy, Geography, Hydrography, and History. Together with a Description of Great Tartary, and of the different People who inhabit there. By Father Auril, of the Order of the Jesuits. Done out of French. To which is added a Supplement extracted from Haklasis and Purchas, giving an Account of several Journeys over Land from Russia, and the Mogul's Country, to China. Together with the Roads and Distances of Places. Twelves.

- A Compendium of Universal History, from the Begianing of the World, to the Reign of the Emperor Charles the Great. Written Originally in Latin by Monsteur Le Clerc. Done into English. Offerue.
- A Political Effay; or a Summary Review of the Kings and Government of England fince the Norman Conqueft By W. P_____, Efq Ottavo.
- A Defence of the Thirty Nine Articles of the Church of England; Written in Latin by J. Ellis, S.T.D. Now done into Englifb. To which are added Lambeth Articles. Together with the Judgment of Bilhop Andrews, Dr. Overall, and other Eminent and Learned Mon upon them: Twelves.

Bellomira, or the Miltrefs: A Comedy: As it is Acted by their Majefties Servants. Written by the Honourable Six Charles Sedley, Baronet.

•

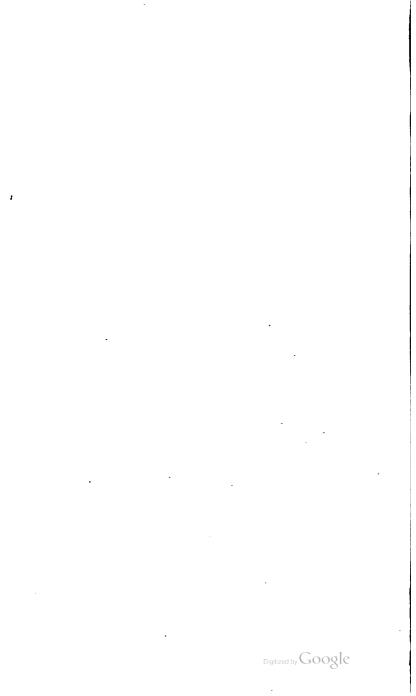

-

.

.

.

•

١

ī

١

ī

ł

•

۱